Agencies Forego Right to Borrow New Deal Billion

HOLC Is Affected Most by Decision

FCA and RFC Involved; Amounts Congress Set Held Not Needed.

By Felix Bruner.

Cancellation of more than $1,000,000,000 in Congressional authorizations to Government lending agencies was agreed upon yesterday at a conference between President Roosevelt and the heads of these agencies.

The cancellation will mean merely that the agencies will not borrow funds, either directly or through the Treasury, up to the amounts authorized by Congress, in instances where it has been found that the authorizations exceed needs.

Giving the Home Owners Loan Corporation as an example, President Roosevelt pointed out that this agency ceased to receive applications from distressed home owners last June, that most of the applications have been passed upon and that it has been found unnecessary to borrow up to the limit fixed by Congress. He said the portion of the HOLC authorization which will be canceled will amount to between $500,000,000 and $1,000,000,000.

FCA and RFC Involved.

Other agencies specifically mentioned by the President were the Farm Credit Administration and the Reconstruction Finance Corporation. These agencies are financed indirectly through the Treasury, while the HOLC borrows directly from the public through the issuance of bonds. The Commodity Credit Corporation also is expected to be included.

President Roosevelt said he would follow up his meeting with the heads of lending agencies with a conference Thursday of heads of "spending" agencies. These include every department and agency of the Government. He said the spending agency conference will be for the purpose of determining the possible amounts of expenditures during the next few months.

No special significance was attached to the announcement of cancellation of authorizations, although assurance that the Government will not borrow $1,000,000,000 which Congress has authorized it to borrow may have a somewhat settling effect on the present uncertain financial situation. Cancellation of authorizations will not preclude unlimited borrowing for purposes other than those specifically included in the authorizations.

Explaining the cancellation move, Mr. Roosevelt said the White House conference was called for a periodic check-up of the agencies. He discouraged suggestions by reporters that it was a "tightening of the purse strings" or a "saving." He said that the conference took up certain authorizations made by Congress during the last three years for potential obligations, to determine whether some of them are needed. He said the conference found that borrowing of more than $1,000,000,000 which will not be used had been authorized.

Purposes "Obsolete."

Some of the purposes for which the RFC has been authorized to borrow from the Treasury have become obsolete, the President explained.

President Roosevelt said the cleanest way of disposing of the unneeded borrowing power would be for Congress to repeal the authorizations, but he added that the same result could be accomplished merely by his writing a letter to the agency involved.

Asked whether the action meant that the emergency ha been passed, the President replied that he was simply following the usual process and that the agencies had reached the point where cancella-

Sled, Trolley, Taxi Used to Race Stork

Baltimore, Feb. 4 (AP).—A distraught husband, two trolley motormen, a boy's sled, the trolley and a taxicab combined here today to get an expectant mother to a hospital.

The husband's automobile would not start, so he hailed the passing trolley and enlisted the aid of its crew. Together, the three men placed the mother on a boy's sled and carried her to the car.

The car, an empty, headed for the nearest car barn and parked out of the icy winds.

The husband dashed into the street to find a cab and the journey was completed in that vehicle. The party reached the hospital in time.

Senate Orders Immediate End Of 3 Farm Acts

Cotton, Tobacco, Potato Law Repeal Clears Way for New Plan.

Clearing the slate for action on the Administration's revised farm plans, the Senate yesterday without a dissenting vote called for immediate repeal of the last remaining AAA act appendages—the Bankhead cotton control law, the Kerr-Smith tobacco act and the Warren potato law.

So swiftly did it move that the Supreme Court, which had scheduled hearings yesterday on a Georgia suit to invalidate the Bankhead legislation, postponed action for a month, giving rise to predictions that the suit will be dismissed.

The Senate, meanwhile, held up the Administration's new farm program pending return of the measure's co-author, Senator Bankhead, of Alabama, and a meeting of the Agriculture Committee this morning on a proposal to substitute the modified House bill for the drastic Senate draft of the plan.

Amendment Considered.

Immediate consideration of the bill yesterday was said to have been delayed by Bankhead's illness, but it was learned that a movement is gaining momentum in the Senate to amend the measure to conform with changes written into the measure by the House Agriculture Committee.

This proposal this morning will be put up to the Senate Agriculture Committee, which had previously approved the Bankhead draft. The Senate will not convene until tomorrow, when it will consider the broad farm picture.

While the Senate yesterday was sweeping the cotton, tobacco and potato control en route toward oblivion, carrying out a Presidential request messaged to Congress Monday, Representative Allen T. Treadway (Republican), of Massachusetts, rose in the House to repeat charges that Secretary of Agriculture Wallace had unjustly assailed the Supreme Court and "ought to be impeached."

Fletcher Cites Confusion.

Chairman Henry P. Fletcher, of the Republican national committee, issued a statement terming the President's request for repeal of the three farm measures "significant of the confusion now reigning in the New Deal." Fletcher said if the President had listened to "competent" lawyers "retracing" steps would not be necessary, but added:

"It is encouraging to discover, even belatedly, that the Chief Executive is willing to abide by the decisions of the Supreme Court."

Coincident with Treadway's criticism of Wallace came comment from George Wharton Pepper, former Republican Senator from Penn-

Airport Here Threatened With Closure

U. S. Will Retaliate by Closing Field for Public Safety.

By James D. Secrest.

The Arlington County board yesterday appeared to be the only obstacle to the closing of Military road adjacent to Washington Airport, because of the hazard to both planes and motor vehicles. The House Military Affairs Committee announced it would seek a solution to the problem which threatens the airport closing February 15.

Chairman McSwain of the House Military Affairs Committee announced public hearings will begin at 10 o'clock Friday morning on his resolution to order the War Department to close the road.

His announcement came after the committee had been called together in special session as a result of three developments relative to the airport. These were:

The War Department issued a statement disclaiming responsibility for any accident that may occur on Military road because of the "unauthorized and unlawful use" of the highway by the airport.

Samuel J. Solomon, airport manager, wrote to Secretary of Commerce Roper that on February 15 he will remove the guard patrol which the airport employed to warn motorists of landing aircraft.

Assistant Secretary of Commerce Johnson thereupon repeated a warning that if the guard patrol is withdrawn the Bureau of Aeronautics will close the airport for transport operations because of the danger to planes and automobiles.

Arlington's Objection.

The consensus of those concerned was that the only obstacle to the closing of Military road and the elimination of the hazard is the objection of the Arlington County board. The War Department reiterated that it no longer needs the highway, the Commerce Department calls it a grave hazard, and the Washington Airport wants to close it to be able to broaden its flying field.

Arlington County's objections would not seriously hinder the passage of the McSwain resolution were it not for the support Representative Smith (Democrat), of Virginia, is giving the county. Last session he successfully blocked the resolution because neither the Government nor the airport would agree to build a substitute highway.

Yesterday, upon being informed of the hearing, he said, "I will do whatever the Arlington County board wants. The question is up to them as I have no personal interest in the matter."

There was no indication that the Arlington board had altered the view it held last year that if the road is to be closed a substitute highway must be provided for the convenience of Arlington County residents who use Military road driving to and from Washington.

Government and airport officials contend Mount Vernon Memorial boulevard and several roads on the other side of the airport give the Arlington residents sufficient highways between their homes and the Capital.

Must Act Promptly.

"We want to save the Washington Airport for the people of Washington," McSwain said in explaining the reason for the hearing. "If we don't act quickly, the airport will certainly be closed and the residents of Washington as well as members of Congress will be deprived of the air transportation service now available."

Representatives of the War, Commerce, and Agriculture Departments, Arlington County officials, and Representative Smith will be invited to appear before the Military Affairs Committee, he said, to offer suggestions.

McSwain intimated that unless Arlington County agrees to a reasonable plan that his resolution may

Borah Announces Bid For G. O. P. Nomination

Idaho Senator, 70, Will Enter Presidential Primary in Ohio.

By Robert C. Albright.

Senator William Edgar Borah, of Idaho, 70-year-old Progressive Republican and dean of the United States Senate, yesterday tossed his black sombrero into the middle of the Republican Presidential ring with a formal announcement that he will seek the G. O. P. nomination.

This definite statement came as an anticlimax to four months of activity by his friends in States ranging from New York to Oregon, a tedious series of conferences in his Washington office, vague statements and militant speeches, all veiling a bid for the Presidency.

The liberal septuagenarian disclosed his intention to reporters after a written announcement that he will enter the Ohio Presidential primary May 12, for which a definite statement of Presidential intentions is necessary.

A reporter asked if that did not constitute announcement of his candidacy.

"It would appear so," Borah replied, crisply.

Asked if he would sign the necessary papers, he said: "Certainly."

His decision followed published reports that the Idaho liberal would not seek delegates in Ohio, New York or Illinois, was disinclined to stump primary States, that he sought support only for Republican convention purposes; in short, that he was fulfilling predictions of critics that he would not "follow through" his early Presidential boom.

In determining to enter Ohio, he is said to be acting on advice of Eastern Republican friends, who have told him if he musters any great show of strength in Western and Midwestern primaries, Eastern Republicans, largely antagonistic to his policies but avid for a winning candidate may support him.

The formal statement on his Ohio decision, read:

"After a thorough survey of the Ohio situation, I am convinced that

Greeks Offer Part Payment On War Debts

Would Give 35 Per Cent of Amounts Due May 10 and November 10.

By the Associated Press.

A Greek offer of partial war debt payments yesterday marked the first break in the impasse resulting from wholesale default by a dozen other European nations two years ago.

With Finland the only debtor nation at present continuing to fulfill its obligations to the United States Treasury, Greece has expressed willingness to pay 35 per cent of the coupon value of payments due May 10 and November 10.

Demetrios Sicilianos, the Greek minister, was revealed to have communicated to the State Department an offer to pay $76,272 of the $217,920 due on each date.

Total Obligations Listed.

Total obligations due from war-debtor nations amount to $12,437,837,030.33.

The State and Treasury departments are studying details of the proposal, and so far the Greek offer is unanswered.

On Capitol Hill Senator Lewis (Democrat), Illinois, called on Great Britain and France, the two largest debtors, "to make some effort now" to settle their debts. Using financial problems in this country as a springboard for renewal of his protests against default, the Illinois Senator recommended:

"Since France and England have lately entered into a joint compact of service and mutual contribution in all matters of finance, peace or war—I propose that to this there now be added by these nations the obligation to issue their joint bonds of small denomination payable to the United States to the full sum of not less than $6,000,000,000, being but part payment of the joint debt."

Lewis suggested that the debtors "provide that all money due these countries from Americans in any form or from any source be paid to the United States Treasury, to be credited on the bonds to the amount that shall cover the interest."

The Greek offer was made as partial payment of interest on the "4 per cent loan of 1929." This $12,167,000 issue was part of the Greek stabilization and refugee loan of 1928.

Three Million Involved.

All funds derived from the American loan were used in financing resettlement of nearly 3,000,000 persons of Greek blood or languages from Turkish territory to Greek territory after World War reshuffling of European boundaries.

In April, 1935, the Greek government, in negotiations with the League of Nations loans committee and the British council of foreign bondholders, offered a 35 per cent interest payment to European bondholders. They rejected the offer, insisting on a 50 per cent payment.

At that time the State Department called the Greek government's attention to the fact that, under the financing agreement, the American loan was to receive the same security and treatment as other sections of the stabilization and refugee loan.

Student Slays Nazi Chieftain In Switzerland

Yugoslav Tells Police He Wanted to Strike Blow at Hitler Regime.

By the Associated Press.

Davos, Switzerland, Feb. 4.—Wilhelm Gustloff, 40-year-old militant leader of Nazis in Switzerland, was assassinated today by a medical student who said he wanted to strike a blow at the regime of Adolf Hitler.

Gustloff was shot to death in his apartment. Five bullets entered his body.

His slayer ran from the building, threatening a crowd which had hastily gathered with his pistol, and escaped. Later he telephoned police and surrendered.

In jail the youth said he was David Frankfurter, a Yugoslav medical student, who had come here from Berne to kill Gustloff and thus damage the Nazi cause.

Serious repercussions between Germany and Switzerland were feared. The neighbor nations previously have been involved in several incidents surrounding Nazism.

Socialists Sought Ouster.

Gustloff, a German physicist, attached to the Davos Observatory, had angered Swiss Socialists by organizing Germans in this country in support of Hitler.

Anti-Nazis repeatedly demanded his expulsion, but the federal council decided his activity was within the law.

The Swiss republic, which has a heavy German-speaking population, has been watching Nazi activities, and officials are determined to maintain the Nation's independence.

Activities of German Nazi organizations in Switzerland worried the authorities and official investigators reported some months ago that pressure was brought to bear on German residents, particularly in the Canton of Berne.

Another problem was raised by the new Reich military service law, which practically enabled Germans to become Swiss and remain German at the same time.

Nearly 70 per cent of the 4,067,000 inhabitants of Switzerland speak German.

Berlin Demands Justice.

Berlin, Feb. 4 (AP).—Adolf Hitler telegraphed sympathy to the widow of Wilhelm Gustloff, assassinated Nazi organizer, in Switzerland, today, while the German press reported "murder by Jew" in big headlines.

Quick justice was demanded from Swiss authorities by Hitler's Voelkischer Beobachter, which said:

"Germany lost hundreds of men through Jews," the paper added, "and Frankfurter's act justifies the Nazi separation of Jews from Germans."

News of the slaying reached Berlin as Baron Konstantin von Neurath, minister of foreign affairs, was giving a reception to 1,500 diplomats and Nazi leaders. All uniformed Nazis left the reception when the slaying was announced.

Police said Frankfurter told them he is an Israelite and wished to avenge persecution of Jews in Germany.

Kidnaping Caused Furor.

The outstanding recent incident between Switzerland and Germany arose over the alleged kidnaping of Berthold Jacob, a German-Jewish journalist, on Swiss soil by a Nazi agent.

After weeks of negotiations the German government delivered Jacob over to Swiss authorities and the Nazi agent was reprimanded. Settlement of the case was a compromise between the governments.

Dress Strike By 105,000 Is Set Friday

Workers in Four States to Quit for Vote on General Walkout.

The Strike Situation.

Dress workers in 3,800 plants in New York, New Jersey, Connecticut, Pennsylvania and other States were ordered to stop work Friday pending a general strike vote. Union leaders estimated 105,000 workers were affected.

Striking millinery workers in New York picketed hundreds of factories; Mayor LaGuardia warned 20,000 building service workers not to strike now.

National Guardsmen were held in readiness for riot duty as a general strike tied up business in Pekin, Ill.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Feb. 4.—Dress workers in 3,800 plants in New York, New Jersey, Connecticut, Pennsylvania and other States were ordered to stop work at 2:30 p. m. (Eastern standard time) Friday pending a vote on a general strike in the industry.

The order, which the union said would affect 105,000 workers, was issued tonight following a meeting at which David Dubinsky, president of the International Ladies Garment Workers Union, and Julius Hochman, general manager of the joint board, announced "the complete breakdown of negotiations with the employers association."

To Report for Vote.

The workers, half of whom are employed here, were ordered to report in Madison Square Garden immediately after stoppage of work to vote on the strike.

"Negotiations between the union and the associations of dress employers came to an end late this afternoon because the employers are determined not to reach an agreement with the union as long as the workers are in the shops and productions continues," Hochman said.

"The union had hoped that a settlement could be reached through peaceful negotiations. For three months we have been bending all our efforts in that direction. Despite our repeated attempts to negotiate, and despite the urgent request of the Mayor of the City of New York, the dress employers obstinately refuse to arrive at a new agreement. They seem to have been devoting their major attention during the crisis facing the industry to raiding each others' membership lists.

Strike Only Weapon.

The Affiliated Dress Manufacturers, Inc., which said it employs 38,000 workers and is composed of 325 firms, 30 of which joined in the last two days, declared that "the union remains obdurate on the question of direct piece price settlement with manufacturers and wholesalers who employ contractors."

Its statement said it had called a meeting of its members for tomorrow afternoon to discuss the situation.

The statement expressed the opinion that "the union will not involve its workers in a strike over anything of this kind, which has not been demonstrated as being necessary as far as the members of this association are concerned."

"They have shown their desire and ability to abide by the collective agreement," the statement continued, "and will continue to do so without the shackles and hamstringing demanded by the union."

Picketing of hundreds of factories was started by striking millinery workers today, while Mayor F. H. LaGuardia warned 20,000 building service workers that it would be a "grave mistake" to strike now.

Offering his services as arbiter, following the breakdown of a conference between the Building Service Employes International Union

New Cold Wave Again Will Glaze Streets With Ice

Curiosity Kills 19 As Boat Overturns

Buenos Aires, Feb. 4 (AP).—News from Posadas, on the upper Parana River, said today curiosity of passengers aboard a heavily laden steamship caused it to capsize, causing 19 deaths.

Word received from police said the accident happened after a barrel of wine fell into the water. Passengers, impelled by curiosity, rushed to that side and the steamer capsized.

Another steamer, the Gabriel D'Annunzio, rescued 19 survivors. Ignacio Palacios, captain of the Vargas-Gomez, was arrested on his arrival at Posadas on the rescue ship.

50 Hurt in Falls, With 30 Requiring Hospital Treatment.

Drivers Use Care, Auto Crashes Few

12 Days of Sub-Freezing Temperatures Equal 41-Year Record.

Hazardous sheets of ice were expected to paralyze traffic in the District once more today, replacing the slushy remains of yesterday's perilous glaze, which all but brought transportation to a standstill.

As the Weather Bureau here predicted arrival of a new cold wave, torrential rains and melting snow flooded streams in the South yesterday, adding four deaths to Dixie's winter toll of a score.

Before dawn today, the Weather Bureau asserted last night, the mercury will slide back to 18 degrees from its relatively balmy maximum of 38 at 4:30 p. m. Both today and tomorrow are forecast to be fair and much colder.

Before the ice and snow began to melt yesterday afternoon, more than 50 persons had slipped and fallen on Washington sidewalks and streets. More than 30 of these were taken to hospitals suffering fractures and sprains. The others were treated by physicians for bumps, bruises and shocks.

Few Auto Accidents.

Automobile accidents were minor yesterday. Drivers were careful and moved at a snail's pace. Many persons left their automobiles at home and trusted to picking up a taxi, if they were lucky enough. Others out early in the day were forced to leave their autos in the streets.

Throughout the day the Capital Transit Co. kept its sand trucks and sand cars busy, laying a firmer foundation on which Washington might move about.

A total of 30 trucks operated along bus routes yesterday. Transit officials said last night they would keep their crews busy and that street cars would operate throughout the night to keep the rails clear. All available equipment was used yesterday.

The new polar wave swept down from the northwest threatening to engulf all the Nation east of the Rockies. In the prairie States trains were caught in drifts, the worst blizzard of the winter swept across lower Minnesota and highways were blocked in many States.

Communities in six States, the Associated Press reported, faced a fuel shortage as heavy snows threatened to cut deliveries. They were Iowa, Illinois, Wisconsin, Missouri, Indiana and Massachusetts.

Floods Threaten.

While Washington slid and skidded and prepared for another cold snap, the Southland experienced grave peril as heavy downpours came on the heels of snow.

An earthen dam was broken in North Carolina, and two persons were killed. Two trainmen plunged to death in Alabama when a mountain fill was weakened.

The Associated Press reported rivers in Mississippi, northern Alabama, northern Georgia and North Carolina swelled from their banks, crippling highway and rail traffic and sending thousands of lowland residents scurrying for shelter.

For nearly 12 hours Collinsville, Ala., was marooned, with residents finding a haven in two-story buildings, the Associated Press reported.

Warmer winds freed icebound shipping along the New England Coast, the Associated Press reported. The 3,300 residents of Nantucket Island were isolated by fog.

W. E. Thomas, the nearly blind man, who has taken it upon himself to see that Washington birds do not starve in bad weather, said last night that with ice cutting off the food supply many birds were starving. He would be pleased to receive any donations of food which he will distribute to them. He lives at 402 Sixth street northwest.

Some Schools Closed.

In Washington there were hundreds of absentees from school. Other thousands were late for classes and work.

Two schools were closed in Arlington County. James Monroe School at Aurora shut its doors because of a frozen water line and Glencarlyn School was closed because the children could not walk along the icy highways.

Some of the schools in Montgomery County were closed, and traffic moved with the utmost caution along the highways.

The current cold wave, which closed officially yesterday morning when the mercury climbed above freezing for the first time in more

Ship of Nudists Back at Tampa; Isles Still Goal

By the Associated Press.

Tampa, Fla., Feb. 4.—The nudist schooner Fleetwood, bound eventually for the Virgin Islands to set up a colony, put back into port here tonight with the announcement that her early navigatorless wanderings were only a trial trip.

The nudists' leader said the Gulf was rough and he turned back. He said, however, he likely would sail for the Virgin Islands as soon as the weather cleared.

Scarcely had the schooner overcome trouble which held her in Tampa Bay overnight, when Secretary Ickes, ruler of the Virgin Islands, hinted that clothing, if doffed on the voyage, had better not be thrown overboard.

"They are subject to the law," the Secretary said, and added he did not think the "old Danish law" which ruled the island permitted such modern fads as nudism.

Purchased Vessel.

The group is headed by Maurice Allard, formerly a sewing machine salesman and later a nudist organizer in California. Allard and his party, numbering 20, including his own family, came here about a week ago and purchased the Fleetwood.

The vessel weighed anchor today after having been held in Tampa Bay overnight. Whether she had gone aground or whether trouble with the auxiliary engine held her back, had not been definitely determined.

C. M. Moore, treasurer of the Tampa Pilots Association, said the 65-foot vessel developed motor trouble.

"So far as we know he (Allard) was not aground," Moore said.

Ickes said he was confident Gov. Lawrence W. Cramer of the Virgin Islands could handle the situation after the colony lands "in a proper and becoming manner."

Unworried About Cramer.

He was apparently unworried by the fact that Cramer contributed a foreword to a recent book on nudism.

"I think Gov. Cramer isn't a nudist and never was one," Ickes said. The Governor told a Senate committee he wrote the foreword because he was a friend of the author.

The society, known as the "Vana Vana," is said to have obtained a tract of 1,000 acres on St. Johns island in the Virgin group.

Allard's efforts to hire a navigator were futile, so he and his band departed without one on the 1,400-mile journey.

Sophomore Bridegroom 'Fired' For St. John's College Romance

By a Staff Correspondent.

Col. Amos W. W. Woodcock, college president, learned from a student in Randall Hall that the young couple had been "housekeeping," and, after investigating, dismissed David Rees, 22, a sophomore, of Newburg, Conn. Rees and his 19-year-old bride, June Rees, of Hartford, Conn., packed and left today for New England.

According to students on the third floor of the dormitory, the couple was married last September in Connecticut, with the consent of their wealthy parents. When the New England youth returned to Annapolis for the fall term his bride followed, taking a room in a boarding house.

Rees was assigned to a room in Randall Hall with Lloyd Taylor, 20, a freshman, of Bridgeport, Conn., as his roommate. Mrs. Rees, it was said, made frequent visits to the dormitory to see her husband.

Last Saturday, it was asserted, Mr. and Mrs. Rees had dinner in the basement of Randall Hall, where 275 St. John's men gather for meals. They attended a dance in the college gymnasium, later returning to the dormitory.

The news of Rees dismissal, attributed to "some sneak" in the dormitory, spread swiftly through the college today. The majority of students living in the dormitory said they knew of it but that it was none of their business.

"We have a regulation that boarding students, if married, must have permission from the administration before they can matriculate," Supt. Douglas L. Howard (U. S. N., retired), dean, said tonight.

"Rees had married in September and returned to college in the fall, having been a student last year. He did not report that he had been married and such a condition prohibited him from doing satisfactory academic work," Capt. Howard continued. "In the last several days Mrs. Rees visited Randall Hall to see her husband without authority and stayed beyond a proper hour."

Col. Woodcock could not be reached tonight for comment.

Shaw's Advice to U. S. Is 'Chuck Constitution Into the Ocean'

By the Associated Press.

Miami, Fla., Feb. 4.—George Bernard Shaw, Irish playwright and caustic critic of most things, advised the United States today to "chuck" its Constitution, "into the ocean, bag and baggage."

Arriving here by cruise ship from Southampton, England, the 75-year-old Irishman fingered his white beard with a mischievous twinkle in his eyes as he declared Americans "have a good President," but "a bad Constitution."

"It is always getting the best of President Roosevelt," he continued, chuckling in his whiskers. "In the end you might as well have a prime minister, like England."

Talkative and high spirited, Shaw pranced the decks of the steamship Arandora Star, posed for cameramen and chatted freely with reporters.

"It's no good asking me questions of national importance," admonished the writer. "I've been here before and told you what to do about your Constitution. But did you do it? You did not. Now you're up to your neck in trouble."

"The Supreme Court has stopped every move to change the Constitution," he explained.

Then, in chiding tone: "Instead of chucking it into the ocean, bag and baggage, you are making it into rags with amendments."

"I'm not poking fun at America," he added. "I'm serious."

When the ship docked, a greeting committee of Miami City and chamber of commerce officials asked Shaw to say a "few words."

"I never say a few words," he replied, standing with his arms folded. "I usually start out with about 5,000. However, I will tell you this is my first trip to Miami, and I have already arranged for a monument to be erected in my honor."

One city official suggested a tree be planted as a memorial to him, but the Irishman said he did not like that "idea," because, "by the time a tree would grow up, the world would have forgotten who Bernard Shaw was."

New York Assembly Asked to Curb Aliens

Albany, N. Y., Feb. 4 (AP).—Merwin K. Hart, president of the New York State Economic Council, called upon the New York Legislature today to "deal drastically" with the alien problem which is costing taxpayers $17,000,000 annually in the State.

In addition, Hart said, New York taxpayers are paying "many millions" more toward support of aliens in other States since 21 per cent of all Federal taxes are collected from them.

Good Neighbor Role Fruitful, Welles Asserts

Trade Gains, Cordiality Towards U. S. Result, Says State Aid.

The far-reaching results of the change of inter-American policy to the "good neighbor" plan under the New Deal were outlined by Sumner Welles, Assistant Secretary of State, in an address to the Bar Association of Maryland, in Baltimore last night which pictured upturns in Pan American trade and more cordial relations as chief fruits of the policy.

Welles discussed the situation existing before President Roosevelt took office in 1933, stating that:

"* * * There had existed on the part of our American neighbors a * * * mistrust of the ulterior objectives of the United States; a justifiable resentment of the high-handed or patronizing attitude of this Government, and an equally definite resentment of the tariff policy pursued by the United States, which made it impossible for any free flow of goods between their countries and ours.

"This general atmosphere of mistrust had been enhanced by the open acts of armed intervention by the United States in many of the smaller republics."

Explains Policy.

He continued by explaining the objectives of the "good neighbor" policy, asserting that it "has been predicated on the belief that there should exist an inter-American political relationship based on a recognition of actual and not theoretical equality between American republics; on a complete forbearance from interference by any one republic in the domestic concerns of any other; on economic co-operation, and finally on the common realization that all the American republics confront the same international problem * * *"

He then listed the actions of the Government during the last three years as follows:

1. Formal declaration by the President that armed intervention by the United States was a thing of the past, and adherence to the doctrine that no State has a right to intervene in the affairs of another.

2. Abolition of the Platt amendment in a treaty with Cuba so that the contractual rights of this Government to intervene in Cuban affairs have been abolished.

3. Economic co-operation with the Cuban government when "our previous tariff policy had driven Cuba to the brink of ruin and chaos," this co-operation resulting in the "economic and social rehabilitation of Cuba."

4. Evacuation of Haiti. Haiti had been occupied by the American military since 1915.

5. Panama negotiations, now ending with a "settlement fair and equitable."

6. Co-operation in settling the Chaco war, thus paving the way for a permanent peace.

Tariff Cuts Stressed.

7. The program of Secretary of State Cordell Hull at the Montevideo conference emphasizing the value of the most-favored-nation policy and the move for lower tariffs.

8. "The realization by our neighbors that the days of 'dollar diplomacy,' with all of its many vicious implications, is a thing of the past."

Welles emphasized the benefits to employment figures of a steady growth of trade and then pointed to a 100 per cent increase in exports to Cuba since the trade agreement with that nation was consummated and a 25 per cent increase in Haiti trade as proof of the efficacy of the policy.

Stating that a "healthy revival is on the way," Welles concluded by remarking the changed attitude of South American republics since the trade agreements began to be practiced, asserting that previous misunderstandings have been entirely mended and good will substituted for ill will.

Roosevelt Urged As Safety Leader

By the Associated Press.

New York, Feb. 4 (AP).—Safety plans advocated by the National Committee on Safety at Sea were outlined tonight by Howard S. Cullman, vice chairman of the committee, who called on President Roosevelt to give the movement a leadership which, he said, seemed to be lacking.

Cullman said public apathy and lobbying of selfish minorities had held back progressive legislation needed to prevent loss of lives at sea.

The program he outlined included clarification of the labor situation in the shipping industry, enactment of the international convention for safety of life at sea, strengthening of the Bureau of Navigation and Steamboat Inspection and passage of legislation which it advocates, including establishment of school ships for crews, similar to CCC camps, and an intensive program of public education in questions affecting safety at sea.

Senate Votes Fund For 3 Shot in Chase

By the Associated Press.

Bills authorizing payments totaling $8,500 for the shooting of three bystanders by Justice Department agents while trying to capture John Dillinger at Little Bohemia Lodge, Maintowish, Wis., in 1934, were passed yesterday by the Senate and sent to the House.

One measure would give Izelda Boisoneau, of Mellen, Wis., a $4,000 settlement for the death of her son, Eugene. John Morris and John Hoffman, both of Mercer, Wis., would get $3,000 and $1,500, respectively, for having been wounded. Boisoneau and Hoffman were CCC enrollees.

Evidence given the Senate indicated the three men were in the resort when the G-men surrounded it. When they came out they were ordered to halt but did not. They were fired upon as they rode away in an automobile.

The gangsters escaped from the lodge.

French Area Flooded.

Paris, Feb. 4 (AP).—Portions of southwestern France were flooded today when rivers overflowed after several days of heavy rain. The fields around the City of Cognac were under water. The main floods were caused by the Rivers Dordogne, Vezere and Correze.

Politics and People

By Franklyn Waltman

PSYCHOLOGICALLY, President Roosevelt yesterday took a step toward normalcy. He announced to his press conference that $1,000,000,000 or more of unneeded authorizations to Federal credit agencies would be withdrawn, either through Congressional action or by executive order.

Actually, the President's action means very little. The sums which will be erased from the Treasury's books would not have been spent anyway. The sum was authorized for loans to save homes, banks and farms back in the days when the Democrats thought the mechanics of civilization had come to a stop. As long as there was a need for such loans the money was available—but the need has passed and these unneeded authorizations are cluttering up the Government's accounts.

But therein lies the psychological value of the President's decision: It symbolizes in a concrete form that home owners, farmers, bankers no longer are dependent on the resources of the public exchequer, but may be accommodated by private credit agencies. It is further evidence that the New Deal has made progress toward recovery.

* * * *

As one keen newspaperman observed: "It is a smart move; it doesn't hurt a thing or change a thing, but it sounds good—just like a fellow who last week asked you to lend him a dollar for luncheon this week if he needed it and now he says he doesn't need it."

* * * *

President Roosevelt undoubtedly knew what the reaction to his announcement would be. But he seemed ultra-cautious that it should not be given too much significance or a rosier halo than it deserves. Thrice he corrected correspondents when they suggested that the action meant an end of the emergency; that the sum withdrawn was a saving and that it meant a tightening of the Federal purse strings.

* * * *

Extra Extra!! Senator William Edgar Borah unequivocally announced yesterday he was a candidate for the Republican Presidential nomination, and that he would enter the Ohio primary on May - with candidates committed to him for at least the eight delegates at large. To do so he must sign a certificate of his candidacy. He said he would sign.

Many observers did not think Senator Borah would do it. Many times before he has started out on such adventures, traveled a little way along the road, had a lot of fun and retired before definitely committing himself. Now it looks like the Idahoan will have to keep fighting until the Cleveland convention meets.

Perhaps he took the step in order to confound those who said he would not do it. It is known that such contentions have irritated him recently. Only yesterday morning a Washington political writer who has been getting under the Senator's skin wrote that Senator Borah would not enter the Ohio and Illinois primaries, although he would remain a candidate in order to have some influence in platform making and in order to enhance his prospects for re-election to the Senate from Idaho. Well, Bill Borah showed him!

* * * *

Indeed, Senator Borah, if he has serious Presidential aspirations, made a strategic move when he decided to enter the Ohio primary, although he declined to be a candidate in Pennsylvania several days previously.

Above all else the Eastern Republican leaders want a Presidential nominee who can win—and they believe to win he must carry the Middle West. They feel certain any Republican can carry the East. If Senator Borah can make a winning race in Ohio, almost one month before the Cleveland convention, his prospects will be greatly increased among the Eastern leaders.

* * * *

Perhaps the reason why the President and his Administration aids are not getting excited about the inflation agitation on Capitol Hill is that they know it is chiefly talk—some of it very loose talk.

Take the Frazier-Lemke mortgage refinancing bill—a great vehicle for currency inflation. There are 214 names on a petition in the House demanding that it be reported to the floor without further ado. On the face of that situation it would look like inflation is just around the corner.

But House Democratic Whip Pat Boland, who has a good record for calling them in advance, says the Frazier-Lemke bill will not be passed at this session, even though it is forced to the floor. He has been making a House poll and, although it is not yet complete, he has a good cross-section. On that he bases his prediction. Boland reports that some of the members who have signed the petition to force an opportunity to vote on the bill will not vote for the measure itself.

* * * *

The movement of gold to Europe which started during the last few days is depriving the inflationists of an argument. They have loudly contended that there was enough gold in the Treasury to support huge issues of currency that in no way would be greenbacks. They did not seem to realize that a good part of this gold did not belong to Americans, but had been brought here either for safekeeping or investment purposes by Europeans. Now some of it is going home.

* * * *

Could it be possible that the Treasury's stabilization fund has been used to manipulate foreign exchange rates in order to require gold export in an effort to demonstrate to Capitol Hill the true situation? Maybe not, but one always wonders about things that are secret.

Agencies Forego Loans

tion of authorization was indicated. He said that a statement that the emergency had ended was too broad.

Referring again to Government "spending" agencies, Mr. Roosevelt said that calls upon the Treasury during December and January had been less than anticipated. He added that repayments to the RFC of loans made by that agency had exceeded RFC loans last month by $50,000,000.

No Bonus Decision.

In answer to a question concerning cotton loans, the President said that the speed with which the cotton pool is liquidated will determine whether the Government will be called upon to use any part of a fund of $100,000,000 set aside for cotton financing and not spent.

Passing from loan authorizations to the soldiers' bonus, Mr. Roosevelt said that nothing had been decided as to how the bonus should be paid. He added that it had been estimated that payment of the bonus now instead of in 1945 would cost the Government an average of $100,000,000 a year during the next nine years.

In reply to a question about the shipments of gold to Europe, the President expressed the opinion that they were doing no harm.

Perusal of budget figures indicates that the HOLC will be by far the largest agency, financially, to be affected by authorization cancellations. The corporation is authorized by Congress to issue a maximum of $4,750,000 in obligations. At the end of the last fiscal year, June 30, 1935, its obligations totaled $2,666,000,000.

The Federal Farm Mortgage Corporation is authorized to issue obligations up to $2,000,000,000, and at the end of this fiscal year its obligatinos totaled $1,233,000,000. The Reconstruction Finance Corporation is authorized to incur liabilities up to $1,895,000,000, of which it had outstanding at the end of the fiscal year a total of $251,000,000. This is in addition, however, to $3,655,000,000 in notes and accrued interest held by the Treasury and listed as a part of the public debt.

No Limit Set.

In addition, the Secretary of Agriculture had borrowed last June for cotton financing a total of $45,000,000. No specific limit was placed by Congress on authorization for this borrowing.

Attending the White House conference which preceded the President's announcement were Secretaries Morgenthau, Wallace and Ickes; Jesse H. Jones, RFC chairman; Stewart McDonald, chairman of the Federal Housing Administration; Chester Davis, AAA administrator, and Cyril Upham, an assistant to Morgenthau.

The FHA is not a lending agency, but it has authorization to incur liabilities up to authorized limits through issuance of insurance on mortgage and repair loans.

Meanwhile, Congress, including the inflationist group, awaited the President's tax plans. Inflationists are expected to throw their full strength against any tax measures.

Sibley Assails Costs.

Toronto, Feb. 4 (AP).—Harper Sibley, president of the United States Chamber of Commerce, asserted today that "no fair system of taxation can be devised that will support Government in the United States at the present level of its operations."

Addressing a luncheon of the Canadian Chamber of Commerce, Sibley said "the rising costs of government are now one-third of the national income."

"If all the income of individual reports for Federal tax purposes were to be appropriated to public uses, it would defray the cost of government—Federal, State and local—for just 33 weeks," he said.

"Stated in another way, to finance the operations of government—Federal, State and local—this last year would take two-thirds of all the wages and all the salaries received by all the citizens of the United States, except those on Government pay rolls.

Schooner Workers End 7-Weeks Coast Strike

San Francisco, Feb. 4 (AP).—The end of a 7-week-old strike of steam schooner men was announced officially today by officers of the Sailors Union of the Pacific, who said they believed the question of working conditions can be discussed with the operators.

Harry Lundberg, secretary-treasurer of the union, said it had adopted a resolution ending the strike and pledging steps to assist ship owners to start their vessels again under current agreements.

The Shipowners Association met, ostensibly to discuss the proposals.

Falls 30 Feet in Sleep.

Tarboro, N. C., Feb. 4 (U.P.).—Somnambulist Sonney Creech, 11, awoke today to find extraordinary bruises on his body and wondered why. His mother told him he walked in his sleep, tumbled over a bannister and fell 30 feet. Nothing was broken and he did not wake up.

Mine Workers Deny Self Rule To Local Units

Defer Final Decision on Rights of Districts for Two Years.

With the floodlights turned off and the emotional intensity of the previous day missing, the United Mine Workers of America spent two sessions yesterday in a roll-call vote on the question of self-government for certain provisional districts, charters of which were lifted during days of financial stress.

These districts, some of which were as much as $500,000 in debt when the international union officers, headed by John L. Lewis, took their affairs over for settlement, have struggled throughout the convention for autonomy. While praising President Lewis and the officers he has appointed for their districts, these provisional districts want the right to elect their own officers.

The preliminary returns, with absentees not considered, favored acceptance of the committee report yesterday by 2,991 to 1,131. This report recommends continuance of the status quo for another two years, or until the financial affairs of the provisional districts are all on sound footing. Thus the autonomists went down to predicted defeat.

First Fight Occurs.

One quickly halted fist fight, stopped by nearby delegates and a glare from President Lewis, who warned "the eyes of the world are on this convention," enlivened the proceedings slightly.

A telegram from David Dubinsky, president of the Ladies Garment Workers, one of the eight-union bloc which constitutes the Committee for Industrial Organization, the group within the American Federation of Labor urging industrial unionism, was read yesterday. It said:

"The International Ladies Garment Workers Union, like the other unions affiliated with the A. F. of L., which are advocating industrial unionism for the mass production industries, is opposed to any splits or division in the labor movement.

Deny A. F. of L. Split.

"We do not consider the promotion of the principle of industrial unionism as dualism or an opposition policy to the A. F. of L.

"This spirit of loyalty and desire to keep our movement intact, however, should not be used as a whip by the leaders of the A. F. of L. and the craft unions in particular, to stifle for the sake of paper jurisdictional rights the aspirations of the masses of workers."

Both Lewis and William Green, A. F. of L. president whose dramatic plea for unity in the labor movement on a crafts-union policy was booed down the day before, refused comment yesterday on the present situation. Neither would predict the outcome of the United Mine Workers' struggle for adoption by the A. F. of L. of the industrial union theory. A split, eventually if not immediately, is now definite, it was agreed, however.

Need Is Held Acute In Relief Families

New York, Feb. 4 (AP).—The American Association of Social Workers tonight released a survey disclosing what it called "shocking examples of suffering and hardship in relief families ineligible for WPA assignment throughout the country since the withdrawal of Federal funds for direct relief."

The association, composed of practicing professional social workers, said its survey showed suffering was particularly acute in the South and Southwest.

"Families of five and six members are required to exist on relief allowance of $2.25 for a two-week period in one Southern city," the report said, "while all able-bodied applicants for relief, ineligible for WPA assignment, are being refused any relief in Texas cities."

Executive Secretary Walter M. West said it was not the association's wish to attack the WPA program as such.

"Federal grants to States for direct relief to underpin the work program is the only method of alleviating the pitiful and horrible situations revealed by this survey," he said.

Firm Accuses U. S. Of Aiding Strikers

Cincinnati, Jan. 4 (AP).—The Bemis Brothers Bag Co., of Bemis, Tenn., seeking to prevent the National Labor Relations Board from conducting a hearing on a complaint of the United Textile Workers of America, today asserted "the Government of the United States in grim reality has joined the labor union."

The company's attorney, Frank Y. Gladney, in a brief filed in the United States Circuit Court of Appeals, contended the Government, through the NLRB, "has put on overalls and a cap, and gone on picket duty" at the Bemis plant.

He was appealing from a refusal of the District Court of Western Tennessee to grant the company a temporary restraining order to halt a hearing started by an examiner of the Labor Board on a complaint of Local 1838. The Circuit Court of Appeals, in receiving the brief, gave no indication of when it would pass on the case.

The District Commissioners yesterday approved appointment of E. Joseph Aronoff as executive assistant and business manager of District penal institutions.

Appointment of Aronoff was recommended by the board of public welfare on recommendation of Elwood Street, welfare director. He will fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of J. E. C. Bischoff, on May 31, 1934.

Van Sweringen Reorganization Inquiry Opens

ICC Studies Proposal to Simplify Corporate Structure.

By the Associated Press.

O. P. Van Sweringen, Cleveland empire-builder, watched with interest yesterday as the Interstate Commerce Commission began its examination of his intricate plans for reorganization of the Missouri Pacific Railroad.

The Missouri Pacific, with its 7,000 miles of lines, comprises a third of the mileage of the vast rail network which the Ohioan and his late brother, M. J. Van Sweringen, developed from a suburban line they acquired in promoting a real estate business in the Lake Erie city.

As Van Sweringen leaned forward repeatedly to hear comments of O. E. Sweet, I. C. C. finance director who was in charge of the hearing, his counsel said he would testify in behalf of the reorganization plan "at the proper time."

The Missouri Pacific has been in trusteeship for almost three years, and any action of the commission on its reorganization may have far-reaching effects on transportation in the extensive territory it serves.

William Wyer, Missouri Pacific secretary and treasurer, the first witness, explained the plan in detail along with rveisions made since it was first drawn.

The plan proposes consolidation of 31 separate companies into one, issuance of three classes of bonds to replace 83 outstanding and substitution of two kinds of stock for the present 35 classes. Fixed charges would be cut from about $26,000,000 to about $7,700,000.

In formulating the plan, Wyer said the management sought to map "a corporate structure financially strong enough to give the proper service—to have the strength necessary to go through subsequent periods of depression as severe as the one of 1929."

Consolidation of the 31 companies, he testified, would bring "very definite economies" and should benefit security holders by making securities more marketable.

Retirement funds with which to liquidate proposed obligations, the witness said, would act as a barrier against "drifting heavily into debt, necessitating defaults, and subsequent reorganizations."

About 40 attorneys representing more than a score of different interests were present at the hearing.

Threat to Roosevelt Charged to Youth

New Britain, Conn., Feb. 4 (U.P.).—Ferdinand Droz, 20, was arrested tonight and charged with sending threatening letters to President Roosevelt.

Department of Justice Agent William A. Higgins, who made the arrest, refused to divulge the contents of the letters which Droz allegedly sent to the President.

Droz was held at police headquarters without bail and will be taken to Hartford tomorrow for arraignment in United States Court.

Austin Phelps Palmer, business man, was sentenced to 90 days in the New York Federal House of Detention last week for sending threats to President Roosevelt.

Drive Started To Boost Navy And Air Corps

McSwain Seeks 800 New Planes; Trammell Bills Provide for Ships.

By the Associated Press.

Moves aimed at bolstering the strength of the Army Air Corps and the Navy were initiated yesterday in both houses of Congress.

Chairman McSwain (Democrat), South Carolina, of the House Military Committee, warned that the United States is lacking in men and planes to meet a major emergency and announced he planned to press for more of each.

He favors a $70,000,000 appropriation for the purchase of 800 new Army planes in the fiscal year beginning next July to conform to the Secretary of War's recommendation for acquisition of 4,000 Army planes over a five-year period.

At about the same time, Chairman Trammell (Democrat), Florida, of the Senate Naval Committee, introduced four bills designed to increase the Navy's combat power.

Auxiliary Ships Urged.

Foremost among his proposals was an authorization for construction of 221,000 tons of auxiliary vessels, which the bill described as "urgently needed for the proper maintenance and operation of the treaty Navy."

Officers explained that the Vinson-Trammell bill, under which the Navy now is being built up to strength authorized by the Washington and London treaties, made no provision for anything but actual combat craft, which left the service woefully lacking in the important auxiliary units.

In war time the Navy looks to the merchant marine to furnish most of its auxiliaries, such as oil tankers, transports and supply ships. Officers wish to build up a nucleus of regular Navy auxiliaries to operate with the fleet in peace time.

They say that at present there are no tankers in the merchant marine fast enough to keep up with the fleet. This type of auxiliary now is the Navy's most vital need and is closely followed in importance by seaplane and submarine tenders and transports.

Modernization Proposed.

Two other naval measures would authorize modernization work on 14 warships, 2 aircraft carriers and a collier, including $6,000,000 for increasing the number of water-tight compartments so that damage from torpedoes and shells might be localized.

The other phases of modernization were not specified, although it is known naval officers long have insisted on the necessity for elevating the heavy guns of the battleships New York and Texas so that they might have the maximum firing range prescribed by the limitation treaties. These are the only ships of the batle force now without the maximum elevation.

The fourth bill merely would direct the President to dispose of over-age naval vessels as they are replaced.

May Carry Plea to House.

Commenting yesterday on reports that the new War Department appropriation bill, now before the Appropriations Committee, provides for only $45,000,000 for 550 new airplanes, McSwain said:

"If that is true I am prepared to carry the whole affair to the floor of the House in an effort to bring about a building up of both personnel and equipment.

"We should have had 1,800 planes five years ago, and instead we have approximately 700 combat planes at the present time. Of course we have some other ships, but we are lacking in fighting planes and pilots to man them."

Roosevelt to Open Scout Celebration

Founding of the Boy Scouts of America in Washington 25 years ago will be celebrated here and throughout the Nation today. The celebration will last until February 13.

As the celebration centers in the Capital, a message will be broadcast by President Roosevelt today at 6:30 p. m.

The address of the Chief Executive will be followed by a pageant of scouting in Constitution Hall, beginning at 8 p. m. Participating in the event will be Washington Scouts and those from the District of Columbia Council.

Features of the pageant will include a massed flag parade and ceremony, and the induction into honorary membership of prominent citizens.

Music for the occasion will be provided by the United States Navy Band.

Oath to King Edward Delayed by Canadians

Windsor, Ontario, Feb. 4 (AP).—Sandwich East Township Council refuses to take the oath of allegiance to King Edward until its members have had time to investigate its implications.

At last night's meeting, a copy of the oath submitted by the Ontario department of municipal affairs was produced, but no action was taken in the matter of swearing the council members.

Reeve Ben Levert declared in council that he would resign from office if there is anything in the oath which will compel him to bear arms or to help manufacture munitions in time of war.

Ex-C. U. Athlete Hurt in Fight; Inquiry Opens

Hazen Calls on Police to Give Facts After Fracas; Students Are Held.

Police last night began an investigation into events which led to the serious injury of Jack Y. Regan, Catholic University football captain in 1925, early yesterday morning in an alleged encounter with a First Precinct policeman.

The investigation was ordered by District Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen.

The former football player, who is the divorced husband of Helene Costello, movie actress, is in Emergency Hospital with a fractured skull when he fell or was knocked to the pavement at Fourteenth street and Pennsylvania avenue northwest.

Regan was injured when he was alleged to have attempted to interfere with Policeman William A. Schotter's arrest of George Mulligan, star end of the Catholic University football team. The disorder took place following the Orange Bowl victory dinner for the C. U. team at the Willard Hotel.

Mulligan and Edwin Karpowich, team captain, are charged with assault on Schotter. They and a taxi driver, whose name was not learned, were questioned at length last night at the First Precinct Station.

Capt. James Regan, U. S. A., brother of the injured man attached to the Quartermaster Corps, asked Commissioner Hazen and Superintendent of Police Ernest W. Brown to make a searching inquiry into the case.

Four distinct versions of the incident have already come to attention of Detective Sergt. John C. Daiglish and Lieut. C. P. Cox, who were assigned to the case from the Detective Bureau.

One is that Regan leaped on Schotter's back while the officer was trying to arrest Mulligan; and that Schotter twisted himself throwing Regan to the pavement.

The second is that Schotter struck Regan without provocation. That is the story of the football players.

Schotter told his superiors that he struck Regan with his fist when he attempted to free Mulligan from him.

In his report to his superiors Schotter said he had arrested Mulligan and was holding him at the patrol box at Fourteenth and Pennsylvania avenue when Regan attempted to release the prisoner. "I struck him one blow with my fist," he said, "an Regan slipped on the ice and fell to the pavement."

Catholic University officials would not comment yesterday on the case. It was understood that they would await the trial of the two students in Police Court before taking any disciplinary action.

Schotter appeared in court yesterday. He told Judge John P. MacMahon that he had been struck over the right eye and the left side of the neck. He bore no bruises. None of the accused were marked.

Physicians at Emergency Hospital said Regan's condition is serious; but he has a fighting chance for recovery.

Regan is the son of Col. James Regan, U. S. A. He married Helene Costello, the sister of Dolores Costello, soon after he was graduated from C. U. They are now divorced.

Karpowich and Mulligan live at the university. Lynch is a former Cardinal athlete. They are expected to go to trial next week on charges of being drunk and disorderly. The assault charges will not be heard for two weeks.

Vitamin H Is Isolated By Columbia Teacher

New York, Feb. 4 (AP).—Dr. Lela A. Booher, Columbia University chemistry instructor, said today that after several years of experiment she had succeeded in obtaining a concentration—or partial isolation—of vitamin H.

Deficiency in vitamin H is believed to be a cause of pellagra, a skin and digestive disorder attributed to improper diet.

She said her experiments indicated that adequate amount of the vitamin are present in a normally balanced diet and that a pint of rich milk per day alone would supply enough of it.

Slavery in Italian Colonies Is Charged

Addis Ababa, Feb. 4 (AP).—The Ethiopian government issued a communique tonight charging slavery exists in the Italian colonies of Eritrea and Tripoli.

This apparently was in reply to Italian arguments at Geneva that slavery is widespread in Ethiopia—another reason for Italy's "civilizing mission."

Denying Italian claims of victory in the south, the communique said Ethiopians retreated in order to take up "much more easily defendable positions."

Richmond Couple Hurt, Car Wrecked Near Here

John P. Morgan, 35, and his wife, Barbara, of Richmond, Va., were seriously injured last night when the car Morgan was driving ran into the signal post in the middle of the Mount Vernon Highway at Norton's lane, half way between the highway bridge and Alexandria. The car was demolished.

Ads Net $11,000,000 From Tax Delinquents

Chicago, Feb. 4 (AP).—A $20,000 advertising campaign asking delinquent taxpayers to pay up had more than $11,000,000 in "sales" to its credit today, Joseph L. Gill, Cook County (Chicago) treasurer, used newspapers, billboards and the radio from January 15 to February 15 in the novel collection plan.

Penalties were waived in full on taxes for 1932 or before, if the taxpayers would meet their 1933 assessments in full. A total of 18,001 taxpayers answered the ads.

Gill's goal was $16,000,000. Payments on last-minute applications will continue to swell the total for the next two weeks, he said.

Accidents Claim 99,000 Lives, Cost 3 Billion in U. S. in 1935

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Feb. 4.—Ninety-nine thousand Americans died in accidents last year—one every six minutes.

That was the tabulation announced today by the National Safety Council.

The total bill for Americans' carelessness was added up to approximately $3,000,000,000 in property damage, wage loss and medical expense.

Council statisticians told the story in these grim figures: 99,000 killed, 365,000 permanently injured, 9,100,000 temporarily disabled; 271 killed every day, 11 every hour, 1 every 6 minutes; 25,000 injured every day, 1,000 every hour, 16 every minute; 1,000 permanently injured every day, 41 every hour.

They noted a drop of 3,000 from 1934, but pointed out the heat and drought of the latter year claimed 3,250 lives.

Motor vehicle crashes brought death to 36,400, an all-time high; permanent injury to 107,000 and temporary hurts to 1,170,000. Monetary loss in this bracket was set at $1,600,000,000.

There were 31,500 fatalities in home accidents, a decrease of 9 per cent from 1934. Falls accounted for about 44 per cent of them, with burns, scalds, asphyxiation, firearms, poisons and cuts other leading causes. There were 4,600,000 injuries. Monetary loss was set at $580,000,000.

Occupational death totaled 16,500 and injuries 1,400,000. Their cost was reckoned at $620,000,000. This was a slight increase, but industrial activity was at a higher level. A duplication of 2,900 deaths in the automobile and occupational classes was pointed out.

Public accidents other than those previously listed resulted in 17,500 deaths. Drownings, falls and fireworks and firearms were included in this category.

The council said the death rate per 100,000 population in the United States had declined from 85.5 in 1912 to 77.8 in 1935, due chiefly to the application of safety measures. It expressed confidence the five-year campaign designed to reduce motor vehicle fatalities 40 per cent would force a still greater reduction. The drive was started January 1 on a Nation-wide scale, but statistics on its progress will not be available until late this month.

Finders of Bruno Asked to Aid Hunt

Trenton, N. J., Feb. 4 (AP).—The New Jersey State police, under orders from Gov. Harold G. Hoffman to find the "other persons" who kidnaped and killed Charles A. Lindbergh, jr., sought the aid today of investigating agencies that helped find Bruno Richard Hauptmann.

Col. H. Norman Schwarzkopf, State police superintendent, sent letters to J. Edgar Hoover, chief of the Federal Bureau of Investigation at Washington, and Lewis J. Valentine, police commissioner of New York City, urging them o assign the same men who worked on the case almost from the night of March 1, 1932, when the baby was kidnaped.

Replies had not been received tonight, but Valentine said in New York he would be glad to co-operate. Hoover had not yet received the letter and declined to say what he would do.

The Department of Justice at one time had nearly 20 men working on the case, and reports of their activities were sent to the State police. After the conviction of Houptmann, Schwarzkopf praised both agencies and said the case was a "triumph for co-ordinated and co-operative police work."

Senate Committee To Discuss Leave

The two Government leave bills were held over again yesterday at the request of Senator McKellar (Democrat), Tennessee, as the Senate Civil Service Committee scheduled an executive meeting for this morning.

It is expected the status of the bills to allow Government employes 30 days vacation and 15 days sick leave will be discussed, and some new plan for forcing a vote devised.

The bill to permit legislative employes to become subject to the civil service retirement act, which passed the House Monday, also will be before the committee.

Infant's 'Upside Down' Stomach Operation Fails

Fall River, Mass., Feb. 4 (U.P.)—Three-month-old Donald McDonough, of South Portland, Me., died at Truesdale Hospital late today, several hours after his "upside-down" stomach had been righted in a two-hour operation.

Death was attributed to post-operative shock, undernourishment and frailness.

The operation, performed shortly before noon, was similar to those from which Alyce Jane McHenry, 11, of Omaha, Nebr., and Jimmy Neilson, 13, of San Jose, Calif., have recovered.

As in their cases, the operation on the McDonough child was performed by Dr. Philemon Edwards Truesdale, nationally-famous diaphragmatic hernia surgeon.

Jewish Women's Group Asks Anti-Lynch Laws

Louisville, Ky., Feb. 4 (AP).—Resolutions favoring anti-lynching laws and a child labor amendment were voted here today by the executive board of the National Federation of Temple Sisterhoods.

The executive board, whose actions bid 55,000 members of the largest Jewish women's organization in the world, went on record in favor of the Costigan-Wagner anti-lynching bill and a constitutional amendment abolishing child labor.

9 Foes of 5-Year Plan Are Freed in Russia

Moscow, Feb. 4 (AP).—Nine leaders of the secret Krom (Industrial) Party sentenced to long prison terms in 1930 for alleged efforts to obstruct fulfillment of the Soviet five-year industrial plan were freed today by governmental decree.

The decree reinstated the Industrial Party leaders to full political and civil rights.

All of the men were declared to have repented and performed noteworthy services for the state while in prison by constructing a new type of boiler. Among the liberated men was L. Ramsin, former head of the Industrial Party.

U. S. Freighter Goes to Rescue Of Fishing Boat

'Eglantine' Radioes Denial of Earlier Reports it Was in Peril.

By the Associated Press.

Yokohama (Wednesday) Feb 5.—The American freighter Eglantine radioed its agents here today that it was standing by a Japanese fishing boat in distress 160 miles off Cape Noshima.

The Freighter, which was not in trouble itself, reported it had encountered the 192-ton fishing boat Deshina Maru wallowing helplessly in a storm.

(Previous reports to Globe Wireless in San Francisco, relayed by ships in the vicinity of the Japanese coast, indicated the Eglantine was in distress).

12 Killed in Japan.

Tokyo, Feb. 4 (AP).—At least 12 persons were killed tonight as the worst blizzard in 20 years swept through the heart of Japan.

Snow-laden gales from the China Sea swept over an area embracing the empire's six greatest cities, Tokyo, Osaka, Macoya, Kobe, Kyoto and Yokohama.

Property damage is known to be huge, although communications were so disrupted that an immediate check was impossible.

The storm struck at noon, tying up transportation in the cities, disrupting trunk railways, and paralyzing industrial activity.

Both Tokyo and Kyoto were in darkness tonight because of the failure of power plants.

More than 100 steamers were compelled to take refuge in the ports of Kobe, Osaka, Moji and Shimoneseki. Many smaller vessels went unreported.

than 12 days, equaled the record of February, 1895, the Weather Bureau stated.

There were exactly 12 days and 15 hours of protracted freezing weather here, officials pointed out. The exact number of hours 41 years ago was not available.

Throughout Maryland citizens prepared for another drop in temperature.

For the first time in to weeks the State as a whole saw thermometers climb. As in Washington, there was a general thaw of ice and snow during the afternoon. Ice conditions still were bad on Chesapeake Bay.

Minor automobile accidents were numerous in the State. A bus skidded near Baltimore, and eight school childred were injured slightly.

Slipping as he walked the icy docks of Baltimore, a Negro stoker fell into the water and was drowned. Police recovered his body.

The regular meeting of the Montgomery County commissioners, in Rockville, was called off because of the ice and snow.

Rome Warns World Of 'Counter-Action'

Rome, Feb. 4 (AP).—Italy, through the Fascist grand council, warned the world today new sanctions will bring opposition along a "definitely fixed line of counter-action."

The council, in session for the second time in four days, determined its future course of action, but declined to disclose its nature.

Informed circles were quick to recall, however, the recent admonition in Premier Mussolini's newspaper Popolo D'Italia that sanctions will ultimately "mean a blockade and blockade will be war."

The grand council meeting, which lasted two hours and a half and followed an earlier session of the supreme commission on defense, decided Italy had acted wisely in rejecting the Franco-British proposal for peace in East Africa.

Ice, Heavy Fog Hold Up Relief At Tangier Isle

Food Supplies Are Believed Adequate for Week; Boat Stands By Helplessly.

Dense rolling fog bank and ice, 10 to 12 inches thick, last night had balked, temporarily at least, the efforts of the Coast Guard cutter Travis to cut a pathway to isolated Tangier Island and her 1,500 inhabitants.

While food supplies were still believed adequate for about a week, the little Travis, a shallow-draft 125-foot craft, stood helplessly by, about a mile and a quarter from Tangier.

Her Diesel motors hummed futilely against the barrier of the ice, which locked Chesapeake Bay, and has cut the hardy islanders off from the mainland, their source of supplies for the past two weeks. The Travis reported to headquarters last night she was standing by.

Red Cross Plane Arrives.

A monoplane chartered by the American Red Cross and piloted by Capt. Al Bennett, flew to Crisfield, Md., late yesterday from Bennett Airport, Hightstown, N. J., and carried J. Millard Tawes, of Crisfield, Red Cross representative, to Smiths Island to ascertain the actual conditions there in regard to shortage of food, fuel or medicine.

The plane flew direct from Crisfield to Smiths Island, carrying Tawes, who was met by the island Red Cross committee, headed by Mrs. Polly Tyler, of Ewell, chairman. Mrs. Tyler told Tawes: "At Ewell there is plenty of food to last several days. The rest of the island probably has enough food to last through the week." She also said the general conditions there have been very good.

According to Tawes, medicine will be obtained for some of the residents and will be carried over by plane to the island today. One woman, a Mrs. Eva McReady, he said, burned herself badly when a stove exploded. It was necessary to get medicine to her for treatment.

Following the flight to Smiths Island to deliver medicine today, the plane will also go to Tangier Island and carry the Rev. H. Bailey, the island preacher, who had been unable to get to his home because of ice conditoins.

The plane today also carried several newspapers and the island people showed their anxiety to learn about happenings of the outside world. They have been cut off from all communicaton for nearly two weeks.

Sufficient Food Reported.

Tawes, upon his return to Crisfield, said:

"Not hearing from Smiths Island for several days we were anxious to get over there to determine the needs of the community and, if possible, render whatever service and assistance may be needed.

"I found that most of the stores had sufficient food to last for several days. The general health conditions of the island were fairly good. No mail had left the island for about ten days and we waited until the postmaster packed the mail. Then we carried it to Crisfield for distribution."

An airplane loaded with food for the icebound islanders made a forced landing on the ice a mile from Deal Island, it was reported by the Associated Press. The plane, piloted by George Brinkerhoof, was sent by a Washington newspaper. The plane's propeller was damaged and part of the landing gear went through the ice.

Reverberations of the plight of the islanders were felt here yesterday when Representative Bland, of Virginia, said he intended to ask President Roosevelt to agree to equip all Coast Guard boats of certain classes with ice breakers.

Bill Blocked by Roosevelt.

One of the prime movers in the relief efforts directed toward the island people, Bland asserted he hopes to push through a bill at this session of Congress to prevent similar emergencies in the future.

Representative Goldsborough, of Maryland, has introduced a bill to provide three Coast Guard ice breakers for service on Chesapeake Bay. This measure now is before the House Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

Because the President during the last session vetoed a bill designed to equip the Coast Guard with 10 ice breakers for use along the Atlantic Coast, sponsors of the Goldsborough measure feel it would be useless to promote it further unless President Roosevelt approves it.

Two Prison Stabbings Revealed by Warrants

Philadelphia, Feb. 4 (AP).—Two stabbings in the Eastern State Penitentiary were revealed here today, when Warden Herbert Smith swore out warrants for two convicts. James C. Evans, prison barber, serving a short term, is in a critical condition with an abdomen wound, suffered Saturday.

The alleged assailant is Francis Murray, serving 20 to 40 years for robbery. Smith said the barber was slashed in an argument over a 10-cent discrepancy in Murray's credit account. The error was traced to another convict.

James Brooks, serving 25 to 50 years, is alleged to have stabbed Alexander Cochrane, also serving time for robbery, in a fight last November. Cochrane has recovered.

Russian Must Die.

Kharkov, U. S. S. R., Feb. 4 (AP).—The Southern Railway Court today sentenced conductor A. Tolmacheff to death for robbing an 11-year-old boy passenger and pushing him off a train. Tolmacheff was described as a former non-commissioned officer in the Czar's army.

Student Found Dead in Second Track Mystery

Dartmouth Youth Found on Railroad Day After Friend's Death.

By the Associated Press.

Thetford, Vt., Feb. 4.—A 21-year-old son of a Brooklyn (N. Y.) merchant died mysteriously here today, just 24 hours after a prep school classmate perished in an unexplained manner.

He was Jerome Nathan Straus, Dartmouth College freshman whose body was found on railroad tracks early today, 8 miles from the college.

His death followed closely upon that of his one-time classmate at Deerfield Academy, Francis Grose, Amherst (Mass.) college freshman whose broken body was discovered yesterday beneath a railroad trestle near Northampton, Mass.

Grose's death remained a mystery tonight despite the fact Medical Examiner T. F. Corriden called it probably accidental.

L. K. Neidlinger, dean of Dartmouth, advanced three possible theories to account for the death of Straus. He asserted the student might have been trying to ride a freight train, had been walking the tracks and was accidentally struck, or had committed suicide.

The dean said his only basis for the suicide theory was Straus' recent complaint of being unable to sleep and was in an unsettled state of mind.

Robert C. Strong, dean of freshman, and Nathan Straus 3d, cousin of the dead boy, said they found a note in Straus' room reading:

"The demands of modern life are too much for me and I am going to take a walk."

The body was taken to Hanover, N. H., after, the dean said, town selectmen decided the death apparently was accidental.

"He was a good student," added Neidlinger.

State's Attorney S. L. Chamberlain, of Randolph, said tonight the youth recently had told a classmate at Dartmouth that college was too hard for him. After discussing the matter with his friends, Chamberlain said, Strauss decided to try college again.

Bloodstains were found on the pilot of a locomotive which passed the scene about 6 a. m., declared Chamberlain. The locomotive, examined in Concord, N. H., also had bloodstains on a sandpipe.

President Vetoes Log Duty Refunds

President Roosevelt yesterday vetoed a bill which would have authorized refunds of "certain countervailing customs duties" collected upon logs imported from British Columbia.

Under the tariff act of 1922 countervailing duties were levied in this country after British Columbia had instituted a timber tax which in effect restricted importations. The countervailing duties were an answer to the province's timber tax.

Later the British Columbia tax was found invalid. The bill vetoed yesterday would have refunded the countervailing duties collected by this country.

The President's veto message concluded:

"It is reasonable to assume that in most, if not all cases, the duty was passed on by the importer to the ultimate consumer. There appears to be no reason for making a refund to the importer without requiring him to show that he himself absorbed the duty."

'Advisory Opinion' Act Is Voided in Kentucky

Frankfort, Ky., Feb. 4 (AP).—Kentucky's new "advisory opinions" act, designed to give the Governor and legislators advance rulings as to constitutionality of bills pending before the general assembly, was knocked out today by the court of appeals.

The State's highest tribunal, in an opinion written by Chief Justice William Rogers Clay and concurred in by the entire court, held the act unconstitutional.

Showdown Near In Fight for New Neutrality Act

Thomas Seeks to Extend Present Law as Rule Is Asked in House.

Neutrality legislation advocates in both Houses of Congress yesterday moved toward a finish fight to enact a permanent neutrality policy for the United States.

Chairman McReynolds, of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, seeking a rule to bring the Administration bill on the floor, charged that a powerful war trade lobby was attempting to defeat the legislation. The rules committee deferred its decision.

In the Senate Senator Thomas (Democrat), Utah, announced that he would press before the Foreign Relations Committee today his motion to extend for another year the present neutrality law. In a statement he said he believed the present law should be continued during the Italian-Ethiopian war.

Meanwhile, the Senate Munitions Committee continued its investigation of financial dealings leading up to the entrance of the United States into the World War. J. P. Morgan, who was told that his presence was not needed before the committee, nevertheless, appeared, explaining that he "didn't want to miss the party."

New Law Dubious.

The belief was growing in both Houses that it would be impossible to enact new legislation during the present session, and certainly not before expiration of the existing law on February 29.

McReynolds made his "lobby" charges in a statement before the Rules Committee. He said some members of Congress also were opposed to the measure because placing of quotas on shipments to belligerents would "interfere with some classes of trade."

Commenting on the lobby charges, Representative Tinkham (Republican), Massachusetts, a member of the Foreign Affairs Committee, said that the charges "would be very popular propaganda to be put out by the people who are trying to put this bill across and make us, in effect, a subsidiary of the League of Nations."

Admitting that the bill would affect American trade, McReynolds added:

"If the people of this country want neutrality, as they say they do, they are going to have to pay something for it."

Thomas Gives Warning.

Senator Thomas in his statement pointed to the danger, because of the imminent expiration of the old law, of this country finding itself without a neutrality act which would cover the present Italian-Ethiopian situation. He said the continuance of the war makes it logical and proper to continue the present act rather than make changes during the emergency.

"To legislate a great fundamental American foreign policy at a time when feelings run high because of an existing emergency is unwise," Thomas said. "To illustrate how difficult the neutrality problem is, I direct attention to the fact that the House Committee on Foreign Affairs has seen fit to bring the Monroe doctrine into the picture in contemplating its neutrality law, thus having America immediately pronounce that as far as her part of the world is concerned she is not neutral."

The reference was to a House committee amendment providing that the law should not apply in case of war between an American republic and a nation not an American republic.

Former Aids of U. S. Present.

Present, besides Morgan, at the munitions hearing were Russell Leffingwell, Thomas A. Lamont and George Whitney, Morgan partners, and Albert Rathbone, New York attorney. Leffingwell and Rathbone were Assistant Secretaries of the Treasury during the war period.

The hearing, which had previously been marked by criticism of war-time officials, proceeded quietly, while reference to "secret treaties" was carefully avoided. Morgan took very little part in the hearing, sitting before the committee smoking his huge curved pipe and occasionally examining exhibits through gold-rimmed spectacles.

Opening the hearing, the committee put into evidence a proposal made by William G. McAdoo, war-time Secretary of the Treasury, that the United States inform the Allies that loans to them did not mean that this country approved of all their objectives. A letter from Robert Lansing, then Secretary of State, disapproved the suggestion.

"The same argument which is urged in regard to loans," Lansing wrote to McAdoo, "might be advanced in regard to the employment of the embargo, the co-operation of our naval vessels about the British Islands, the presence of our military forces in France, and similar active aid by this Government."

While attempting to show that American officials knew that allied war aims were different from ours, the committee did not again put into evidence anything to show that American officials knew of secret treaties.

The committee also attempted to show that the Allies overrode Treasury objections and paid off American private bankers with part of the first money they borrowed directly from this Government in the early war days. The committee is making a considerable point of this contention in its effort to show that commercial interests forced this country into the war.

Produce Letter.

Countering this charge, the Morgan partners produced a letter from the British secretary of the treasury, dated July 31, 1935, recounting how demand loans to bankers were paid off after this country entered the war. The letter said that a proposal to issue a "market loan" had been abandoned out of deference to views of the United States Treasury. Before the objection of the United States to paying the loan from money borrowed from this country had been expressed, the letter said, $100,000,000 of borrowed money had been so used. It pointed out that within 20 days this amount had been spent in this country for supplies and exchange. The demand loan totaled slightly less than $400,000,000, varying somewhat from week to week. Eventually, it was pointed out, the entire loan was repaid from "the independent resources of His Majesty's government."

Garners, Aided by Broadway Stars Entertain the Roosevelts

Justice Hughes and Wife, Among Guests, Hear Gene Buck's Party.

With the aid of Gene Buck, Broadway producer, Vice President and Mrs. Garner provided the President and Mrs. Roosevelt and their other dinner guests last night with a widely varied program of entertainment.

The program, which came after coffee at the Vice President's annual dinner for the President at the Garners' residence, the Washington Hotel, ranged from the singing of Alfred Chigi, Metropolitan baritone, to the patter of those radio and screen comedians, George Burns and Gracie Allen.

George: "For entertainment."

Sing or Croon?

Gracie: "What does he do, sing or croon?"

George: "The Vice President is here, too."

Gracie: "I have heard of vice, but I never knew it had a president."

Postmaster General James A. Farley, who is in Florida, came in for ribbing when George said he had seen Farley at a banquet recently.

Gracie replied: "Farley is always eating out."

Drums or Byrns' Head.

Jack Powell, a trap drummer, who works "black face," played on chairs, walls and tables and finally concluded his act by playing the drums on Speaker of the House Joseph W. Byrns' head.

Just who would be presented was a secret to Mrs. Garner as well as to her guests, who included the Chief Justice and Mrs. Hughes, Alice Roosevelt Longworth and Speaker and Mrs. Byrns. As in the past two years, the Vice President drafted Buck to arrange the entertainment.

Other entertainers were Corinna Mura, a brunette singer from Garner's State, who sings both Spanish and English songs to guitar accompaniment, and Pauline Alpert, a modern pianist.

The dinner reminded the Capital of past years when Will Rogers was the Garners' entertainer extraordinary.

Pope Is Depressed By War Situation

Vatican City, Feb. 4 (AP).—Pope Pius, said prelates today, was "tremendously depressed" mentally over the Italo-Ethiopian war situation and this was chiefly responsible for his cancellation of public audiences yesterday.

The pontiff resumed the audiences today, receiving several hundred newlyweds, among others.

Persons close to his Holiness said the European situation growing from the proposal at Geneva of an oil embargo against Italy and a warning here against a blockade has caused him deep anxiety.

This concern, they added, reacted on his physical condition. They pointed out the Pope is nearly 80 years old and must conserve his energy

France, Britain Urge a Formula To Block Nazis

Would Allow 'Preventive Mobilization' Moves; Flandin Confers.

By the Associated Press.

Paris, Feb. 4.—France and Great Britain hope to give League members a "bigger stick" lest Adolf Hitler profit in Europe as Benito Mussolini is trying to do in Africa, semi-official sources said tonight.

Many of the diplomats consulted in recent Paris and London talks, it was stated, favor reinforcing Article XVI of the League of Nations Covenant, dealing with aggressor nations and sanctions.

France and Britain were reported anxious for the League to authorize "preventive mobilization" to put teeth in the League's efforts at war prevention.

Thus, it was explained, a member might mobilize to meet a threat without the act being construed as provocative. France, for instance, could concentrate troops on the border if she foresaw a German attack.

A new definition of an aggressor is sought because of the Italo-Ethiopian situation. Although the League indicated Italy as an aggressor, Premier Mussolini argues that he is in reality defending the frontiers of Italian colonies by a punitive expedition against border raiders.

Continuing his numerous talks with various visiting diplomats, Foreign Minister Pierre-Etienne Flandin conferred today with Vice Chancellor Ernst von Starhemberg, of Austria and Prince Paul, regent of Yugoslavia.

Flandin, informed sources said, is seeking to build up a united front in Eastern and Southeastern Europe against Germany, particularly to prevent Berlin from extending its influence into Austria.

Responsible quarters said Von Starhemberg told Flandin Austria is willing to give a written promise to refrain from restoring the Harpsburgs to the throne without the consent of the Little Entente (Czechoslovakia, Rumania and Lugoslavia).

Mrs. Kenny Leader In Maternity Race

Toronto, Feb. 4 (I.N.S.).—Despite the fact that her latest child died soon after birth, Mrs. Matthew Kenny tonight was leading Toronto's "Maternity Sweepstakes," with a prize of $500,000 waiting her in October.

The strange will of Charles Vance Millar, awarding $500,000 to the woman who had the most children between October 1926, and October, 1936, in Toronto, did not specify the children must live. All that is required is that their births be registered.

The son born to Mrs. Kenny last night was her tenth child since October, 1926. She refused advice of physicians that she go to a hospital and remained in her small frame house. The child weighed 6½ pounds at birth, but lived only an hour.

The birth put Mrs. Kenny one child ahead of Mrs. Grace Bagnato, who has had 9 children since 1926 and a total of 20 since she was married. Mrs. John Nagle, wife of an unemployed carpenter, also has had 9 children since 1926, but there is doubt whether all of them were born in Toronto.

Missing Man's Note Adds to Mystery

Chicago, Feb. 4 (AP).—Police Capt. Patrick Collins today added new mystery to the disappearance of Harry H. Wells, wealthy Monroe, Wis., businessman, by disclosing that Wells apparently knew he would never see his family again.

Collins said Monroe authorities told him a hitherto unrevealed phrase of Wells' last letter, written immediately before he dropped from sight a week ago, was:

"Please be careful when you tell this to Sarah, as it breaks my heart to think I'll never see her or the kids again."

Sarah is Wells' wife.

The letter, written to Wells' brother-in-law, Henry Burgy, also mentioned extortion threats, Capt. Collins said, adding that Wells wrote he wished to "have a showdown in the case, once and for all."

Collins said Burgy had turned the letter over to the Department of Justice in Washington. Federal agents entered the case yesterday on the theory that extortionists had kidnaped Wells.

Communists Accused Of Plotting on Hungary

Budapest, Feb. 4 (AP).—Budapest police charged today that they had uncovered conclusive evidence that Moscow Communist headquarters was spending money lavishly in an attempt to undermine the Hungarian government and to promote disorder.

Officials said evidence found during a raid, which brought to light a new Communist organization in Hungary, resulted in the arrest of several distinguished Hungarians who allegedly were employed by Moscow authorities.

A large sum of money was confiscated.

Huge Jump in Shipping Is Reported; Chances Held Even of League Ban.

By the Associated Press.

London, Feb. 4.—British official quarters eagerly studied the oil situation tonight, including American exports to Italy, after an expected debate on rearmament in the reconvening Parliament failed to materialize.

The British believe, it was said in authoritative quarters, there is at least a 50-50 chance an oil sanction will be invoked against Italy by the League of Nations.

Responsible persons in Whitehall appeared unimpressed by the latest unofficial warnings from Rome against an oil boycott, which they described as largely repetitious.

Watches U. S. Capitol.

The foreign office appeared more concerned with the situation in Washington and the fate of neutrality legislation.

A written report to the House of Commons said United States exports of crude petroleum to Italy jumped enormously last October and November.

The Parliament which reassembled today was the first in the reign of King Edward VIII.

Baldwin explained that a white paper on the program for augmenting Britain's defenses would be issued, but expressed belief there would be no parliamentary debate on the subject "in the immediate future."

Anthony Eden, foreign secretary, told the House that Great Britain is taking no part in any negotiations for settlement of the African war.

Split at Geneva.

Geneva, Feb. 4 (AP).—Rumors of divergencies among members of a League of Nations' committee of experts studying the possibilities of an oil sanction against Italy arose tonight.

These unconfirmed reports resulted from the committee's discussion of the possibility of Premier Mussolini's obtaining substitutes which might make an oil boycott ineffective.

French and British experts, it was said reliably, are united in a determination to discover to what degree substitutes are available.

Some members pointed out the Fascists might substitute alcohol and synthetic benzine, obtaining them from Austria and Germany.

A report to the committee said Italy had recently acquired additional oil tankers.

Trio Ordered Held In Hewitt Operation

San Francisco, Feb. 4 (AP).—Ann Cooper Hewitt's mother and two physicians were charged with mayhem today in a police complaint based on the 21-year-old heiress' claim she was tricked into a sterilization operation.

Municipal Judge Sylvain J. Lazarus issued warrants of arrest.

The punishment for mayhem is 1 to 10 years in prison.

The complaint named the mother, Mrs. Maryon Cooper Hewitt, and Drs. Tilton E. Tillman and Samuel G. Boyd—all accused by Miss Hewitt in a $500,000 damage suit of plotting her sterilization.

Miss Hewitt charged in her civil suit that the operation, which she said she was led to believe was for appendicitis, was performed in furtherance of a plot by her mother to benefit from the estate inherited by the girl from her father, Peter Cooper Hewitt, famed inventor.

Cadet Appointments.

Senator Carter Glass announced yesterday the appointment of three alternate candidates for admission to West Point, according to the Associated Press. They were Clarence W. Clapsaddle, jr., Roanoke, a student at V. P. I.; Guy McLoughlin, South Boston, and Robert Kash, jr., Lynchburg. They will take an examination in March and the one making the highest grades will be principal.

New York to Push Anti-Vice Crusade

New York, Feb. 4 (AP).—New York tonight awaited the next move in the most spectacular anti-vice campaign since the crusading days of Dr. Charles H. Parkhurst and William Travers Jerome, a generation ago.

With 11 alleged viceroys of vice and 77 material witnesses in custody, Special Prosecutor Thomas E. Dewey mapped his next step in conference with Commissioner Lewis J. Valentine and other high police officials.

Valentine, credited by Dewey with carrying out a series of week-end raids that closed the city up tight, placed his entire command of 18,000 policemen at the prosecutor's disposal.

After the conference orders flashed out directing every member of the force to report "forthwith" any information, confidential or otherwise, pertaining to the 11 major prisoners.

'Endless Life' Is Topic Of Christian Scientist

Peter V. Ross, C. S. B., of San Francisco, Calif., will deliver a lecture on "Christian Science: The Power of Endless Life" at a public meeting at 8 p. m., Thursday, in First Church of Christ, Scientist, Columbia road and Euclid street northwest.

Mr. Ross, a member of the board of lectureship of The Mother Church, The First Church of Christ, Scientist, Boston, Mass., will be introduced by Bernard C. Duncan, first reader of First Church.

France Stands Firm On Nazi Navy Issue

London, Feb. 4 (AP).—The French delegation to the Four-Power Naval Conference emphasized today it never would agree to a British plan to bring Germany into the parley.

A detached attitude was maintained by the United States delegation on the Anglo-French rift over the Reich which is threatening to break up the conversations.

The conference itself languished and instead of the speedy, successful conclusion which some delegates had expected, the belief arose in some quarters that discussions will drag out until March at least.

Legislation which would protect the rights of authors all over the world has already passed the Senate and is now before the House. It calls for an international copyright union.

Airport Closure Threatened

be forced through Congress under special rule.

"If someone were to be killed or seriously hurt by an airplane while motoring on Military road, a large damage claim might be filed against the War Department," he said.

The traffic control lights on Military road were installed in July, 1934, by the Washington Airport upon its own responsibility. The right was questioned by the War Department after an Army truck narrowly avoided a collison with a transport plane, but the signals remained.

A year later the airport supplemented the lights with highway guards, at the insistence of the Commerce Department. The guards, equipped with flags, have made a practice of stopping automobile traffic when planes took off from or landed on the flying field.

Solomon, in his letter to Secretary Roper, complained that recent publicity given to the quarrel between the airport and the War Department over jurisdiction has caused the public to disregard the safeguards.

"The publicity given to the alleged unauthorized operation of the traffic lights and the maintenance of the guard patrol has caused numerous motorists to disregard both the red danger light and the siren as well as the traffic guard, he wrote.

"In several instances our guards have had very narrow escapes from being run down by automobile drivers willfully disregarding their own safety and that of travelers by air. We feel their effectiveness has been severely lessened.

"Therefore, it is the decision of this corporation that, effective at 4 p. m., on Saturday, February 15, 1936, this corporation will withdraw the traffic guard patrol now attempting to safeguard the traffic along Military road."

The War Department, in explaining its predicament, pointed out that the construction of military road was authorized by an act of Congress, which specified that the highway should be open to the public. Now complaints are made to the War Department regarding the hazard, but the department lacks legal authority to close the road without permission of Congress.

After explaining the Washington Airport extended a runway across the road, the department said:

"This unauthorized use of a public highway by the airport company has been regarded as potentially endangering the lives of crews and passengers of airplanes and of persons proceeding along the road.

"Notwithstanding the fact that this dangerous condition results entirely from the unauthorized use of the road by the airport, protests are frequently made to the War Department with the request that remedial action be taken.

"Several remedies have been considered by the War Department, including the closing of the road and the exercise of traffic control during the landing and taking off of airplanes."

The War Department added that, because of the construction of the Mount Vernon Memorial boulevard and new roads on the Virginia side it now "considers Military road no longer essential to its needs."

The McSwain resolution authorizes the Secretary of War to dispose of the road by any of the following methods:

Transfer to other agencies of the Federal Government.

Lease to the owners of Washington Airport at an annual rental of $1 so that the airport and Hoover Field may be merged.

Do This to Ease Sore Throat Instantly

Relieve Soreness in Three Minutes This Easy Way

1. The moment you feel a throat irritation, crush and stir 3 BAYER ASPIRIN Tablets in ½ glass of water. Gargle twice. Do not rinse mouth.

2. If you have a cold, take 2 BAYER ASPIRIN Tablets and drink a full glass of water. Repeat, if necessary, according to directions in package.

If you want the most astonishing and quickest relief from sore throat, you have ever experienced, just do this:

Crush and dissolve three Bayer Aspirin Tablets in ½ glass of water for use as a gargle.

Gargle your throat twice with this medicated mixture, holding the head well back to allow its going deep into the throat.

That's all! Relief will come almost instantly. For the Bayer Aspirin will act like a local anesthetic to ease throat pains. And, at the same time, will soothe and quiet irritation.

People by the tens of thousands are combating sore throat this way. Doctors endorse it. And scientists acclaim it as perhaps the most effective gargle yet discovered—for it provides a medication, and it takes medicine to combat a sore throat.

If you have a cold with your sore throat—take two Bayer Aspirin tablets with a full glass of water at the same time you gargle. When you buy, though, be sure to get real BAYER ASPIRIN TABLETS. They dissolve fast and work fast.

Why BAYER Aspirin Works So Fast

Drop a Bayer Aspirin tablet into a glass of water.

By the time it hits the bottom of the glass it is disintegrating.

IN 2 SECONDS BY STOP WATCH

What happens in these glasses happens in your stomach—Genuine BAYER Aspirin tablets start "taking hold" of pain a few minutes after taking.

Loeb Inquiry Draws Protest Of Legislators

Party Lines Break in Fight on Governor's Plan for Investigation.

By the Associated Press.

Springfield, Feb. 4.—Political repercussions from the prison slaying of Richard Loeb burst today from both sides of the Illinois House of Representatives.

Cries of "political whitewash" were raised against the investigation of the entire State penal system by a commission which Gov. Henry Horner sought to form.

Every faction opposed to the chief executive, Democratic as well as Republican, joined in the barrage of criticism as the Governor awaited replies from the 16 men he invited to look into charges of lax discipline and favoritism raised by Loeb's razor death at Stateville Penitentiary.

At least a dozen members hurriedly drafted resolutions calling for an inquiry.

Representative L. M. Green, Rockford Republican, and Representative Benjamin S. Adamowski, Chicago Democrat, who is aligned with Mayor Edward J. Kelly—opponent of Horner's renomination—led the attack on the proposed commission.

"I don't think half the men named will accept," said Adamowski. "To invite them is one thing and to get them to serve is another."

Mayor Kelly, who with Committeeman Patrick Nash, of Chicago, led the State Central Democratic Committee to approval of Dr. Herman N. Bundesen, of Chicago, as organization candidate for the Governorship nomination—in opposition to Horner's determination to run again—was one of the first to take a sideswipe at the administration's rule of Illinois prisons. He stated several days ago that more guards were needed.

The prison experts he named are three Democrats and a Wisconsin man, who I presume is a Progressive and as such an assistant Democrat," he said.

Representative Frank McClure, an anti-Horner Democrat, said the Governor for two years has been building up, in the penal system, a "personal political machine."

But the Governor's plan found a defender in Representative Mrs. Bernice Van Der Vries, Winnetka Republican, who declared: "I favor the investigation by men such as these, many of them penologists of note, rather than by the legislators."

TVA Head Confident Of U. S. Court Ruling

Chicago, Feb. 4 (AP).—Arthur E. Morgan, Knoxville, Tenn., chairman of the Tennessee Valley Authority, said today he held no fear that the Government's power project would be wiped out by a Supreme Court decision.

Morgan, who came here for a University of Chicago lecture, said in an interview that "the court's ruling on TVA will involve an entirely different principle than the AAA and NRA decisions."

"If the decision is adverse," he said, "it will probably be a circumscription of the activities of the TVA and not an outright invalidation."

By the United Press.

Santiago, Chile, Feb. 4.—Chile was threatened with a general strike today as bakers, painters, carpenters, textile workers and machinists walked out following the sudden strike of railroad men Sunday night.

Widespread sabotage on the railroads continued, and troops clashed with one group which they surprised in the act of dynamiting three kilometers of roadway near Concepcion.

No reports of casualties had been received here, but carabineers clashed with saboteurs in several places. The soldiers were under orders to close all headquarters of the Workers Federation, which the government believes was influenced by Communists to call the strike.

Fleet Held Ready.

The marine ministry ordered the fleet to stand by at Valparaiso, although it was to have sailed tomorrow on a southern cruise.

Strikes of the other trades were only partly in sympathy with the railroad walkout. As an added grievance the building trades, bakers and textile workers had a grievance about the new 5 per cent raw materials tax.

Although railroad officials in every other section reported increasing sabotage, the second zone, comprising the most populous region of Chile from Santiago to Valparaiso, was not affected by the railroad strike. Employes refused to join the movement of the other zones.

The strike was called without warning Sunday night, the workers demanding higher wages. Minister of Industry Matias Silva immediately branded the strike as communistic, and said the railroad workers have had their wages increased three times in the past three years.

"The government has trustworthy information," Silva said, of the origin of these revolutionary activities, and knows that this strike is the result of orders given by local and foreign communist organizations."

London, Feb. 4 (AP).—The second day of London's meat strike ended tonight with meat still plentiful, but the visible supply nearly exhausted.

Union officials and strikers in the Smithfield Central Market, London's meat "clearing house," conferred for an hour and a half, but failed to break the deadlock between the employes' demands for higher wages and shorter hours and their employers' offers.

Le Havre, Feb. 4 (AP).—The shipyard workers' strike, which began yesterday with the walkout of 2,000 men at St. Nazaire, spread to Le Havre today.

Five hundred laborers brought from St. Nazaire for alteration work on the liners Normandie and Paris refused to go to work. They were joined by 150 metallurgical workers of the French line, owners of the two ships.

The strikers are protesting against the 10 per cent wage cut provided by the government's financial decree laws.

Liggett Death Link Is Denied By Gov. Olson

By the Associated Press.

Minneapolis, Feb. 4.—From his sick bed, Gov. Floyd B. Olson denied today he had ever harbored enmity for slain Walter Liggett, his one-time ally who later became his severe newspaper critic.

The Governor's statement, issued from a Rochester (Minn.) hospital, was in reply to testimony given yesterday by the publisher's widow at the trial of Isadore (Kid Cann) Blumenfeld on a murder charge for the slaying.

Today the prosecution rested in the case and the defense prepared to offer an alibi for the defendant liquor salesmen.

"Mrs. Liggett has been incited by some crafty, politically-minded men to make various statements reflecting upon me," said the Governor. "I can name them if I am challenged."

Denies Any Wrong.

"I never wronged Liggett in any way, or wished him any harm.

"For Mrs. Liggett I have only sympathy. If an act of mine would help her I would gladly perform it. In her bereavement she is entitled to and has the sympathy of everyone, but that does not give her the right to make false and unfair statements, such as her charge that I was connected with the murder of her husband."

The Governor said he regarded Liggett's newspaper crusades against him as unworthy of reply because he considered the Liggett publication "without influence."

During cross-examination by counsel for Blumenfeld, Mrs. Liggett had said "Gov. Olson's gang either ordered or permitted" the assassination of the crusading publisher.

Daughter to Testify.

One of the final defense witnesses was 10-year-old Marda Liggett.

The child, who saw her father shot down by a machine-gunner December 9, testified the killer was in the front seat of the death car. Her testimony was intended to counter defense endeavors to show that Mrs. Liggett was uncertain where the killer sat.

By stipulation, both sides set the time of Liggett's killing at 5:41 p. m., shortening the prosecution's testimony somewhat.

Thomas McMeekin, defense attorney, said Blumenfeld would take the stand in his own defense and that he could call between 75 and 100 witnesses in efforts to sustain Blumenfeld's alibi that he was in a barber shop when Liggett, who had assailed him in his columns, was mowed down.

Whales, Swans Nearly Extinct, Experts Told

Conservation of Wild Life on World Basis Discussed at Conference.

Game lovers from three nations in Washington to establish a co-ordinated conservation program were reminded yesterday that the African rhinoceros and the whales that inhabit the deep, as well as America's trumpeter swan and antelope, are in danger of extinction.

That restoration and conservation of wild life may be undertaken on a world basis was the subject of an address by Dr. John C. Phillips, of Wenham, Mass., founder of the American Committee for International Wildlife Protection.

He outlined accomplishments of the committee, organized six years ago, in focusing attention upon the odds faced by rhinoceri, mountain zebra, deer, chinchilla and other animals in their fight for survival.

Onely five species of the rhinoceros exist today on the face of the globe, said Dr. Phillips. Most abundant are the common black rhinoceri of Africa, but even these are imperiled by the great value of their horns, which are literally worth their weight in gold.

"Let a native kill one and he is rich, fixed for life," the speaker told the North American Wildlife Conference, in session at the Government Auditorium.

Stricter coordination of activities of government bureaus concerned with wild life safety was urged by Frederic A. Delano, vice chairman of the national resources committee. He was introduced by Jay N. Darling who read, as a preface to Delano's talk, the following memorandum, issued this week by President Roosevelt:

"From investigations made by the national resources committee, it appears that unnecessary waste and delay in the execution of land drainage and water storage projects result from the failure of Federal agencies to secure review of projects from all relevant points of view while the work is being planned, and that certain projects which are ill-advised from public health, wild life conservation or other standpoint may be undertaken because such review is not made.

Statement is Asked.

"Please instruct appropriate officials of your agency to submit a statement of impending programs involving land drainage or water storage to the national resources committee at regular intervals in order that other agencies having an interest in the work may be informed by the committee of the programs well in advance of their initiation."

Forty-six States now have planning boards co-operating with the national resources committee and the majority of them are working on the conservation problem, said Delano.

At the morning session, Senator Key Pittman (Democrat), of Nevada, said a wider understanding of the problem by the public is the only prerequisite to enactment of adequate Federal laws to protect wild fowl and animals.

"We of the legislative branch of the Government feel the necessity for support, moral and sentimental, of our constituents in every matter," said Pittman, who is vice chairman of the special Senate Committee on Conservation of Wild Life Resources.

Two speakers, Roswell P. Rosengren, of Buffalo, and William L. Finley, of Portland, Oreg., assailed the encroachment of industrial enterprise upon nature's animals. The latter illustrated his address with a motion picture depicting the damage which "progress" has wrought in Western forest lands since 1915.

Others who spoke yesterday were William Tucker, member of the Texas delegation; Mrs. Roberta C. Lawson, president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, and L. W. Barclay, of the Boy Scouts of America.

105,000 Ordered to Strike

and real estate operators, Mayor LaGuardia said:

"Inasmuch as there are only minor matters yet to be settled, it is simply unthinkable that a strike should be called."

In response to the mayor's appeal, both sides offered to resume negotiations, in an effort to reach an agreement on working hours for watchmen and building superintendents, the only issues remaining in dispute.

Samuel Kheel, president of the Penn Zone Association, one of the employer groups, said:

"We have always been satisfied to negotiate, but we don't seem to get very far. They're pretty stubborn. But we'll sit down with them and try to avoid a strike."

On Hour's Notice.

James J. Bambrick, union president, said he had geared his strike machinery to pull 20,000 workers off their jobs in 1,200 Mid-Manhattan buildings on an hour's notice.

Such a walkout would leave the buildings without union elevator operators, heating engineers, porters and other help.

The Empire State, tallest building in the world, appeared to have settled its difficulties, with announcement by the union that all employes had been granted wage increases.

Meanwhile, Marx Lewis, executive secretary of the United Hat, Cap and Millinery Workers International Union, announced that 20,000 members had left their jobs in 800 factories.

Lewis expressed optimism that a new working agreement would be negotiated soon, but added:

"We won't be back to work for several days."

Ohio Militia Called Out.

Pekin, Ill., Feb. 4 (AP).—National Guardsmen, ready for riot duty, massed in nearby Peoria tonight, after a general strike smothered most union labor activity in this city of 17,000 persons.

General business was crippled. Scores of shops were closed. Vital services were continued, however, as union members, estimated by their leaders to number 1,500 from 31 crafts and trades groups, responded to the call for the general walk-out.

It was issued last night by the Pekin Trades and Labor Assembly, climaxing a six months dispute between employes and officials of the American Distilling Co. It was a direct protest against the steps taken by Mayor W. E. Schurman to end the controversy.

The unionists also demanded that Chief of Police Harry Donahue be dismissed for his participation in efforts to reopen the plant yesterday when a bus load of employes ran picket lines under the protection of tear and stench gas bombs thrown by special deputies and police.

Three companies of guardsmen waited under arms at Peoria—7 miles away—throughout the day, alert for any request for aid from Sheriff Ralph Goar. Another company waited at Delavan, 25 miles to the north. A fifth group, a howitzer company from Mount Vernon, veterans of mine-war troubles of two years ago, was en route by truck to Peoria. State officials planned to hold the entire force there, about 350 men, ready for any summons.

State officials tonight took charge of efforts to bring about a settlement of the strike as a citizens' committee seeking a solution resigned. Martin Durkin, director of the State department of labor, arrived tonight. He said his first endeavor would be to confer with strike leaders and ascertain just what their demands were.

At Washington, Secretary of Labor Perkins said she also was keeping in close touch with the situation, adding that she would be advised by J. E. O'Connor, a Labor Department conciliator, who was dispatched to Pekin.

After the early morning hours, when a bombing and shooting were reported to the sheriff's office, the day was free from disorders.

Barber shops, movies, taverns, restaurants and beauty shops employing members of various unions were closed. Carpenters, painters and decorators laid down their tools. Coal and grocery truck drivers did not make their rounds. Milkmen, however, after a two-hour shutdown, covered their routes. Union leaders gave assurances that this service would not be interrupted.

Give The Board A Chance.

Problems of the Parole Board must necessarily be considered by Congressional committees during the next few weeks, since they are intimately connected with the District appropriation bill. Moreover, a number of changes in the parole law are sought by different members of Congress. In the interests of the public welfare, as well as of law enforcement, the shortcomings of the present setup should be carefully scrutinized.

Undeniable is the fact that the existing parole system has not operated satisfactorily. Some critics, therefore, have jumped hastily to the conclusion that the responsibility of paroling prisoners in the District should be shifted back to the Federal Parole Board. But that is obviously casual reasoning. Common sense, to say nothing of fairness to District citizens who serve on the local board without pay, demands first an analysis of the difficulties encountered.

Until last summer the board had only one parole officer. Obviously it was impossible properly to supervise the activities of several hundred men whom the board was trying to reinstate into the life of the community. Now the board has three parole officers, though one is serving only temporarily. Funds to employ four men permanently for this important work are being sought. But even if that request is fully granted by Congress, only a minimum of supervision will be provided.

From these simple facts it is clear that the Parole Board has not had an opportunity to administer the law as was originally intended. Supervision of parolees must be an integral part of any reasonable system through which prisoners are released before the end of their maximum sentences. Before any drastic changes are proposed, therefore, the board should certainly be given the meager sums required to carry on its work.

The value of even loose supervision as against mere conditional release of offenders is indicated by the fact that 154 paroled men earned a total of more than $58,000 during the last fiscal year, compared with approximately $14,000 for 333 conditionally released men.

One aspect of the present law might well be changed. Prisoners may now be released after serving one-fifth of their maximum terms. Senator King would modify the rule to one-third of the term, to conform to the Federal law. Already the board follows this latter practice, and is eager to see the law amended. Men are now paroled by no means so freely as they were a few years ago. If the board had an adequate staff of supervisors, its most acute problems would be solved.

In no circumstances should the trend toward a larger degree of self-government for the District be reversed by shifting the parole system back to a Federal agency, merely because the local board has been denied funds to carry out its essential work.

Saga Of The Chesapeake.

For the second time in three years an Eastern Shore community has been forced to look to the outside world for relief. Usually self-sufficient, the hardy residents of Tangier Island are accustomed to wrest their living from the customarily genial waters of the Chesapeake. Occasionally, however, Nature runs amuck, as was the case with the tidal flood of 1933, which swept over Tangier a foot deep; and now with the island's present isolation from the mainland because of ice jams.

Although the radio and the movies have done much to modernize the inhabitants, their ways are still those of simple fisherfolk. Automobiles are unknown to their narrow streets; the waterways are their only means of transportation to the mainland. Yet it is to the most modern of all craft—the airplane—that these fishermen must look for relief in times of severe distress. Although trained by a lifetime of anchorings, the oystermen were admittedly out of their element in mooring the relief ship which landed in their midst from the air.

There is something markedly dramatic in this picture of a Chesapeake Bay island transformed into the aspect of an Arctic village. Boston thinks nothing of ice-covered masts glistening in its harbor. And though Nantucket is in somewhat the same natural situation as Tangier, it is located in a part of the country which is not unused to digging in for the heavy snows.

For Tangier, however, these are stirring days. Long before the hurricane of '33 was forgotten came the big freeze of '36 to add its hardships and adventures to the wealth of local folk lore.

Industrial Unionism.

The dramatic split between William Green, the president of the A. F. of L., and John Lewis, who, as president of the United Mine Workers, heads the strongest constituent unit in the federation, is not without precedent in the history of the American labor movement. And to assess its significance it is necessary to review history which helps to explain the defiant attitude now taken by the miners to the conservative leadership for which Mr. Green is spokesman.

Nearly 40 years ago the Western Federation of Miners, a strongly socialistic and revolutionary body, split off from the then undeveloped A. F. of L. on issues in which the method of organizing the workers played a prominent part. The radical miners of the Rocky Mountain region believed at that time, as the much stronger United Mine Workers believe today, that unionism should be established on the basis of the whole industry rather than the trade or craft. The Communists of that day—although that title was not yet current in this country—rallied to the support of the Western miners and in 1905 the two groups launched the Industrial Workers of the World—the famous I. W. W., or "wobblies."

The I. W. W. is not now, and never has been except in scattered districts, a really potent labor union. But its syndicalist philosophy, exalting the common laborer and attacking the privileged position of the aristocratic craft unions, has had profound influence on the American labor movement. This has been increasingly true with the development of mass-production industries, which tend to minimize the factor of individual technical skill and throw together huge masses of men experienced in only a few simple techniques of manufacture or assembly.

Even under the benevolent autocracy of Samuel Gompers, changes recognizing this pressure, and forwarding the extension of some degree of industrial unionism, were taking place within the A. F. of L. As a result perhaps one-third of the unions which compose the federation now regard an entire industry, or a major branch of an industry, as the basis of their organization. There has been no open opposition to this trend on the part of the A. F. of L. executive and to some extent, as through encouragement to the so-called "Federal unions," organization of the unskilled along semi-industrial lines has been actively forwarded. But care has been taken to see that the character of the federation as a whole should not be changed from a craft to a "one big union" basis.

To some extent this resistance may be due to the anxiety of individuals to protect their privileges. Representatives of relatively unimportant unions, like the glass blowers, granite cutters, cigar makers, teamsters and photo-engravers, have long exercised a disproportionate influence in the A. F. of L. executive council. But beneath the personal element is a deep underlying difference of policy. The craft unions have always stood for direct dealings between employers and employes, mistrusting State intervention in labor problems. And they have, also in contrast to industrial unionists, opposed independent political action by organized labor.

Industrial unionism today is not nearly as radical as when it was under I. W. W. leadership. Its implications now favor state socialism rather than communism. And the development of mass production, together with the organic defects of craft unionism revealed by perpetual jurisdictional disputes, have made the movement now headed by John Lewis far more logical and socially desirable than it once seemed. Yet these changes have only served to sharpen the fundamental differences between the industrial and craft philosophy, and to make the present crisis in the A. F. of L. the more significant.

For the United Mine Workers, as their actions at the present convention attest, are anxious to do more than capture the A. F. of L. machinery for the cause of modified industrial unionism. They are also determined to utilize the machinery of government to solve the problems of their industry—as shown by the pressure they have put behind the Guffey act. And, as a corollary, they are prepared to launch their union into active politics, indicated by their indorsement not of the Democratic Party, but of President Roosevelt personally as the miners' candidate.

Here is a very big change, of interest and import to circles far wider than the ranks of organized labor. It indicates a trend toward what may properly be called a governmental rather than an independent trade unionism. And this in turn postulates a much greater degree of governmental control over trade unionism than has ever been witnessed in this country in the past.

Seemingly it is the underlying intention of John Lewis to capture the A. F. of L. for this new creed of public unionism. Probably he does not really wish to force a secession which would split the A. F. of L. from top to bottom. But in his present occupation with tactical maneuvers he is apparently overlooking certain implications of his stand. These may be summarized by saying that if the miners claim the advantages and privileges of public servants they must also be prepared to accept the accompanying responsibilities and obligations.

The most obvious of these obligations, of course, would be forfeiture of the right to strike in handling a commodity deemed by those who work it to be affected with a public interest. That is what has happened in Germany and Italy, where free trade unionism has been obliterated by the state control which Mr. Lewis, perhaps not yet consciously, appears to favor.

The Two-Edged Yardstick.

When the Tennessee Valley Authority was created the public heard a great deal about the establishment of a "yardstick" to measure the reasonableness of electric power charges by private utilities. In the current annual report of the TVA that aspect of the experiment is studiously avoided. First emphasis is given to navigation, flood control, the development of fertilizer, and national defense.

A financial statement shows that the TVA has invested in its various programs a total of $48,487,528. Although a footnote informs the reader that allocations of cost between navigation, flood control and electricity production are still pending, the outlay for navigation and flood control is listed as $41,185,237. Investment in the electricity program is placed at a mere $3,142,452. Apparently the production and sale of power is, after all, a relatively insignificant function of TVA.

This view of the Tennessee Valley experiment is entirely consistent with Director Lilienthal's recent speeches. He has told the public that the TVA is merely engaging in "a familiar and traditional function of the national Government—the providing of an interstate highway of transportation and the control of destructive waters on an interstate stream." Incidental to that objective, the Government has created potential power resources which can be developed "with a relatively small additional investment."

The reason for now playing down the power-development aspect of the TVA is almost too obvious for statement. In its ordeal before the Supreme Court the fate of TVA is likely to turn upon the question of whether or not its power program is incidental to the control of floods and the improvement of navigation. But out of this strenuous effort to cover the TVA with a presumption of constitutionality another difficulty arises to undermine the "yardstick" theory.

If the power developed from Federal dams in the Tennessee River is merely incidental to other major governmental functions, can its cost be fairly measured against that of a product of private industry? "The electric rates established by contractors who purchase power from the Authority," says the report, "are substantially lower than the average rates throughout the United States." When dams are built by the Government for the purpose of improving navigation there would seem to be no limit to which local power rates might be reduced. But should the taxpayers of the Nation subsidize this specially-favored group of electricity consumers?

Crossing Their Teas.

The New York Tea Party of 1936 has gone into action. Quite different from the more famous one which took place in Boston 163 years ago, it involves taste rather than taxes. In spite of war clouds, labor disputes and Supreme Court rulings, the Government has taken time out to make its annual selection of the All-American Tea Tasters' Team. They remain the same seven palate purists who sniffed and sipped for their country's sake in 1935.

The purpose of such governmental appraisal is to secure the same high standards in American tea that prevailed last year. Before each Varick street vigilante has drunk his fill he will have sampled 1,000 brands on a depressing average of 166 varieties a day. Not a flaw in a carload gets by—an expert taster can detect one at 20 paces before the average housewife can say "Formosa Oolong."

Tea-time in Japan and Great Britain holds a significance which has not as yet made itself felt in the swift tempo of our national life. The Japanese look on it as a ritual betokening welcome and friendship. In England, everyone from king to cabby sets aside a few moments of the afternoon in which to indulge in a cup of the "venerable liquid."

In this country, tea for two is regarded as a tune rather than a tradition. But if we should adopt the Dickensian slogan of "Polly, put the kettle on," we can brew with the best of them. To this end, seven samplers sit in a Manhattan laboratory, sipping and settling the savour of Japan green, Java, scented orange Pekoe, South China and so ad infinitum.

Federal Reserve Board.

From The Dallas Morning News.

The appointment of the new Federal Reserve Board by President Roosevelt may be accepted as the beginning of a new chapter in American banking history. A new chapter was made possible by the provisions of the amended banking act passed in 1935. The new board will put these provisions into practical operation.

The Federal Reserve Board now becomes definitely the head of the American banking and credit system. Its large new powers for raising and lowering the reserve requirements of member banks and its authority to control margin requirements in stock market transactions, together with its predominant voice in the operation of the reserve system's open market policy, put it in position to control credit and, indirectly, to control price trends in this country under any but extraordinary conditions such as war or a disastrously unbalanced national budget. The board has the authority. Its mettle probably will soon be tested because the forces operating in the direction of credit inflation are gaining momentum.

Senate Qualifications.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have been a constant reader of your valuable paper for many years. I have been glad to see what favorable changes have been made under the new management, and until this morning, I have greatly enjoyed your editorials, because they have always been most fair and to the point.

However, in today's paper your editorial on Huey Long's Proxy—I feel does a great injustice to a woman who has proven in a great many ways that she has made good as a housewife and mother, two of the most outstanding factors these days of easy divorce and card-playing and cocktail-drinking mothers.

It seems to me it would have been much better for you to have awaited Mrs. Long's entrance into the Senate and after seeing her perform, have written an editorial about her, but to judge her before she has taken her seat, is certainly one of the most spiteful, catty things I have read lately, especially coming from The Post.

I wager you anything you want to bet that she will not be locked up for being drunk as a male Congressman was during the holiday season. And I'll bet she conducts herself in a way that will not only do credit to her and her family but the women of America.

With only one or two exceptions we do not have many women lawmakers that we can be proud of, so why not give Mrs. Long the same opportunity you have given other women in Congress And if you do, I bet she will measure up to our just expectation of her. I am for Mrs. Huey P. Long, and as a mother, wife and public-spirited citizen I want to go on record now for her. She will make mistakes, yes, but they will be honest ones. Why not get back of this young widow and help her to make good?

"Modern" Graduation.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Years ago when I used to try to encourage my children in the way of education, I would tell them if they would go to school and try to do as well as they possibly could some day they would get a diploma, and, oh, how people would clap!

Then came the day when my oldest, a boy, was to receive his diploma from junior high. I could hardly wait to express my enthusiasm, while I pictured the graduating class, with the girls all in spotless white and the boys in their new suits. And I could see them stepping out with their bright, glad faces to receive that wonderful diploma, with the continual pour of encore raining after each name called, and I wondering if I could stand the joy of hearing my own boy's name called out, and if my hands would have the strength to clap the way I felt.

Then came the dawn: I was there, and the class was coming in to their graduation. But, the girls were not in white. They wore pastel shades, with dresses nearly reaching the floor, and everyone had the look of doom on their faces. When they finally came out to get their diplomas we were told we must not clap, and we had to swallow the lump in our throat, and clench our hands.

This is modern graduation, but give me the old-fashioned graduation with the girls all in simple white and the boys in some kind of light trousers with dark coats and their faces shining and bright, eager for their first step to success, with the rain of applause after each name is called, and their hearts rising with joy and gratefulness.

Smith's "Somersault."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: After observing in The Post of January 28 Mr. Schriftgiesser's word picture of how Alfred E. Smith was supposed to have ingratiated himself in the hearts of the hewers of stone and the carriers of water, it is not difficult to assume that when he arose to speak at the Liberty League banquet his position was as incompatible as was that of big-hearted, honest little Ali Baba up in the tree surrounded by the 40 thieves. What a somersault from this pedestal of esteem to the major attraction at a cheap banquet topped off with cheap oratory.

He threatens to "walk out" of the national convention. Isn't Al computing his chicks in the embryo? It may be that the voters in New York will want to know how it is possible to walk out of a place into which he has not been permitted to walk. With a college professor from a steel town substituting wisecracks for logic; with a splenetic tirade unbroken in its criticism of the Chief Executive by a Kentucky judge, Al Smith's fulmination was a fitting finale to a shindig sponsored by an organization which utilized the Constitution as a smoke screen by which to attack the President of the United States.

"To Promote Scandal."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The bill introduced in Congress by Representative Edward W. Curley, of this city, prohibiting contempt action by the courts for refusal by newspaper reporters to reveal the sources of their information should be entitled: "A bill to promote scandal-mongering and irresponsible charges against individuals."

If enacted, this bill would make it impossible for sensation-seeking reporters to malign persons suspected of racketeering or other offenses against the laws, without danger of being called upon to furnish proof of their charges, on the ground that their information was "confidential."

As a newspaper writer for nearly 50 years, I have a high opinion of the great body of reporters, but unfortunately there are among them some whose stock-in-trade is the invention of sensational stories which they peddle for gain. These fakers have too often based their crime stories on very flimsy rumors, and if there were no remedy in the power of the courts to demand proof of their allegations, no citizen's reputation would be secure.

Slow-Poke Drivers.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your article in today's Post regarding slow-poke motorists in middle of street is timely. If the traffic police officials would pay more attention to this class of lawbreakers they would automatically reduce the number of speedsters and the number of accidents.

The tendency to make up for lost time after exasperating delays by middle-of-the-road slow-pokes is adherent in most motorists. Such unnecessary delays lead to erratic emotions. They induce otherwise sane drivers to take unusual chances in traffic. They are the direct cause of much reckless driving.

The Political Plot.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In re the letters in your paper of January 30, condemning Al Smith. We are so used to political rottenness, it is hard to conceive of a man who unselfishly puts his country before himself or his party.

The fact that Al Smith began his remarks by plainly avowing that he desired no political preferment seems to go for nothing. It is to be expected that Republican politicians should condemn the New Deal.

C. H. H. RUMBOLD.
Washington, Jan. 30.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: There was an encouraging note in Al Smith's speech that your correspondents have, so far, failed to mention.

Mr. Smith says that it won't be the rich fellow or the poor fellow that pays our country's debts, but the middle class, "backbone," and that we will pay them in indirect taxes and not "know we are paying it."

Well, Al, that's all right with us! If there is anything that can make us "backbones" happy it is dentistry that can't be felt and taxes that we don't know we are paying.

G. T. ABRIBAT.
Washington, Jan. 31.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Leaving former Gov. Smith's wandering truisms for something in his speech more pertinent to the tremendous questions which confronted President Roosevelt when he assumed office, the following quotation is made from his recent speech: "No administration in the history of the country came into power with a more simple, a more clear, a more inescapable mandate than did the party that was inaugurated on the 4th of March, 1933."

If the Governor had added that no President since George Washington had been confronted at his inauguration with such distressful conditions of all agriculture, all commerce, and all industry as existed when Franklin D. Roosevelt took the solemn oath of the high office of President he would have presented to his audience a fairer statement of the circumstances he was discussing. When Franklin D. Roosevelt took the wheel of the ship of state it was almost foundering in a howling gale of adverse winds. This was no time for him to give nice consideration to the means by which to save the vessel, to the command of which he had been suddenly summoned. His ears were penetrated by the cries: "Save us or we sink, protect us or we perish."

How did he respond to this situation? Timidly? Not at all, but with a courage only a masterman could possess. He ordered every bank to suspend payments that their resources might be protected, and that he and all others concerned might be given a breathing spell in which to think before being required to act.

In fairly estimating the value of the great service which President Roosevelt has rendered his country, there are two fundamental facts which must be made clear. First, what were the conditions when he became President; second, what are they today. Can anyone doubt that the value of all commodities on March 4, 1933, were almost, if not quite, at the lowest ebb in all history; that labor was more widely unemployed than ever before; that finance was bordering on the frenzy of panic; that all industry was stagnated, and that transportation by rail was in a most deplorable condition; that the stocks and bonds of its owning corporations, representing the savings of millions of people, had plunged down to the lowest value in their records?

We can come now to the only part of Gov. Smith's speech which requires serious consideration. Was President Roosevelt justified in using the means he employed in accomplishing the great results which have flowed from his efforts.

While absolutely independent and complete, there are no inflexible boundaries which separate the three great divisions of our National Government, the executive, legislative and judicial. And if there has been such a mistake made by our present great Executive in the labors he has had to perform, greater than those of any real or fabled person since the days of Hercules, they can be easily corrected after he has guided the ship of state out of the troubled waters through which it has plowed its way since March 4, 1933, into the quite harbor of his second Administration.

R. V TAYLOR.
Mobile, Ala., Jan. 27.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Al Smith does speak with "ain'ts" and "woiks," and "raddios," but, by the eternal, he has guts, honesty and fair vision, things some of his cheap critics sadly lack.

In the days to come some "East Side guy" may sit in the White House, and let us hope he'll be common enough to be honest, illiterate enough to preclude verbal "artful dodging," and still smart enough to need no "brain trust" to befog his own and the public mind.

The Post Impressionist

Not Only Emily!

Post Office, Wednesday.

EDWARD PEALE'S literary treasure-hunt appears to be prospering prodigiously. In a letter received from him today, he says:

"We are used to learning of newfound cupboards and overlooked trunks in an old homestead at Amherst. Supplements to the opus of Emily Dickinson come with almost regularity. But who has dreamed that America had not the whole of its greatest—Emerson?"

* * *

"His living relatives tell the readers of the vast Emerson diaries that the editors have omitted some list of 'Mr. Emerson's.' But the way in which I happened upon the poems I am sending you (a way it would take too much time to explain now) makes me suspect that it was more probably Emerson himself than his grandsons, who suppressed them. Indeed, I am convinced that the family know nothing of these poems.

* * *

"Emerson was a good poet. He has not had to wait so long for his concordance as Petrarch had; and Saintsbury says, 'He might have been a very considerable poet.' At all events, I believe he had enough appreciation of poetry to have held back the six fragments I am inclosing. And I especially think so because some of them look like preliminary sketches for more finished poems he actually did publish.

* * *

"'Tat Twam Asi' can clearly be seen as a reaching toward what he afterward achieved in 'Brahma.' If I had time, I could date it, not merely before the masterpiece just named, but, by study of his reading lists, approximately in the year it must have been written. The 'Fable,' for more reasons than the title, is evidently a groping toward the distinctly superior fable about the Mountain and the Squirrel, which I used to recite at school. As for the Goethe trifle, do you know of any other English version of it? And is this one—signed in the regular way with Hafiz's name in the last lines—itself a version by Goethe or of a Persian orginal?"

* * *

Minorities.

While old tradition droops her wings
And power crumbles from his throne,
Give ear to that mute voice which sings

Compensation.

One balance, then the other, slips
And neither kicks the beam.
The winds that shipwreck run the ships,

Tat Twam Asi.

If the pursuer of the goat
Fall in the precincts of the moon,
He will not need a silver groat
To purchase a transcendent spoon.

Because, through steady rise and fall
Of tides within the outer sphere,
That he who nothing has, hath all,
And nothing, having all, is clear.

Translation.

(From Goethe's "West-Oestliche Diwan?")

Against the rose-grown mountain-slope
The youthful poet soft-reclining
Saith, "How shall Hafiz have a hope
Of Love, if he have none of dining?"

Fable.

The ocean and the cormorant
Had an argument.
The one applied
The epithet of Fidget.
Two replied,
"I may be a midget
Compared to your great size and noise;
But avoirdupois
Is not all nature values. You can reach,
And only twice a day, the beach.
That you cannot get past,
But must subside;
Do neither very fast.
Your lazy tide,
Your flows and ebbs,
Seem more like fidgeting to me.
My feet have webs,
I can swim on the sea,
Upon the beach can stand,
I Can fly."

Stars.

Aldebaran, Arcturus, and Bootes,
Had shone above for many million years
Before Elkanah Jones and David Sargent
Began to plow and harrow neighboring fields.
Friendly for long, at last there came a quarrel,
Because Elkanah's cocker-spaniel bit
A morsel out of David's calf; but when
David was needed at his widow's sick- ed
(Prolepsis: in a fit she shot him dead),
Elkanah sowed both fields. He was beginning
The final furrow, when the news was brought,
And taking off his hat to mop his forehead,
Exclaimed in homely words, but which concealed
A sense of hidden worlds, "I want to know!"
No, nor Bootes, nor Aldebaran.

Love Of Epaulets.

London, Feb. 4.

THE tendency of many Americans to dress up in cab starters' costumes and march in parades weighted down by golden epaulets and burnished helmets is looked upon by our friends, the English, with tolerant amusement. They do this sort of thing very well in the Old World, and nowhere as well as in London on occasions of royal jubilation or mourning.

But the United States broke away from England a long time ago and in doing so expressed a strong dislike for the gaudy trappings of royalty and rank, a preference which has since been reiterated from time to time, though with diminishing vehemence by various sockless statesmen. William Jennings Bryan belonged to this general type, for although he did wear socks, he often went without his coat in warm weather and liked to stick his thumbs down under his suspenders and stretch them in a gesture of plain democracy.

Mr. Smith Brookhart, of Iowa, pointedly shunned the contemptible smoking jacket or Tuxedo, which he regarded as the livery of the aristocrat, and Texas once sent up to Congress a sterling patriot known as "Cyclone" Davis, who had committed a campaign poem in which he boasted that he wore no man's collar, not even his own.

• • • •

SENATOR JOE ROBINSON, of Arkansas, on the other hand, has no worse political handicap in his apparel for the approval of his peasant public than the genteel white piping on his vest which gives him the appearance of a Wall Street tool.

Nevertheless, as every secretary of a hustling Chamber of Commerce has discovered in bidding for conventions, conclaves and reuniens, there is a large element of Americans who retain with their democracy an irresistible desire to harness themselves into buckle and belt armor and sash at least once a year and go swinging down some wide Main street to the music of the band and the plaudits of the crowd. The boardwalk in Atlantic City during the convention season presents an endless succession of plain American druggists, grocers, lawyers, dentists, insurance agents and high school teachers parading with helmet and sword, and the drill team competition of the fraternal societies is a familiar occasion in our social life.

Our friends the English contend that these uniforms and the ceremonies which they adorn are meaningless, because they have no origin in antiquity and are ridiculous, because they betray in the average American the stubborn survival of the love of pomp and circumstance which the American spirit pretends to despise.

• • • •

IN England the King's champion, for example, holds an office which has descended from a time when the King, like the late "Kingfish" of Louisiana, carried a personal bodyguard to do his fighting for him. Every button, strap and tassel on the most elaborate uniform which was to be seen in the recent funeral procession refers back to some definite occasion. The occasion may be accessible only to serious students of heraldry, but given sufficient incentive they will trace it back through the archives.

So it gives our friends the English some refined amusement to consider the grandiose titles of certain grand exalted potentates or supreme imperial klockards of our fraternal life and to examine the accouterments of the University of Illinois Band. They marvel at moving pictures of the American Legion on parade in their full dress uniforms and like to inquire where this one acquired the white breeches or that one the gold helmet.

For the British army once upon a time wore gaudy apparel to the wars and has maintained the forms for ceremonial appearances, whereas the legion wore khaki on active services and its present splendors (sic) originated in the tailor shop of the wholesale costumer.

Now, if the American Legion wished to be historically correct without loss of splendor this would be possible because the Smithsonian Institution in Washington contains a great array of musty and somewhat motheaten specimens of old American Army costumes which once were regulation dress for active service. There are tall patent leather hats, surmounted by cockades, which were intended to frighten the Mexicans by suggesting an army of giants, and there are bibs and fancy work of no little beauty, all of which once saw service under fire, although they may have been created, in the first place, not by any definite historical incident, but merely by somebody who liked nice things.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Campaign Issue.

When politicians gather
In parley of powwow
There is a burning question
That darkens ev'ry brow;
This is the single topic
That agitates their talk:
Will Al get off the wagon
And take that little walk?

II.

"How are his dogs?" they're asking.
And, "Can they stand a hike?"—
"Are they in shape to take it
As he goes down the pike?"
They wonder if he means it
And ask themselves how far
The Warrior can walk in The shape his arches are.

III.

"How are his legs?" they query,
And seek the latest news
On whether he is buying
The latest walking shoes;
"Has Al grown used to riding
In limousines?" they ask,
"Or does a hike still find him Quite equal to the task?"

IV.

"Has he become flat-footed?"
And, "Are his doggies sore?"—
"Does old Shank's Mare still serve him
As in the days of yore?"—
These are the queries echoed
Where politicians meet;
Is "How are Alfred's feet?"

V.

Oft has this land been shaken
By issues grave and great;
Oft have momentous questions

Farm Law Repeal

sylvania, who argued AAA invalidation before the Supreme Court. In a letter to the St. Louis Meat Packers Association, Pepper declared the impounded taxes "did not belong to the Government," and Wallace should retract.

He said: "The Supreme Court decided the tax must be paid back to the man who had posted it and whose money it was. It is this decision which Secretary Wallace has characterized as a 'legalized steal.' Presumably he had hoped for a decision which would enable his department to appropriate and spend the money.

"If to return the depositor's money to the depositor is a legalized steal, it must follow that to give it to the Secretary would have been a steal with no qualifying word to excuse it. This is so far beyond the realm of reasonable dispute that the Secretary's attack upon the depositors and the court can be explained only on the theory that he spoke in hot blood and with no time for reflection. If so, he would rise greatly in everybody's esteem if he were to retract his slander with the same publicity which attended its original publication."

Only last week Treadway had called for Wallace's impeachment in the House after the Secretary had termed refund of $180,000,000 in processing taxes, under the Supreme Court's rice millers' decision, "the greatest legalized steal in American history."

The Massachusetts Republican protested again yesterday because he said the farm chieftain had reiterated his charges, and had even spoken them for sound pictures to be distributed over the country.

Referring to Wallace as "this notorious man" "this misfit" and this "sensational, notoriety seeker," Treadway told the House:

"I have stated that in my judgment a man in official position making such a scurrilous statement deserved impeachment. I repeat the statement at this time, and I do it largely on account of events following my making this remark last week. • • •

"What People?"

"But it would be useless for me, believing as I do, even to bring an impeachment procedure in this House. You know the reason why it would be useless, but I say a quicker way of getting at this man and his kind—and there are plenty of them—surer way will be exercised in November next, when the electorate of the country show their united opinion of such a contemptible statement as the Secretary of Agriculture made."

Chairman Marvin Jones, of the House Agriculture Committee, rose to his feet when Treadway said no one has "as yet defended" the Secretary's statement, but the Administration appeared to have "acquiesced" by not showing any interest.

Jones asked what Treadway thought should be done with the $180,000,000.

"It should be returned to the people who paid it illegally and unconstitutionally, and that is what the Supreme Court said should be done with it," Treadway replied.

"What people?" asked Jones.

"The money never went into the Federal Treasury at all," Treadway continued, "and could not have been stolen even though Secretary Wallace said it was. Will that answer the question?"

"The gentleman does not touch the question," Jones retorted.

"Oh, yes, I do," said Treadway, "I hit it right between the eyes."

Jones was applauded when he asked for 15 minutes to reply to Treadway. The Texan charged the Massachusetts Representative with "raising a smoke screen" and "wholly ignoring the issue."

Jones declared that in all of the testimony before House and Senate committees, no evidence had been presented to show processors had not either charged the AAA taxes back to the farmer or passed them on to the consumer.

"The fact remains," he said, "that the money is in the hands of somebody to which it does not belong."

He said Wallace had done "magnificent work, and this work can not be destroyed by a single sentence, whether that sentence was justified or not."

The Senate voted for repeal of the cotton, tobacco and potato control laws after less than one minute's consideration, and a brief exchange between Chairman Ellison D. Smith, of the Senate Agriculture Committee, and Senate Minority Leader Charles L. McNary.

Under the resolution offered by Smith, all but one minor provision of the Bankhead act, empowering the Secretary of Agriculture to use a $500,000 fund for development of new uses for cotton, was repealed.

The House will get the resolution today, and may act at once.

The Supreme Court, which had up for argument the suit of Gov. Talmadge and the State of Georgia for invalidation of the Bankhead act, continued the case until March 2, after counsel for both the Government and the State of Georgia agreed to the postponement.

Study Changes Today.

As the Senate delayed action on the farm program, two other bills carrying agriculture appropriations were sent to conference by the two Houses. The Senate disagreed to the House cut of from $60,000,000 to $40,000,000 in the seed and feed loan bill, and the House disagreed to Senate changes in the deficiency appropriations bill, which carries $296,000,000 for payments to farmers who complied with 1935 AAA contracts.

So-called modifications in the Administration's farm bill, approved by the House Committee, and subject for scrutiny today by the Senate Agriculture Committee, call for some curtailment in the discretionary powers proposed for the Secretary of Agriculture.

Policies directing "a continuous and stable supply of agricultural commodities" and "re-establishment and maintenance of farmers' purchasing power," were transferred from the temporary section of the bill to the State-aid provisions, not effective until 1938.

These will be considered by the Senate Committee today, along with other changes said to have been proposed by the Secretary of Agriculture.

Treadway, in his House attack on Wallace, said that motion pictures of the Secretary making his "steal" charges were booed in Massachusetts, and declared criticism of Wallace was not confined to Republicans. In support of this statement he quoted from the Congressional Record statements by Thomas L. Blanton, of Texas, to the effect that Wallace in his State had done more than anyone else to hurt the New Deal.

Jumping to his feet, Blanton replied:

"The gentleman knows that a family has a right to criticize its own members. I have a right to chastise Wallace, but I object to you Republicans doing it."

Meanwhile, out in Crookston, Minn., M. L. Wilson, Assistant Secretary of Agriculture, last night declared in discussing the invalidation of AAA, that "decisions of the court have not always been final." Speaking at the Northwestern School of Agriculture he said, however, that he was "neither encouraging nor discouraging" any attempt to amend the Constitution.

Declaring that AAA would have been held constitutional if the Supreme Court "had happened to have five liberals on its membership instead of three," he said:

"The court is a legal last resort, but in our great democracy the final resort is the people themselves, and there have been several instances where the people themselves have proceeded to prevent the opinion of the court from deciding finally an issue against the wishes of the people."

In illustration he cited the income tax amendment passed after the court held a tax law unconstitutional.

Old Lone Star.

STATES, men, ranches, and tall tales come no bigger anywhere than they do in the case of Texas. Ever since 1528, when the first Spaniards were wrecked on the coast and came out into Mexico with bulging eyes, filled with hearsay tales of the Seven Golden Cities of Cibola, Texas, has been a symbol of amplitude and abundance. The old Lone Star State celebrates this year the centennial of its independence from Mexico, but that is only the crucial event in a long and gorgeous history. George O'Brien John has had much to condense, much to imply with a hint, in his compressed little volume—"Texas History" (Holt, $1.50).

A State which could swallow the New England States, New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Maryland and Virginia has scant need to be modest. Not that you would ever lay that soft impeachment to Texas—you can about no Texan down since his forebears learned the ringing cry: "Remember the Alamo!"

• • • •

But Mr. John has merely to state the facts of celebratory pride. The first Spanish expeditions, bewildered and daunted and fearful of the great plains; the courageous fathers of the Church setting out their little missions amid hostile Indians; the royal Spanish rule from Mexico (most of Texas was a part of Coahuila, with the capital at Saltillo south of the Rio Grande); the entry of American expeditions in 1800, filibustering for American rule; bloody little wars over the boundary which the Louisiana Purchase had not decided; Stephen F. Austin, "the father of Texas," and his first bands of permitted American colonists in 1821; growing tension between Americans and Mexicans (the latter now independent of Spain; the massacre at the Alamo, the great victory of Gen. Sam Houston over the Mexicans at San Jacinto in 1836; the independent republic, with Houston twice its president; then the entry of Texas into the Union (1845) and the ensuing Mexican War—all this but leads us into the rich history of Texas as most of us think of that region: the buffalo-hunting, Indian-fighting, gun-toting Texas of rangers, cowboys and ranchers.

Mr. John's valuable little book gives only the outline of Texan history, but it is a syllabus to romance.

• • • •

ALL is as it should be if Mr. John leads you on to the fine feathers of Texas' plume. You might well begin with Marquis James' "The Raven," a biography, splendid in color and action, of that grand old man, Sam Houston. Few books could be better collateral reading on the adage of there being giants on the earth for the old days.

Yet somehow Houston is a bit pale compared with that figure who clustered legends about him as a comet trails its tail—Davy Crockett of the long rifle, who we are told, fought bears as huge as a hay-stack and alligators whose bulk would fill a river, and who lighted his pipe from a bit of the sun's flaming crest. If you would be told more of the great Davy, go to Constance Rourke's "Davy Crockett," as deft a compilation of American legend as we have ever had.

Pure fact is Walter P. Webb's volume, "Texas Rangers," a book wise in its pictures of frontier Texas life as a prime factor of our westward expansion and full-blooded in its stories of the men who made the six-shooter worth rather more than Blackstone in local jurisprudence. And for more tall tales of strong silent men, you would do no better than to enter the pages of "Triggernometry: a Gallery of Gun-Fighters," in which Eugene Cunningham follows the bravely colored careers of a dozen or so hard-bitten men when Texas and the Southwest were in their romantic heyday.

The Lone Star State need not quote us statistics of magnitude when we read of its past.

50 Claim Bills Passed By House Within Hour

By the Associated Press.

The House passed 50 bills to pay small private claims in less than an hour yesterday and then adjourned for lack of other business.

Majority Leader Bankhead congratulated the Representatives on cleaning up the calendar of so-called private bills in the first month of the session. He said this feat had not been duplicated in his 20 years of House membership.

Disposition of the private measures has been expedited under a new House rule permitting unpassed proposals to be placed in omnibus bills for possible later consideration.

7 Deaths in Camp Fire Are Ruled Accidental

San Bernardino, Calif., Feb. 4 (AP).—A coroner's jury decided late today that the deaths of seven men in a dormitory fire at Parker Dam construction camp were accidental.

The inquest failed to establish the cause of yesterday's blaze. The 10 members of the jury, assembled at the Colorado River damsite nearly 200 miles east of here in the same huge county, made no recommendations.

R. E. Williams, coroner, questioned workers in an effort to determine whether there was evidence to support an expressed belief the fire was of incendiary origin.

Pepper Brands Wallace's Plan A 'Plain Steal'

Processors' Counsel Assails Secretary's Comment on Tax Return.

Commenting on Secretary of Agriculture Wallace's recent statement that the return to processors of money paid in processing taxes was a "legalized steal," former Senator George Wharton Pepper, of Pennsylvania, yesterday replied that to have given the citizen's money to Secretary Wallace to appropriate and spend" would have been "a steal with no qualifying word to excuse it."

The assertion was made in a letter addressed to the St. Louis Meat Packers Association by the former Senator, who was counsel for many of the processors. The letter, made public here by the association's secretary, reads in full:

"You have asked me to comment upon statements by the Secretary of Agriculture respecting the decision of the Supreme Court in the Rice Millers case. This I am glad to do, because in the AAA litigation I represented a number of pork packers who were rescued by the Supreme Court from financial embarrassment and in some instances from bankruptcy. Against them as well as against the court the Secretary's attack was directed. The court, of course, needs no defense from me, but I can be of some service to my clients if, by stating the actual facts, I can counteract or to some extent mitigate the damage which the Secertary has done to their good name.

Packers' Plight.

"First—It is to be noted that all my clients at the outset paid month by month the processing taxes assessed against them and also paid the increased price of hogs which resulted from diminished production. These taxes in some instances absorbed 15 or 20 per cent of the gross receipts of the packer. In order to keep on paying these exactions he had to draw upon surplus or borrow from the bank. Secretary Wallace says in substance that the sums refunded to the packers were enormous. So they were; but, being precisely equal to the taxes previously assessed, it follows that the taxes themselves were enormous. In point of fact they forced many prosperous concerns into red ink and confronted them with receivership. Those who paid the exactions and were still able to operate at a profit were concerns engaged in processing both taxed and untaxed raw material. Out of the latter they made enough money to offset operating losses caused by the tax.

"Second—The conspiracy between the Government and the producers to limit supply and raise prices resulted in all the evils which our antitrust laws were enacted to prevent. The packer who sells the poor man's food, and knows that it is to his own interest to keep down prices, was favored by the tax to become the consumer's enemy instead of his friend. The packer indeed foupd that he could not "pass on" to the consumer the amount of the tax, but he strove to get at least such an increase of price as would be sufficient to compensate him for the higher cost of his hogs. This to some extent he succeeded in doing, and that increase in turn raised the price of pork products paid by the man with the market basket. When Secretary Wallace asserts that my clients "passed on" the tax to the consumer he is stating what he knows he cannot prove. In point of fact it is the Secretary of Agriculture more than anyone else who is fairly chargeable with raising the price of pork products to the consumer. It must, on the other hand, be gratifying to the Justices of the Supreme Court to realize that their decision was instrumental in bringing those prices down within the poor man's reach.

Money Not Government's.

"Third—It will be recalled that prior to the decision in the Hoosac Mills case, hundreds of packers who could no longer continue tax payments had obtained injunctions restraining further tax collection pending final decision upon the legality of the exaction. The injunctions or restraining orders were issued on condition that all or part of accruing taxes should meanwhile be deposited in the registry of the several courts, the deposits to be paid over to the Government if the tax was declared valid otherwise to be returned to the depositor. Once the Supreme Court in the Hoosac Mills case had decided that the tax was invalid, I feel sure that any disinterested and fair-minded man ehosen as umpire in the other pending cases would have decided that the terms of the deposit must be complied with. Whatever might be the equities, if any, between processor, retailer and consumer, one fact was uncontrovertible, namely, that the deposited money did not belong to the Government. Accordingly the Supreme Court decided that it must be paid back to the man who had posted it and whose money it was. It is this decision which Secretary Wallace has characterized as a "legalized steal." Presumably he had hoped for a decision which would enable his department to appropriate and spend the citizen's money. If to return the depositor's money to the depositor is a legalized steal, it must follow that to give it to the Secretary would have been a steal with no qualifying word to excuse it. This is so far beyond the realm of reasonable dispute that the Secretary's attack upon the depositors and the court can be explained only on the theory that he spoke in hot blood and without time for reflection. If so, he would rise greatly in everybody's esteem if he were to retreat his slander with the same publicity which attended its original publication."

Borah Confers With Ohio G. O. P.

"Under the so-called favorite son plan, this privilege is denied them.

"To obtain an expression of popular will, it is my intention to place at least eight candidates for delegates at large in the field.

"I shall make a number of speeches in Ohio and present the issues as I see them."

Amplifies on Plans.

Later the Senator amplified this statement to say he would "enter delegates in the districts" as well as "at large."

Under the Ohio primary system, there are two ballots, one for the choice of delegates, and another expressing preference for a candidate.

Representative Hamilton Fish, jr. (Republican), New York, who early espoused the Idahoan's candidacy, and has been working for an "uninstructed" New York delegation in Borah's behalf, said he was "pleased" that the Senator formally had announced a position he knew he had held right along.

"I believe he will enter the primaries in Illinois, North Dakota, South Dakota, Oregon, Washington, and, I hope, California and Nebraska," Fish said.

Fish said Borah's supporters in New York will place pro-Borah candidates in the field in New York, if delegates are put forward who are definitely opposed to the Idahoan, although it is an uninstructed delegation Borah's friends are seeking.

"I may seek election myself as a delegate," he said.

"Borah's strength lies with the rank and file, and not with the big interests. But if he develops a strong vote in the Ohio and Illinois primaries, I think the East will support him."

Macy Is "Elated."

Associated Press dispatches from New York quoted W. Kingsland Macy, former chairman of the Republican State committee, and himself a Borah supporter, as "highly elated" at the announcement.

"There can be no question of his success in Ohio, and he's a 'cinch' in Oregon and Illinois," Macy said, but declared there would be a bitter fight in New York.

He said that "Old Guard" New Yorkers belittle his chances, "but I feel that the Senator has a splendid opportunity even in this State."

Ohio Democratic leaders, who saw in the announcement the promise of a divided Republican ticket, joyously hailed Borah's statement as "the best news we've heard."

In the campaign, which Borah actually opened with a series of radio addresses and speeches here, in New York, and elsewhere, he is expected to stress need for "liberalization" of the Republican Party, and renew his "smash the monopolies" battle cry.

In his speeches up to this time, he has never spoken as a candidate. In his next radio address, February 22 he will appear for the first time as an active seeker of the Republican nomination. Shortly afterward, he will again speak in New York and may take the stump in Ohio in March or April.

Judging from recent utterances, he probably will urge "more equitable distribution of wealth" and aid to the farmer, not by soak-the-rich taxation, but by curbing monopolies, restoring purchasing power and refinancing farm debts.

Favors $60 Pension.

In his recent New York address, he deserted the Townsendites, but declared for unemployment insurance and old-age pensions with $60 pensions for the aged retired.

Other planks in his platform probably will call for an isolationist policy in foreign affairs, close adherance to the Constitution, opposition to "regimentation," some measure of "controlled" inflation, Federal administration of unemployment relief and balancing of the budget when economies will permit.

His decision to enter the Ohio primaries followed more than an hour's conference with a delegation of Ohioans, including former Senator Roscoe C. McCulloch, of Worthington; John S. Knight and C. Nelson Sparks, of Akron; Max Myerovich, of Youngstown, and Daniel E. Morgan, of Cleveland.

Expanding on a statement by Borah that he will enter the Ohio primaries only if some leading candidate other than a "favorite son" does so, Knight said in a statement following the conference:

"The so-called 'favorite son' plan, concocted for the repudiated leadership of Walter Brown and Ed Schorr, is a deception that should be apparent to all. It denied the people of the State the right to express their will in the primary election, ironically enough the instrument that is supposed to give them that right.

"With Senator Borah's entrance into Ohio, the Republicans can decide for themselves whether they prefer the continued domination of the Old Guard in Ohio politics to the emancipation which the election of Borah delegates can give them. It will be a clear-cut decision. We welcome the outcome."

Ohio is permitted 52 delegates in the Republican convention, 8 of which will be chosen at large. Although Borah has hitherto been noncommittal on whether he would enter the Ohio primaries, he had indicated he would not enter Massachusetts and Pennsylvania, in the latter State because of the expense involved. He hinted yesterday he may change his mind about Pennsylvania.

Two months ago Borah authorized friends to use his name in Wisconsin, but in a statement issued at the time made clear that his principal objective was a liberal candidate and a liberal platform.

Associated Press dispatches from Boston yesterday quoted from a letter Borah sent Robert M. Washburn, president of the (T. R.) Roosevelt Club, of Boston, saying: "I am disposed to discourage you from going forward."

"I am of the opinion that we ought not to undertake a contest in Massachusetts," the Borah letter read. "I had not thought at any time that it would be a practical thing to do."

Meanwhile, the political pot was boiling all along the Washington front.

Senate Republicans were seeking to expand a campaign expenditures investigation resolution of Senate Democratic Leader Robinson to provide for a Senate expenditures committee inquiry into alleged political use of the $4,880,000,000 relief fund.

In a radio address, Representative Robert L. Bacon, (Republican), of New York, declared relief problems can be solved without "waste" which he attributed to "an ever-growing bureaucracy, centered at Washington" and "energetic application of the spoils system, and partisanship of the administration of relief."

Mrs. Roosevelt at a press conference said she would make no "partisan" speeches in the campaign.

Former Gov. Joseph B. Ely, of Massachusetts, (Democrat), but a member of the American Liberty League, said unless Administration policies are changed, re-election of Roosevelt is "an impossibility," according to Associated Press dispatches from Boston.

New Deal Assailed.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Feb. 4.—The Republican national committee tonight criticized, through a dramatized radio sketch, the asserted failure of the Democratic Administration to carry out its campaign promise of a balanced budget.

The program, broadcast via telephone over station WGN, Chicago, was the fourth weekly presentation of "Liberty at the Cross Roads."

President Roosevelt was quoted as saying in a campaign speech that he would reduce the cost of government by 25 per cent. The program went on to cite the creation of at least 50 new Government bureaus, employing more than 150,000 persons, under his Administration.

'Platform' of Borah Revealed by Record

By the Associated Press.

Some of Senator Borah's positions on public questions:

No foreign entanglements.

Strict enforcement of the antitrust laws.

Repeal of the reciprocal tariff law.

"Controlled expansion" of the currency.

Social legislation within the bounds of the Constitution.

Favors old-age pension of at least $50 a month for persons over 60.

Federal Office In New Orleans Is Ransacked

Election Data Gathered by U. S. Investigators Burned in Washroom.

By the United Press.

New Orleans, Feb. 4.—The looting of a Federal office, apparently by sympathizers of the Huey Long faction, threatened tonight to draw Federal agents into the cauldron of Louisiana politics.

A room in the customs house was ransacked over the week-end. All matter pertaining to the Democratic primary two weeks ago, gathered by Congressional investigators, was taken to a washroom and burned. There were reports on 1,500 cases of alleged fraud in the file—affidavits of alleged wrongdoing taken from citizens, complaints of false registrations, poll tax forgeries, intimidation and bribes with marked money. All were destroyed.

All inquiries concerning the robbery were referred to David W. Magae, chief of the New Orleans Division of the Department of Justice.

There were many aspects of a "Boston Tea Party" in Louisiana's latest political incident. Long leaders charged the Government "usurped the rights of a sovereign State" by sending investigators here.

Federal intreference was based on the ground that eight Congressmen from Louisiana were being nominated. The Long machine won the election in a landslide.

Earlier in the day there were inklings of peace-making between Washington and Louisiana. A postmistress, Mrs. Elizabeth Crawford, was appointed at Gretna, La., on recommendation of Representative Paul H. Maloney, a Long partisan. It was the first patronage given the Long forces since Huey's bolt.

By the Associated Press.

A certificate of the appointment of Mrs. Huey P. Long as Senator from Louisiana was presented to the Senate yesterday by Senator Overton (Democrat), Louisiana. He said Mrs. Long would arrive in a few days.

Ayres Named Head Of Consumers' Unit

By the Associated Press.

Clarence E. Ayres, teacher and writer, was chosen yesterday as director of the Consumers' Division of the Department of Labor. He will conduct price surveys and study other consumer problems.

Born in Lowell, Mass., in 1891, he was educated at Brown, Harvard and the University of Chicago. Since 1930 he has been professor of economics at the University of Texas.

Formerly he taught at Amherst College, Reed College, Ohio State University and the University of Wisconsin.

He succeeds Walton H. Hamilton, who has been made head of the Bureau of Research of the Social Security Board.

Senate Votes for Ban On Employes Coercion

By the Associated Press.

The Senate yesterday passed a bill by Senator Van Nuys (Democrat), of Indiana, making it unlawful "for any person or corporation to influence or attempt to influence, through fear or intimidation" the votes of employes in Presidential and Congressional elections.

The measure, which goes to the House, provides for a fine up to $5,000 for corporations which violate the prohibition and up to $1,000 for individuals who do not obey.

Senate Broadens Law On Federal Murder

The killing of Agriculture Department employes detailed to protect wild life or of employes of the National Park Service would be made a Federal offense under a bill passed yesterday by the Senate.

Play Tourney Opening Here Wins Applause

Amateur Thespians Present 4 Skits, to Stage More Tomorrow.

Spurred on to greater dramatic efforts through the posting of cash prizes for the first time, four of Washington's amateur producing groups last evening opened the 1936 One-Act Play Tournament at Roosevelt High School, presenting as the first in a series of five sets of preliminaries four productions which easily met last year's exceptional high standard.

First of the plays was "Where the Cross Is Made," an early Eugene O'Neill play, presented by the Jewish Community Center Dramatic Society. A stark and relentless drama of incipient and actual insanity—a theme later manifest in "Strange Interlude" and "Mourning Becomes Electra"—Samuel Lightman and Irvin Wollock did fine work as the demented seafaring father and son, while the sanity of the piece was given equally commendable interpretation by Milton O. Hirshfield, a doctor, and by Ethel Gottlieb, the daughter. Larry Levin, David Wallace and Sidney Levy had bits as apparitions. Sidney Gottlieb gave the piece fine direction.

"Juliet and Romeo," by Harry W. Gribble, was presented by the Thespian Society of Covenant-First Presbyterian Church, under the direction of Mrs. William H. Wagner, with music by Karlian Meyer. Taking place backstage after the completion of the Shakespearean tragedy, the play touches deftly on the love vs. career theme. Isaac Avery and Vernye Barrett did the title roles, with Emily Davis, Leo Quackenbush and Richard Thom supporting.

The real contender on the evening's line-up for the finals came when the Little Theater of Takoma Park presented Francois Coppee's "The Violin Maker of Cremona," a fragile, philosophical study of self-abnegation and unrequited love, mild perfidy and just retribution. Hugh M. Smythe, as Filippo, the hunchbacked apprentice, did a truly remarkable job with a role written in a verbose and somewhat outmoded style of playwriting, but his delineation transcended such trifles as dramaturgic style. Fred B. Linton, jr., Wil H. Carleton, Marie Staples, Frances Smythe and Margaret Collison completed the roster, whose efforts were exquisitely directed by Mr. Smythe.

The evening closed on a mildly satirical note, with overtones of genuine comedy, with the Troupers of East Washington Center offering "The Four-Flushers," Cleves Kinkhead's commentary of modern modes and manners in marital melanges. Towering over his fellow-players, whom he also directed, was Arthur Rhodes, as the knowing butler. It was a smooth, understanding interpretation that lended added versimiltude to the work of Dixie Diket, Viola Trilling, Albert Muehlaus and Toby Flax.

The judges for these preliminary contests are Mrs. William Channing Johnson, chairman; Dr. Patrick J. Lennox, Dr. M. C. Batchelder, C. Melvin Sharpe, Henry G. Roberts. The second set of preliminaries will be held tomorrow evening at the same place, with the Washington Players, the Wesley Heights Players, the Players Club of Central Community Center and the Little Theater of Alexandria presenting their entries. Charles Carroll, Educator, Dead

Providence, R. I., Feb. 4 (AP).—Dr. Charles Carroll, 59, State supervisor of public education, a member of the corporation of Providence College and vice president of the National Education Association, died today.

A native of Providence, Charles Carroll received the degrees of A. B., A. M. and Ph. D. from Brown University. He was graduated from Harvard University in 1901 with the degree of LL. B. He was awarded the honorary degree of LL. D. in 1931 by Providence College. He was a Phi Beta Kappa.

Dr. Carroll wrote several books on educational subjects. He was a professor at the Rhode Island State College for many years. For a time he was State director of the National Education Association.

He married Gertrude Gariepy, of Pawtucket, R. I., October 2, 1902. They had two children, Charles and William.

Plea for Troopers In Coal Area Lost

Harrisburg, Pa., Feb. 4 (AP).—Gov. George H. Earle said today the Commonwealth will not intervene in the mining of hard coal by "unhired" workers until local authorities formally advise that they are unable to cope with the situation.

The Governor's decision was announced at a conference with 26 anthracite operators who asked that State police be dispatched against "unhired" miners in northeastern Pennsylvania, principally in Schuylkill and Northumberland counties, who produce an estimated 4,000,000 tons of coal annually from company-owned property.

Earle estimated the present force of 400 troopers would have to be increased to 25,000 to ban the depression-born industry.

Attorney General Charles J. Margiotti predicted a "terrible massacre" and serious property damage if troopers were sent to the anthracite district.

Supreme Court Ponders Trade Unit Self-Rule

MONTGOMERY COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST.
Telephone, SHepherd 2363.

Charging that the present methods of handling relief funds are wasteful and harmful to the morale of the farm laborer and are leading to pauperization of many men, the Montgomery County Farm Bureau yesterday adopted a resolution urging change in relief administration from the State to the county.

The resolution urged that each county receive the amount collected from the county for relief, and cited Montgomery County as receiving ony one-third of the relief money collected in the county.

The Farm Bureau, meeting in Richard Montgomery High School at Rockville, also adopted a resolution urging repeal of the anti-steel-trap law. Citing an increase in vermin because of the law, the Farm Bureau asked that trapping be permitted with No. 2 standard traps, each inscribed with the owner's name and each of which must be visited once each 24 hours.

General reassessment in 1937 was urged in another resolution adopted, which declared the suburban area of Montgomery County is growing so rapidly that reassessment is necessary at frequent periods. The annual meeting date of the bureau was changed to such time in November or December as the executive board should select instead of in January or February, as at present.

John M. Norton, consultant and adviser of the AAA, addressed the meeting. Others who spoke were J. W. Jones, president of the county unit; County Agent O. W. Anderson; Mrs. Roy Weagley, State chairman of Home and Community; Wilbert T. Smith, president of the Frederick Farm Bureau; H. H. Nuttle, president, and C. E. Establishment of a police court for Takoma Park, Md., was urged by the Community League of Takoma Park at its monthly meeting Monday night. At present residents must go to Rockville, 14 miles away.

Other resolutions approved were recommendations for signs to mark the town's boundary; for replacement of wooden street markers with weather-resistant blue and white enamel signs; for the enlargement of the septic waste disposal tank at Ethan Allen street and Carroll avenue, and for immediate purchase by the county board of education of the Hodges property as a site for a proposed new high school.

A referendum of town residents prior to submission of proposed amendments to the Takoma Park town charter was also recommended in anticipation of offering amendments at the special session of the State Legislature next month.

Speakers at the meeting were police Officer A. M. Thomas, Mrs. Frank F. Zundel, Frank S. Harris and Dr. C. C. Galloway. Judge H. C. Hefner presided.

Efforts to obtain regular bus service between Washington and communities adjacent to Massachusetts avenue extended will be continued, members of the Westmoreland Hills Citizens Association voted at their last meeting.

Official Census Figures Show Growth of 0.71% in Year.

By the Associated Press.

The 1935 population of the United States yesterday was officially estimated by the Census Bureau at 127,521,000. The official count is taken as of July 1 last.

The figure represents a gain of 0.71 per cent since 1934, and of 4 per cent since 1930 when the last actual census was taken.

"If the increase should be continued at this rate," the bureau said, "the Nation's population in 1940 would be around 132,000,000."

Indicative, however, of a slowing up in the Nation's population growth was the fact the average annual increase since 1930 was 904,000, "which is only a little more than one-half of the 1920-1930 average of 1,665,000."

The rate of gain in 1935 was the highest since 1931 when the population gained 0.83 per cent over 1930.

The total of births between April 1, 1930 and July 1, 1935, including an allowance for underregistration, was 12,430,000. The number of deaths in the same period, likewise allowing for underregistration, was 7,423,000. The number of persons leaving the country during the 5¼ year period exceeded the number coming in by 251,000.

Substracting the number of deaths and the net emigration from the number of births gives an increase of 4,746,000 between the 1930 census date and July 1, 1935.

Bills for Statues Here Are Blocked

By the Associated Press.

They were blocked by the objections of Representative Rich (Republican), of Pennsylvania; Zioncheck (Democrat), of Washington; Wolcott (Republican), of Michigan; Taber (Republican), of New York; Dirksen (Republican), of Illinois, and others.

Among the defeated authorizations were: A monument of Gen. Marquise de Lafayette; a national monument at Camp Merritt, N. Lee, in Arlington National Cemetery, Washington, and statuary in Washington of the "Indian Buffalo Hunt."

The Vienna Town Council has received a letter from Mrs. John Warnoch Echols, joint heir with the town to the property of her late brother, Charles Hines, requesting the council to initiate action asking the State highway department to take over and develop as a State road the right of way from Vienna to Great Falls, originally purchased by her brother for a railroad road bed.

She asked that this action be taken prior to May, when the State highway department makes its funds allocations. The council took no action, Joseph Berry, chairman of its roads committee, being absent due to illness.

Town Clerk Frank Wilcox reported receipt of a letter from State Senator Rust that he believed the chance of passage of the bill under which the smaller incorporated towns of the State would receive gas tax funds for maintaining up to 2 miles of secondary roads within the corporation were favorable. Wilcox was instructed to write Senator Woodson, chairman of the Senate roads committee, urging passage of the bill, Vienna, with 3 miles of secondary roads carrying traffic through rather than into the town, would find its tax burden only partially lightened, it was pointed out.

The McLean School and Civic League, which sponsors the McLean Boy Scout Troop, has appointed the following troop committee for the coming Boy Scout year: Henry Huschke, chairman; J. D. K. Smoot, the Rev. O. P. Lloyd, J. Hunter Mack, John Payne and Ralph Thompson.

The league indorsed the resolutions adopted at the last meeting of the McLean Parent-Teacher Association requesting the county school board to enlarge the high school facilities and equipment at McLean and to maintain a four-year course at the local school. A number of the measures pending before the State Assembly were discussed, but in the absence of the bills themselves members refused to indorse or condemn any specific measures.

U. S. Licenses Bullion Export Of $9,620,000

3-Day Reversal of Trend Brings Total to Over 15 Millions.

By the Associated Press.

The Treasury announced yesterday a total of $9,200,000 in gold was licensed for export during the day. Of this amount $8,500,000 was consigned to France and the remainder to Holland.

Yesterday's shipments brought the total exports to $15,225,000 since the outward movement began two days ago.

This development, reversing a westward flow which had brought $2,000,000,000 of gold from Europe to the United States in 16 months, was linked with current demands by Congressional inflationists that the Treasury print paper money to pay off the bonus, finance farm subsidies, and aid distressed agricultural debtors.

In foreign exchange markets it was said that money trading apparently had felt the effects of the drive to expand the currency rather than levy new taxes.

Whether the comparatively tiny shipments were the forerunner of a sizable outgo was simply conjecture. Experts said that often, when a movement starts, it tends to gain momentum.

On the other hand, some felt that the Treasury's readiness to meet demands for export licenses might check the movement. Secretary Morgenthau, who explained briefly the French franc had risen to the point where banks could profit by exporting gold, said that if this situation continued further shipments would be permitted as long as present exchange mechanisms are undisturbed.

If such licenses were refused, informed students of the subject said, the United States would thereby go off the present "gold bullion" standard, leaving the dollar without its "anchor" in gold. There was no indication anywhere that such a refusal was a possibility; all recent monetary developments point in the other direction.

Since inflationists have been pointing to the huge supply of gold in the country and declaring that new money should be issued against the "idle" metal, there was discussion here as to whether an outflow of gold might tend to curb their campaign.

New York, Feb. 4 (AP).—Leading continental gold monies held steady against the dollar in the foreign exchange market today, as arrangements were made to ship an additional $7,250,000 of gold to France and Holland.

The franc was unchanged at 6.69¾ cents in the late afternoon, and the guilder was likewise even with the previous close at 68.78.

The pound sterling eased moderately from the peak established Monday. In late dealings it was ¾ of a cent lower at $5.02½. The Swiss franc was quoted .01 of a cent higher at 33.05 cents.

U. S. Will Get $50,000 Of Schultz's Bail as Tax

Albany, N. Y., Feb. 4 (AP).—Fifty thousand dollars of the $75,000 bail put up by Arthur Flegenheimer, alias Dutch Schultz, goes to Uncle Sam in lieu of income taxes the dead gangster failed to pay, United States Judge Frank Cooper has ruled. The remaining $25,000 goes to Joseph L. Jacobson, New York merchant, who aided in supplying the bail.

Judge Cooper's decision closes a long series of court proceedings begun more than a year ago when the Federal Government sought to collect taxes from the big-time racketeer. The proceedings were interrupted by the murder of Schultz, e Since then his counsel and bondsman have sought return of the $75,000 in Liberty Bonds which the Federal Government had seized as part payment of income taxes.

Her Show Can't Go On

Fanny Brice's Cold Again Closes Show

New York, Feb. 4 (AP).—Theater tradition faded in a blackout for the second successive night tonight as the "Ziegfeld Follies" show failed to go on. Comedienne Fanny Brice, who has the "top" billing, was suffering from a bad cold.

The comedienne's personal physician, Dr. Charles Depping, assured Shubert Brothers, "Follies" producers, that Miss Brice's illness will not prevent her from appearing in the show tomorrow night.

At the Shubert offices it was said that Miss Brice was first afflicted with laryngitis Saturday. Her doctor called it "a hard cold," severe enough to keep her from her stage clowning last night and tonight. Broadway wasn't quite sure.

With native skepticism, Broadway's all-night sitters launched oft-heard rumors of a backstage feud. Reports of jealousy behind the curtains cropped up, to be denied hastily at the producers' offices.

Advertising Act's Legality Argued

The Maryland Court of Appeals yesterday took under consideration the constitutionality of the act of the Maryland Legislature of 1935 which undertook to establish certain regulations pertaining to public notices printed in county newspapers.

Eleazar Day and Eugene J. C. Raney in taxpayers' suits attempted to restrain the Montgomery County commissioners from paying the Montgomery County Sentinel for legal advertisements, alleging that the Sentinel did not come within the purview of the act. The Montgomery County Circuit Court held that the law was unconstitutional. The plaintiffs appealed.

Former Judge Robert B. Peter, former State's Attorney Robert B. Peter, jr., and Edward Peter, counsel to the Montgomery County commissioners, argued that the law attempts to create a monopoly and is unconstitutional. Leo Bender and John E. Oxley, attorneys for the planitiffs, contended the law is a regulation of a governmental function and not a private enterprise and that the Legislature was within its power in regulating the publication of notices.

Milk Hearing Set On Arlington Area

Culbertson on Bridge

An innovation in the scoring has from time to time been suggested to me by many correspondents. I think there is a great deal of merit in the idea. It is simply this: that some premium be awarded to successful bidders of five-odd contracts in the major suits.

There is sound logic behind this. On innumerable hands proper bidding—which is to say, the full investigation of game and slam possibilities—will carry the bidders past the game level in a legitimate slam approach. In other words, only a coward would stop at game and only a wild man would bid the slam. Why, then, should not the expert bidder be rewarded for his accuracy? He has deliberately risked the loss of a game and cannot reap the premium of a slam—surely, his nice balance of courage and caution deserves recognition. The major suit five-bid might be designated a "demi-slam" and rewarded with a few extra points.

The bidding:

West	North	East	South
Pass	Pass	1 diam'd	Double
1 spade	2 hearts	Pass	2 no tr'p
Pass	3 no tr'mp	(final bid)

East's opening bid was in the nature of a semi-psychic. West carefully considered the bidding and then led the only suit that could defeat the contract—the club. He correctly reasoned that his partner must have a weak hand (it usually is wise to put more faith in the bidding of vulnerable opponents than in that of a nonvulnerable partner, especially when he has not confirmed his strength by rebidding). Also, it was obvious that both North and South were prepared for a diamond or a spade lead. The club choice was merely a logical double-cross.

Despite his three club stoppers declarer had too much to do in the way of suit establishment to make his nine tricks. The opening lead reduced him to two clubs; he naturally attacked the heart suit, but in driving out East's double stopper his other two club guards were lost. West had merely to hold a club with which to put East on lead.

A diamond opening would have established instantly South's king for the ninth trick; a spade opening would have gone into South's tenace, and a heart opening would have given declarer the time necessary to set up the diamond king.

WAS IT MURDER?

By JAMES HILTON

Author of "Goodbye, Mr. Chips" and "Lost Horizon."

Colin Revell, young writer, visits Oakington, his old school, to help solve the mystery surrounding the deaths of Robert Marshall and his older brother Wilbraham. Robert was killed by a falling gas fixture. Wilbraham was found dead at the bottom of the empty swimming tank. A bullet was later found in his brain. Revell and Guthrie, Scotland Yard detective, suspect Ellington, cousin of the boys, and heir to the Marshall fortune. Ellington admits that his revolver and cricket bat are missing. Then one morning Lambourne, another master, is found dead in bed. Robert Roseveare, headmaster, stresses the fact that Lambourne had a weak heart. Ellington's young wife tells Guthrie that Lambourne, who was in love with her, confessed the night before that he had killed both boys and tried to cast suspicion on Ellington.

CHAPTER XXI.

THE BODY OF MAX LAMBOURNE had been taken to the local Drill Hall and there the inquest was held a couple of days later.

After the jury had viewed the body (which naturally conveyed very little to them), witnesses were called. The first was the school house butler, Brownley. He described how and when he found Lambourne dead. The coroner questioned him a little, mainly (so far as Revell could judge) to give the court an impression of his own shrewdness.

"It was your usual time for calling him?"

"Yes, sir."

"What did you do after that?"

"I went to fetch help, sir. The first person I saw was Capt. Daggat—he was just leaving his bath, sir. He told me to fetch the headmaster, while he telephoned for Dr. Murchiston."

Daggat gave evidence next, merely amplifying the butler's account of the discovery. The third witness was Murchiston, who testified to having been summoned by telephone, to arriving at the school, and to making a cursory examination of Lambourne's body.

"What do you mean by a cursory examination?"

"A rapid one—such as could be made on the spot."

"Very well. Please tell us what conclusions you came to?"

Murchiston had evidently prepared a careful answer to such a question. He replied, slowly and with deliberation: "My examination was not such as enabled me to have any definite opinions, especially as it was several months since I had last attended Mr. Lambourne professionally. His condition seemed consistent with a sudden heart attack, to which I knew him to be subject, but in the circumstances, I thought it best to leave the matter to be decided by a post-mortem."

"You did not perform the post-mortem?"

"No, but I was in consultation with the doctor who did."

"Do you agree with his findings?"

"Certainly."

Overdose of Veronal.

The next witness, obviously, was the doctor who had performed the post-mortem. He was Hanslake, the police surgeon. With commendable brevity he testified to his examination of the body and to the cause of death, which he declared outright and without any emotion whatever to have been an overdose of veronal.

This, as might have been expected, caused something of a sensation in the court. When it had subsided, the coroner turned to Murchiston again.

"Was Mr. Lambourne, to your knowledge, in the habit of taking veronal?"

"I knew that he had done so on some occasions. He took it for sleeplessness and headaches, I believe. I warned him strongly against it, but he told me that it was the only thing that gave him peace."

"What exactly was the matter with him, Dr. Murchiston?"

"It would almost be easier to say what wasn't the matter with him. He had been gassed and blown up during the War, I understand. Apart from a bad heart, there was nothing organically very wrong, perhaps, but the whole state of his mind and body was extremely low."

Mrs. Ellington was next called. She gave her evidence in a calm clear voice and answered all questions unhesitatingly. She had been friendly with the deceased, she said, for some years, and had sympathized with him a great deal in his afflictions. She was a trained nurse and had sometimes visited him when he had been ill. She had visited him on the night before he died and had found him then in a very troubled condition.

"Did you see him take anything while you were with him?"

"No."

"Had he ever said anything to you about taking his own life?"

"No. He was often despondent about things, but that was all."

"Thank you."

Roseveare Takes Stand.

The last witness was Dr. Roseveare. In suave and mellow tones he testified to Lambourne's unhappy existence.

"You visited him on the night before he died?"

"Yes. Like Mrs. Ellington, I tried to cheer him, but I fear, with less success."

"Do you know if he had anything to worry about?"

"Nothing at all connected with his work here. I am quite certain. I was perfectly satisfied with him."

"Did you know that he took veronal?"

"I had not the slightest idea."

"Did he ever talk to you about taking his life?"

"Never."

"Thank you. I think that will be all."

The coroner, before the jury retired, said it was one of the saddest cases he had ever come across. There seemed no doubt that the deceased had acquired the habit of taking veronal to relieve his sufferings, both physical and mental. The dose that killed him was heavy, but there was nothing at all to show that he had taken it with the intention of ending his life.

After that, of course, an open verdict was almost inevitable. The jury deliberated for less than five minutes before deciding upon it.

It was during lunch with Roseveare at the School that Revell learned where Guthrie had been. "He said there was no need for him to attend the inquest, so he spent the morning packing. He's going back to town this afternoon. I suppose you know that he's giving up the case?"

"Really?"

Revell's Intentions Asked.

"I had a long talk with him yesterday about it. He was frank enough to admit that he had no evidence against anyone, so there was nothing for it but to accept the situation. A likable man, Revell, apart from his detestable occupation."

Revell smiled, though he was rather bewildered by Roseveare's information. He guessed that Lambourne's confession must inevitably end the matter, but he had not quite realized that the end would come so soon and so tamely.

Roseveare continued: "By the way, Revell, what exactly are your intentions, now that this unhappy business seems to have worked itself out? Do you particularly wish to go back to London?"

Revell hesitated, and the other went on: "Because, if you aren't keen to return, you are very welcome to stay on here until the end of term. As a matter of fact, I would rather you did so. I don't think your real position here has yet been guessed by anyone, and that, you will agree, is a good thing. I fear that if you were now suddenly to disappear, the circumstances might only add another to the monstrous cloud of suspicions that we are now hoping to disperse. My staff, I trust, feel that so far I have done my best to protect them and their interests, but their attitude might change were they to discover that I had imported an old boy of this school to act as amateur detective and spy on them."

"The description of my job isn't exactly flattering," replied Revell with a laugh, "but still, I see your point." He was thinking, as a matter of fact, of sunny afternoons with Mrs. Ellington by his side as the two of them cycled along country lanes, of cool tea times with Mrs. Ellington ministering to him in her little chintz drawing room. "I'll stay on. But you must let me do some work for you, or something like that. Otherwise it will seem just as strange as if I were to go."

"Quite. I had already decided, in fact, to offer you a temporary post as my secretary. And at a salary which you will discover for yourself at the end of the term."

Range of New Women's Sizes Offered Here

By Ruth Anne Davis.

THERE breathe few women with souls so dead they haven't an interest in fasions. Nine out of ten of them yearn to be chic and pointed out as a stylish figure. But how do they go about it? In a silly effort to look as young as daughter, they march nonchalantly into the misses' dress department and demand that they be fitted. They wouldn't for the world try "women's sizes" because these "women's dresses" are apt to be horribly matronly and stogy, they think. So—they squeeze into fourteens and twenties and the fourteens and twenties won't fit. If they do, they're ridiculously flapperish in lots of cases.

One downtown store took in the situation at a glance and what did they do? Just about the nicest thing a store could. They ordered dresses in a completely new size range. They're youthful, merry dresses with verve and flare to them, and they come in proper sizes for women of 30 and thereabouts. But even the sizes are marked differently. There's 6 plus, 18 plus, 20 plus, and 24 plus.

Sizes Revolutionary.

YOU may as well accustom yourself to hearing these sizes talked about, for they are positively revolutionary. In fact, one fashion writer called the advent of these "junior woman, plus size frocks" one of the greatest advances made in the fashion mart in recent years.

Now, if you're just dying to see these dresses—and, of course, you are—drop by the store at 1:30, 2:30 or 4:45 and you'll find a style show going strong.

Lapel Watches Ready.

THERE'S one store we know about that has a way of being not only up but ahead of the times. If theres so much of a whisper of a new this or that, you've only to call and find it there. Take for instance the lapel watches. Stylists have definitely said spring will be a season of suits. So, the store doesn't wait. To go with the suits, they offer little lapel watches that you carry in your breast pocket with the chain, cord, ribbon or what not fastened to your lapel. The watches are framed in pliable leather, thin as a wafer. Furthermore, they're nickle bound. Ideal for your sports suit. The price—$2.98.

Strawberry Mask.

It soothes your skin, erases fatigue lines, perks up the circulation and brings a becoming glow. You know what a good cocktail can do to your spirits after a wearisome day? You just ought to see what the mask will do for your sluggish skin!

It's not the type of mask that hardens after it's applied. It's a cream that spreads smoothly and retains its creamy consistency.

All this week you may buy it for half price. But just this week. The $10 size is $4.25. The $5 size is $2.50. And the $3 size only $1.50.

Call Ruth Anne Davis, of The Washington Post, National 4200, Extension 323, for further information, or write, inclosing stamped, addressed envelope.

Ways to Teach Child to Read Vary Widely

By Alice Clarissa Richmond.

THERE is frequently discussion among parents and teachers as to what is the correct method of teaching a child to read. One will insist on phonetics, another starts with the typewriter, a third delays reading until the tenth year, a fourth goes in for "natural methods"—whatever that loose term covers. The shops will supply primers of every kind, and to the casual observer they all look about the same.

There is no hard and fast rule about when and how to teach reading. In the long run it is a matter of trial and error with each child, and the more individual the training the better the results.

Teaches Herself.

Mary was determined to read when she was four. Her mother felt that she was too young and refused to teach her. Within a year Mary had taught herself by persistent questioning and the help of street signs.

Tommy was 6 and did not want to read. He came of a nonreading family and did not know what could be gotten from books. It took a couple of years of school and inspired teaching to rouse his curiosity to the point where he wanted to read.

Bessie was taught reading at her own request when she was 4. Her mother gave ten minutes a day to the lessons, and by the end of 6 months the child read almost anything. It took the next child two years to learn, though he, too, was taught at his own request.

Individuality Factor.

Some children, especially those whose ear is quick, learn to spell while they study reading; others, with tactile memories, write first; some, whose memories are visual, take in the whole word at once.

It is all a matter of interest on the child's part, and patient experiment on the teacher's. One method will not fit everyone.

Prefers Bright Costumes for Women

Portrait Painter's First Effort Is Gaining Patron's Confidence

She has found that gaining the patron's confidence is "two-thirds of the battle:" and that once the models forget preconceived notions of how they should look on canvas, she gets a much better picture. Women are more apt to "pose" than most men, she believes.

With masses of black hair braided on the back of her head and antique gold earrings, Miss Barton resembles a diminutive Russian princess much more than the American girl she is.

A product of American art schools, she has made rapid progress among the more famous portrait painters of the world. She is here from Chicago to do a portrait, but took time off to "air her views" on women and clothes from the artist's viewpoint.

Bright Colors Best.

Too many women make the mistake of wearing black and other drab colors, when they look much more attractive in brighter colors, she said. She always insists that her patrons wear flamboyant colors when sitting for a portrait, for she paints with vivid, definite hues.

Clothes, she thinks, should be essentially feminine. In most cases she advises that the costume and personality of women should be accented by jewelry. When there are curves, she emphasizes them.

Modern styles for women enhance the feminine form, Miss Barton thinks. They are easier to paint than the harsh, awkward styles of ten years ago.

"If you will notice, you will find very few full-length portraits of that era in clothes. The younger generation is more 'clothes conscious' and demands more charm and grace in style than the women of yesterday who accepted the mode regardless of how they looked."

To avoid the photographic effect in a portrait Miss Barton always accentuates the most characteristic features of the individual. In doing this she makes the picture more individual than any camera could do. She is particularly interested in skin tones, and although she prefers that her models use very little make-up, critics have praised her skin effects for their warmth and life.

Types Most Interesting.

She prefers types of individuals and for this reason most of her work has been done among those interested in the stage, the screen and in music and art circles.

"Musicians, writers and artists aren't as temperamental as most persons believe," she observed. "But you do find a number on the stage who feel it is their duty to their public to get temperamental and throw sort of a glamour about themselves. Artists reach their public through their pictures, just as musicians express themselves in their music and writers paint the picture in words."

Miss Barton has become widely known for her work with nudes. She did a certain amount of this work while in school at the Chicago Institute of Art, and resented the statement made in the book, "The Courtezan Olympia," that a woman was not capable of painting a great nude. She engaged a stunning Negress model and painted the picture "Mitzi," which proved the sensation of the year.

A number of portraits done by Miss Barton have been on exhibition at the Corcoran Art Gallery here and most of her work has been shown at the best known galleries throughout the United States.

One of the greatest honors accorded her was when she was invited to exhibit a number of paintings at the Modern Museum of Amsterdam, Holland, to be followed by shows at The Hague and Rotterdam.

Her work is acclaimed by both the "conservatives" and the "moderns," in that while she has studied with the best masters and adheres to the "laws" of art, she copies from no one and has created a definite style of her own.

She advises young artists to "leave art alone if it doesn't mean more to you than anything else." She is a relative of Randolph Rogers, who designed the famous Rogers' bronze doors in the Capitol, and comes from an artistic family. Having resolved to study art when still a child, she worked as clerk in a bank, read proof at nights and "managed" in the manner of working girls to get through art school.

During her leisure time Miss Barton reads constantly. She prefers the French style of writing, but likes practically any form of good literature.

She has no interest in politics, can cook but doesn't like to do so, and in addition to being a well known artist is a regular modern girl of today and prides herself on being a "good sport."

"I like art," she concluded, "but I don't care for artists."

Pleasant HOMES

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

SHE is as dainty as a little Dresden china doll with pale blonde coloring, so she wears the pastels and white with such charm. Therefore we suggested a bedroom in delicate powdery pastel shades with mahogany furniture. The bedspread would be pretty in starched white dimity with little pink dots or figures in it . . . then curtains to match. The walls we'd have in pink, too, and a carpet in soft blue. For the dressing table we'd choose a flowered chintz in rather pale colors; we'd use it for a chair covering, too, and for the draperies we'd add little Dresden figurine lamps with white shades and have accessories all in white. Two little white fur rugs over the blue carpet would be lovely.

Eggs Are Tasty Luncheon Dish On Any Table

May Retain Breakfast Characteristics or be Served in Other Styles.

By Dorothea Duncan.

IN MANY households eggs are the by-word at luncheon instead of breakfast. In this case, the eggs may retain the breakfast characteristics or they may come to the table in a pleasing disguise. Souffles, omelets—many with other ingredients, such as cheese, meat or vegetables added—baked eggs and fondues are some of the more attractive versions of the luncheon egg.

Of all the omelets, the one served with Spanish sauce is perhaps the favorite for luncheon. The omelet itself is prepared in the usual fashion, and after it has been removed to the serving platter, half of it is covered with the sauce and the other half is folded over on top. Some persons prefer to add the sauce to the omelet as it cooks. If this is done, the sauce should not be added to the omelet until the bottom of the mixture has set, so that the sauce will remain in the middle of the omelet, instead of falling to the bottom.

Sauce for Omelet.

The sauce which is added to the omelet mixture as it cooks may be prepared as follows:

1 medium-sized tomato
1 small green pepper
½ onion
2 sprigs parsley
1 stalk celery
Olives
Mushrooms
Salt and pepper

Peel the tomato, add the pepper, onion, parsley, celery, olives, mushrooms and chop together in a chopping bowl. Place the mixture in a saucepan, add seasonings and stew for about two or three minutes. Add to omelet as soon as it begins to cook.

3 Red-Haired Types Offered Dress Advice

PARIS, (U.P.).—An English fashion expert classifies red-haired women in three types and writes what each one should wear.

In the first group are the girls with flame-colored hair and green-ish eyes. They have the most distinctive coloring, although their skins are usually so clear that they have freckles. This type should wear plain black or white with one splash of color in a scarf, flower or jewel. Severe clothes are best and all deep, rich colors suit her. She should dress somberly so that her eyes and hair will dominate the color scheme of her clothes. She must never wear beige, as it makes her freckles more prominent.

In the second group are those with carrot-colored hair and pale, clear blue eyes. They look best in all shades of purple and lavender as well as in lime and olive greens. They will find that blue emphasizes their freckles, but if they are freckle free it will be a becoming color.

The third type has gold-brown or hazel eyes and looks best in deep, rich browns, although they also can wear dull greens, dusty mauves and certain yellows.

This fashion expert advises all red-haired women to stick to monotones, as checks, stripes and large patterns drown out their delicate coloring. She says that cosmetic success depends upon the right shade of lipstick, which must never have an orange or purply-pink base.

This BUSINESS of LIVING

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: Here is a problem more serious than it may appear on the surface: Is there any help or cure for a good, lovable and very intelligent man who tells long, detailed stories in company?

The man I speak of is a desirable companion in many respects, but he becomes very tiresome in company. Almost any remark made is likely to recall to his mind some incident which he proceeds to relate in detail. In other words, he is what you would call a monopolist of conversation. He causes his friends embarrassment, for they often try to cover up with an apology after he makes his departure.

His wife and daughter have been very patient listeners to these long-drawn-out stories, which I know they have heard hundreds of times. Of late I notice a sensitiveness and nervousness in the wife, and she makes all kinds of excuses for not doing things and going places.

WORRIED.

Ridicule May Cure.

DEAR WORRIED: Since the man you speak of is—according to your own appraisal—a good, lovable and very intelligent person as well as a desirable companion in many respects, it seems not improbable he would entertain an open mind to suggestions which might make for more pleasing conduct on his part. But the question immediately arises: "Who will bell the cat?" Have you the courage to tell him he is earning the reputation of being a deadly bore; and to point out to him that if he wishes to remain socially acceptable, he must learn to throttle his wet-blanket flow of reminiscences?

* * * *

If you take that mission upon yourself, you may be conferring an inestimable benefit upon the man, but unless he proves himself capable of achieving great objective mindedness, you may pay the price of incurring his lifelong dislike. Are you willing to risk that modest martyrdom for the sake of his long-suffering family and friends?

Your letter does not reveal conclusively whether you—the writer—are man or woman, but it seems safe to guess you are a woman, for the reason that few men take the idiosyncrasies of their friends so seriously as to wish or attempt to reform them. As a rule, they simply avoid those persons who do not contribute to their enjoyment of life. Yet it seems to me any attempts to pray with this man over the error of his social tactics would carry more weight if essayed by a man friend, rather than a woman. Men are prone to discount the reform activities of individual women as the meaningless, unjustified efforts of busybodies.

* * * *

If this man's intimates would enter into friendly conspiracy to shut off his long-winded discourses by simply refusing, in a good humored way, to listen to those they have heard before; and by chaffing him on his tedious delay in reaching the point, it might have the beneficial effect of causing him to study and revise his story-telling technique. Ridicule often points a moral more effectively than preaching ever could.

Tuberculosis Cure Depends Chiefly on Rest

Part II.

TUBERCULOSIS is not a dramatic disease. It is a long drawn out affair—one that taxes the patience of the actors—the physician, the victim, and all members of the family. It lacks the stage setting of the surgical attack upon acute appendicitis. Life can not be saved, as for example in diphtheria, through the injection of a single large dose of antitoxin. Nevertheless, victory over the disease can be attained. It means that the patient's resistance must be conserved and increased with a single objective—rest for the diseased areas in the lung.

Disease Diagnosis.

Let us assume that tuberculosis is suspected in a given case. The examination of the patient will include at least four procedures:

(1) A careful physical inventory.

(2) A search for the presence of the tubercle bacilli in the sputum.

(3) An X-ray plate of the chest.

(4) A careful history with inquiry as to exposure, other cases in the family, etc.

In doubtful cases tuberculin may be employed as a diagnosis agent, although this method has been superseded largely by what is known as the Mantoux test. Positive response to this test indicates that the person is susceptible to tuberculosis or has been exposed to it. It does not afford conclusive evidence that the individual is actively infected.

If tubercle bacilli are found in the sputum, and if the X-ray discloses the presence of disease in the lung, proper medical management must be instituted without delay. First, the patient should be separated, insofar as possible, from the rest of the family. This means sanitarium care if it can be arranged. If it is necessary to manage the case in the home, the physician can issue instructions as to precautions that must be observed. Alarm need not be felt if the disease has been detected in a reasonably early stage, but every member of the houshold must be made to realize that at least a year, possibly two or three, will be required for recovery.

Plan of Treatment.

The established plan of treatment, namely, rest in bed, fresh air and good food, still holds the field. Forced feeding is usually unnecessary and sometimes brings on digestive upsets. More and more is complete rest in bed insisted upon, as rest for the lungs promotes healing. This means absolute rest for many months. Sitting up, reclining, reading—everything must be tabooed in the interest of rest. If the disease is in the apex (upper portion) of the lung, rest may be assisted by placing small bags of shot on the chest wall over the affected area. Movement is thus restricted and the diaphragm is compelled to pick up the function of breathing. The weights may be increased gradually without discomfort.

Madrillon 'Spots' Brittell Twins; Argonauts Steal La Paree Show

By Chanticleer.

You can't say Leon Brusiloff doesn't take opportunity by the traditional forelock. This week the Madrillon features the Brittell Twins—in team numbers and solo specialties. And Leon, very much as card tricks are done, produces the two sisters together and then, separately and asks the guests to try to tell which is which. And they can't do it.

In fact, there is a serious doubt in my mind whether they know themselves apart. These Brittell Twins are the kind who make women whisper to each other "Aren't they young and fresh appearing?" and when women say such things to each other the gals are really young and refreshing.

Blending into the atmosphere of the Madrillon is Senorita Adelita Varela, a leetle Mexican girl, who runs through the full range of emotions in singing the story of the Mexican cowboy "The Big Rancho."

Speaking of Leon reminds one of the conspicuousness of the Brusiloff humor so frequently apparent on the Brusiloff countenance. If Leon is having a batch of ups at one time, he can beam as no other maestro in the business. But when bad news settles down—it's all there as plain as words on his face.

And did you ever notice that no one emmceeing a show ever had more success in gagging with the artists? Though never in a way to hurt anyone's feelings.

Jimmy Bright, Madrillon's singing ace, does "Red Sails in the Sunset" this week in a very large way.

The Dude Ranch is presenting Jean Lindemore and Babe Baker this week, helping Jimmy Staley and Dixie Dyer, of the home line-up. My best agent reported that the Ranch's orchestra either was making it tough on Jean—or Jean had a bad case of anti-rhythm. Anyway, the band and Jean had a little difficulty in coming out together on the upbeats and downbeats, as it were. Being in an incorrigible mood, he also reports that Babe was never constructed for fast tap dancing being a bit plump, shall we say. And just to prove he wasn't entirely in a critical humor, he reports that Dixie Dyer is resplendent in a new evening gown, abbreviated here and there. Noticing a new gown is enough for any girl for one day. . . . The Bonners, Carl and Leone, are setting a nice record at the Shoreham. They're just so darn popular they can't satisfy the many requests of everyone who visit the ballroom. Some day they'll be in grand opera, is the word from those on the in. Cropley and Violet, in a roping act; Jack Young, smart tap expert, and Terry and Walker, musical comedy team, are all new faces on this week's bill. Barnes leads the orchestra in that engaging Barnee manner . . . The Ambassador Hi-Hat Hawaiians have five new native songs, thanks to Miss Charlotte King, daughter of the Congressman from Hawaii. Mr. King brought the numbers back with him when Miss Charlotte wired him of the need of the Hawaiians for new native songs . . . Sidney's orchestra at the Mayflower lounge is the first to play tunes from "Follow the Fleet," the new Rogers-Astaire flicker.

There's plenty of dancing on the La Paree bill this week—but the Three Argonauts steal the show despite their minority in numbers. After all, when a hand-balancing and multiple "strong-man" act is in competition with two dance teams (one usually is competition enough) and comes out on top at a dine-and-dance spot, it should be recorded.

Syd and Buddy, tap specialists, and LaCosta and Lolita, ballroom team, are the competition for the Argonauts. Perhaps I was seated too close to the floor but I had a feeling that Syd was a bit awkward and LaCosta was under a bit of a strain lifting his slender blonde partner in their otherwise graceful movements over the floor.

Having had no end of success with Mel Christopher, the magic gentleman who does niftles with a short piece of rope, the La Paree presents Tom Osborne this week. Mr. Osborne has a lot of fun with three little cans and a few little soft balls of black yarn. And then, with the assistance of a couple stooges, convinces everyone that you can't depend on the number of cards in any deck—in a magician's hands.

Its the home precincts that provide the big attraction, however. At least every one at the La Paree feels that Buddy Shaner is the most immediate threat Bing Crosby has to face these days. Maestro Daugherty "found" Buddy in his resent amateur contests. He's a basketball star at Eastern High School for the present and is heard irregularly with the band. But they say he's the big comer of the season.

Club Habana's Guy Scott is a good friend of Joe Moss, who owns Manhattan's Hollywood Restaurant. And for that, the "Hollywood Revue," now on the Fox stage, moves to the Habana for a special show tonight at 11:30, with generous support from the show at the Earle. It's a gala theatrical night—with Lionel Newman, director of the Hollywood show; Ames and Arno, Jack Starr, Mildred Fenton, Marion Ballor, and the Hollywood Octet, from the Fox; and Bobby Lane, Keller Sisters and Lynn and Paul Gerrits, from the Earle. All emmceed by Lou Parker, of the Fox. And Phil Lampkin will be there, to . . . Its birthday week at the Troika. Sasha Bartnovsky's birthday, to be specific. Maestro Sasha's friends back in Russia would call it a "name day." There was a very grand party, in the Russian manner, for Sasha after the guests had departed the other evening—and a big cake . . . Mel Christopher, whom I just spoke about, begins a week at the Mayfair Sunday night, doing black magic. Leo and Jack, the Mayfair's singing duo, will be in New York for a few days getting some new tunes and arrangements . . . The Cocktail Shakers of 1936 have been joined this week at the Lotus by the Olympics, a skating trio. Of special note in the entirely new show by the "Shakers" is a rhumba by Dawn and Bertram. The Olympics have come direct from Mexico City, where they were declared positively "sensational."

Here and There Among the City's Night Clubs

On The Air Today

If you were among WRC's listeners Tuesday night when Shannon Allen interviewed Postmaster Spence, of Tangier Island, you may have sensed the situation in which Mr. Allen found himself. It was simply a case of an interview subject who was inherently or otherwise a very reticent person, a man who doesn't naturally issue words in spouting, gushing easiness.

Mr. Spence, as a matter of fact, was quite interested in everything that went on. He answered all Mr. Allen's questions. But he answered many by simply wagging his head. Any why not? A definite "yes" or "no" is the best answer in the world to any question.

In the meantime, however, Mr. Allen was commanding an audience of no one knows how many thousands, for the program was being fed to a coast-to-coast network as a result of eleventh-hour arrangements. Residents of every State have been reading of the predicament of the Tangier Islanders. The purpose of the broadcast was to advise the country at large of the conditions and late news of the situation.

And Mr. Spence happened to be one of those taciturn and reticent individuals who took the short way to a direct answer—in as few words as possible.

From the professional side of radio, it was a grand job of interviewing. And the layman, too, doubtless realized that Mr. Allen was handling a situation, arranged on five minutes' notice, in a singularly skillful manner.

When Gracie Allen and George Burns celebrate an anniversary, as they will tonight, WJSV, at 8:30, they do it in typical Burns and Allen fashion. They sent out the following bulletin:

"At a creditors' meeting last night it was unanimously decided that Milton Watson, tenor, and Jacques Renard and his orchestra should accompany George and Gracie to Hollywood immediately following the broadcast. It was brought out that Burns owes Renard $1.25, Gracie owes everyone an apology, Renard owes Watson for the fourth race and everyone felt it would be a little safer if everyone made the trip to California together. So they'll broadcast from Hollywood together next Wednesday night (February 12.)"

45 Million Suit Voided, Reopened

New York, Feb. 4. (AP).—The $45,000,000 damage suit of Gene McCann, Wall street broker, against J. P. Morgan & Co. and many other prominent financial institutions was dismissed and then reinstated on the plaintiff's appeal today.

As the case came up for trial, Federal Judge Frederick H. Bryant dismissed the suit, on motion of the defense that the complaint did not state a case under the Anti-Trust Act. He then withdrew the dismissal and reserved decision until Thursday to permit Hallam Richardson, McCann's counsel, to submit a brief.

McCann alleged that the defendants, including the better business bureaus, city and national, The New York Stock and Curb Exchanges, and many banks, their officers and directors, violated the act and damaged his business to the extent of $15,000,000. He sought triple damages under the law.

In 1930 the plaintiff sought to market the securities of the Foremost Industries Shares Corporation, an investment trust. He charged the defendants circulated false information about the trust and prevented him from selling the securities.

15 Hurt When Bus Skids on Icy Road

Sharon Hill, Pa., Feb. 4 (AP).—A bus serving Delaware County towns skidded through a guard rail and rolled down an embankment, injuring 15 persons, today.

The vehicle was ascending an approach to a bridge over railroad tracks when the driver lost control on the ice-covered road and it slipped backwards.

Two of the passengers were able to get out of the overturned bus and stop a train which took eight of the injured to a Philadelphia hospital. Others were treated here.

Pedestrians Are Blamed For Accidents

Only Controls at Circles; Months for Tourists Most Dangerous.

Fifty per cent of traffic accidents involving pedestrians are caused by carelessness, William A. Van Duzer, traffic director, testified yesterday as the sub-committee of the House District Committee resumed hearings on the city's traffic ills.

That night accidents and fatalities have increased 68 per cent since the District's street lighting appropriation was reduced in 1934 was another pertinent fact offered by Van Duzer.

"The sub-committee wants to put its finger on the principal causes of accidents," announced Chairman Carpenter (Democrat), Kansas, soon after the meeting was called to order.

Van Duzer Charts Shown.

Testimony was again opened by Van Duzer. He sorted a pile of charts and maps on the table before him and began:

"One of the principal causes of accidents is the careless pedestrian," he said.

"Have there been no efforts to enforce regulations against the pedestrian as well as the motorist?" asked Representative Carpenter.

"There are no definite laws governing pedestrians. The only places they are controlled by regulations are at circles," was the answer.

Van Duzer cited figures showing that more than 50 per cent of the total number of pedestrian accidents are caused by carelessness—pedestrians crossing the street against traffic signals, crossing in the center of blocks, children playing in the street and stepping from behind parked automobiles.

Months Are Cited.

Pedestrians crossing between intersections brought the largest number of accidents and injuries last year, Van Duzer said. He named the months of April, May, June and December as "peak" months in accidents. He was asked "Why?"

"Those are tourists months. There is more out-of-town traffic—more visiting motorists who don't know our regulations," was the reply.

Next, he was asked the rate of accident increase, including fatalities.

"If traffic fatalities had increased with automobile registrations since 1923, we would have had 215 persons killed last year instead of 113—that would be the ratio," said Van Duzer.

Carpenter said he was interested in the "bad spots."

"I mean, where the greatest number of accidents occur," he added.

Congested Areas.

"The greatest number of accidents are in the congested area," said Van Duzer. "But the largest number of fatalities are in the second zone—midtown."

He said that his department prepared diagrams showing the types, locations, causes, the hour and the day of all accidents. Then, Van Duzer continued, efforts are made to find a remedy. If a "bad spot" is discovered, a study is made.

"Sometimes there is no light at that spot. If conditions warrant, we install one—when we have the money," said the traffic director.

"There are 196 locations in the city where traffic lights are justified. We install about 30 a month."

Carpenter returned to the subject of pedestrians.

"Why should all the blame be placed on the pedestrian alone?" he asked. "I believe that if the motorist operated his car properly, these accidents could be avoided. He must be reckless—or something."

Answer Is Offered.

M. O. Eldridge, assistant traffic director, offered an answer. He cited a number of pedestrian accidents where the motorist was arrested and charged with a violation.

"So, you see, the driver does come in for punishment," he said.

"That's what we are trying to find out—we want to know if excessive speed and careless driving doesn't contribute largely to serious mishaps," said Carpenter. "If we 'crack down' on this type of autoist, wouldn't it lessen accidents?"

Van Duzer agreed that it would—and did. He cited the recent permit suspension order for first-offense speed violations.

"Accidents and injuries have decreased greatly since we started this drastic type of punishment."

The discussion turned to taxicabs. Van Duzer opened the subject by showing that there are 4,000 taxis and 6,500 taxi drivers now in Washington.

"There is a cab for each 125 persons," he said.

He compared the present taxi figures with the number registered in 1928. There were then 748 in operation.

Test Is Made.

Cruising taxis outnumber the ones with passengers. At a given point, Van Duzer pointed out, a test was made. This showed that unloaded taxis comprised 17 per cent of all traffic. At Fourteenth street and Pennsylvania avenue northwest, taxis—both loaded and unloaded—make up 37 per cent of all traffic, he said.

"There is no regulation governing the number of taxis that can be licensed," Van Duzer declared. "Many cities have laws limiting the number of cabs. Among these are Baltimore and New York City.

"Do you feel that there are too many cabs in Washington?" asked Carpenter.

"I do," replied Van Duzer. "They contribute to congestion in the downtown area. When 47 per cent of all traffic in the city is taxicabs, they naturally add to the problems."

Last year, it was shown, 1,727 taxis were involved in accidents. There were 5 fatalities. Of this number, 9 per cent of the taxis were striking vehicles. Eleven per cent were struck.

"But, if you figure everything on a mileage basis, the taxis are no more dangerous than any other vehicle," said Van Duzer. It must be remembered that the average taxi travels about 30,000 miles a year. Figures show that there is one fatality to 12,000,000 miles of taxi travel and one fatality to 9,000,000 miles for the private vehicle," Van Duzer testified.

Questions were then directed at Eldridge. He was asked to describe the effect of street lighting on traffic.

"There has been a considerable increase in the number of accidents since our street lighting appropriation was reduced in 1934. Night accidents and fatalities have increased 68 per cent since then. The increase trend in daytime accidents has been about 20 per cent."

Glaze Puts Drivers On 'Good Behavior'

Washington motorists were on their "good behavior" yesterday. The Post's cruising reporter, accompanied by an official of the Police Traffic Division, toured through slush and ice in a futile search for the "reason why" behind violations of the law.

Hazardous driving conditions were apparently responsible for the sudden turn toward "safe and sane" motoring. A few violations—one wrong turn, a "light jumper" and a weaving truck were observed. The drivers were warned.

Helpless skidding and minor infractions comprised the balance. A new regard for life, limb and property apparently came with the ice-glazed streets. The reporter will continue his cruising today.

Opera Star Undaunted By Weather Obstacles

Charles Kullman and Mrs. Kullman.

Neither rain, snow nor sleet, or whatever the storm gods have in store for Washington today, will deter Charles Kullman, 33-year-old Metropolitan opera star, from singing at Mrs. Townsend's musicale at the Hotel Mayflower this morning.

Six winters of opera singing in Berlin, Vienna, Fontainebleu, France, London and New York have made this dark-haired, broad shouldered tenor almost as impervious to the weather as the mailman—or at any rate, he qualified jokingly, "as close to a mailman as an opera singer can become."

Twice before has Kullman sung in this city, once in 1921 as a soloist with the Yale Glee Club and again in 1927 when the American Opera Company was playing at the old Poli Theater. But neither time was he accompanied by that most gracious dame, World Fame, or his even more charming blond wife.

Kullman entered Yale burning with the desire to serve humanity as a physician. Although he had been a choir boy at St. Paul's Church, New Haven, ever since he was knee-high, it was not until he was singled out for solo work by the Yale Glee Club that he began seriously to consider singing as a career.

Doesn't Know Why.

"Why did I change from a medical student to a singer?" Straightening his double-breasted, blue, pencil-striped jacket, he said: "Frankly I don't know. People told me I had a voice and before I knew it I was using it. Besides I wouldn't have made a good doctor."

"Oh yes you would," interrupted his wife, who until then had been unpacking their bags, the Kullmans having arrived in town yesterday afternoon.

"You are so sympathetic," she explained. "Not like so many other tenors, who are unkind."

Married eight years ago, the couple have a 6-year-old daughter.

The winter following the birth of his daughter, Kullman made his debut in European opera. He had been in Berlin two months when the Kroll Opera Company's manager asked if he could sing the leading tenor role in Madame Butterfly, the regular tenor being ill. A hasty audition was arranged and Kullman—who knew little German—sang "America Forever" half a dozen times. On the strength of his sonorous "America Forever" he was given the role.

There followed weeks of hectic rehearsal, made doubly difficult by Kullman's being forced to relearn the role in German. He sang and triumphed, remaining at the Kroll Opera House for three years. From there he went to Vienna; then a winter at Covent Gardens, London, summer at Strasbourg, Austria, and this December the Metropolitan Opera House in Faust.

"What is your favorite role?" he was asked.

"I have many favorites," he replied. "But I like the tenor role in La Boheme best."

Enjoys Work at Met.

Working at the Metropolitan under Edward Johnson, Kullman finds, is more "international" and more enjoyable than singing abroad.

"American audiences are so warm," he continued, perhaps recalling the day when three trainloads of Yale students journeyed to New York and cheered, whistled and stamped their feet as "the local boy made good."

Under contract with the Vienna State Opera House, Kullman must leave America in mid-March. This he admitted will be a double disappointment. Not only will he miss American audiences, but also he will be deprived of opportunities to see first-class boxing matches.

"I box myself," he explained. "I do it to keep in trim. There's nothing I like better than to see a wrestling match or a prize fight. Why? I guess it's because there's nothing so different from an opera star singing a tenor aria than a Joe Louis kayoing the other fellow."

Party of D.A.R. Marks Paper's Founding in '93

With flags, music, dancing and colonial costumes, the District of Columbia Daughters of the American Revolution last night celebrated the founding of the Daughters of the American Revolution Magazine.

The celebration took place in Memorial Continental Hall and was attended by about 150 members and guests.

Greetings were given by Mrs. Z. Lewis Dalby, State chairman, magazine committee; Mrs. George Madden Grimes, State regent, and Mrs. Edgar F. Puryear, national chairman, magazine committee. A pageant depicted a meeting during the first year of the magazine in 1893 in a Washington home. The costumes were of the period.

Following some musical entertainment, the feature of the evening, a series of tableaux, representing the 59 District Chapters of the D. A. R., was staged with the aid of the District of Columbia Sons of the American Revolution.

Her long hair falling over her shoulders beneath a gold spiked cardboard crown, Mrs. Charles C. Haig read the scroll of the various chapters, while Mrs. Jasper Beall in colonial dress and powdered wig, turned back a large beaver board replica of the magazine's cover to show the various tableaux. A piano duet and violin supplied music.

Travel Lecturer Describes Japan

Using motion pictures to illustrate his travel lecture on ancient and modern Japan, T. S. Miyakawa last evening described the scenic beauties and industrial growth of his country to a capacity audience at the Masonic Auditorium. The lecture was the fourth in the spring series of Washington Post Illustrated Travel Lectures.

Miyawaka, who was born in this country, is a graduate of Cornell University, and has spent many years in Japan and Manchuria. His lecture recounted much of the interesting current history of Japan.

Denmark will be the subject of the next Post Travel Lecture, to be delivered Tuesday night at the Masonic Auditorium. Tickets may be purchased either at The Post or at the auditorium box office on the evening of the lecture.

Sanitary President Now a Grandfather

Edward G. Yonker, president-treasurer of the Sanitary Grocery Co., Inc., living at 5100 Thirty-ninth street northwest, received news yesterday from his wife in Memphis, Tenn., that he was a grandfather.

A 7-pound 10-ounce baby girl was born in that city to his daughter, Madeline, and her husband, Fergus Lee Lloyd, an attorney for the HOLC. They were married in 1934. As yet the little girl has not been named.

Dr. James A. Cahill Is 'Out of Danger'

Dr. James A. Cahill, professor of surgery at Georgetown University Medical School, last night was reported by physicians to be "entirely out of danger" in the university hospital. His appendix was removed recently when it became inflamed after he accidently swallowed a tooth crown.

Power Rates Here Reach Lowest Point

Unless there is radical revision of the factors determining the rate base of the Potomac Electric Power Co., the ordinary Washington consumer has reached his lowest rate and may expect electric charges to rise from year to year hereafter.

This was made clear yesterday by announcement by the Public Utilities Commission of its probable rates for the current calendar year. These prospective rates, which are to be made effective by a formal order at any moment, showed that 53,000 ordinary consumers of class A schedule will get no reductions in their bills this year.

There are some 136,248 such consumers. The reductions are estimated to total $69,537. There are 10,000 customers who have the benefit of individual meters, individual bills and independence of super-charges by landlords who use only enough electric current to pay for depreciation on the meter and the cost of sending out bills. For them there has been fixed a minimum charge of 75 cents a month, which authorities are agreed is not adequate to pay for cost of service.

Total reduction under the new rates, according to commission figures, is expected to be $310,116 this year.

Of lasting effect on future electric rates will be the decision of the commission that 6.5 per cent is a reasonable rate of return for a public utility in the position of the Potomac Electric Power Co. In fixing the 6.5 per cent rate Riley E. Elgen, chairman, Richmond B. Keech, vice chairman, Col. Dan I. Sultan, engineer commissioner, felt they went as far as they dared under the law.

Aside from the future effect on rates of the 6.5 per cent return rate, the commission also approved a valuation which allowed for a reduction of something like $1,900,000 instead of $3,200,000 claimed by some commission witnesses and by People's Counsel William A. Roberts.

City Power Plant Urged.

Believing the city might get cheaper power if it did not have to guarantee a certain return to the Potomac Electric Power Co., the Columbia Heights Citizens Association last night went on record as advocating establishment of a municipality owned power plant somewhere on the Potomac, possibly at Great Falls.

The organization, meeting in the Fourth Presbyterian Church, also asked for increased appropriations for lighting District streets, re-establishment of the old second precinct and a reduction of the number of liquor stores to 200, restricting sale of bottled liquor to shops dealing exclusively in this trade.

It disapproved the Vandenberg bill to allow a Commissioner a voice on Capitol Hill. The members felt that the city's representative in Congress should be elected by the people.

A resolution also was adopted asking that the proposed Anacostia Bridge be named in honor of John Philip Sousa, famous Washington band leader and composer. The organization asked for an increase in the local budget for the health department.

Liquor Board Calls Repeal Successful

Report States Change Restored Respect for Law.

Repeal of prohibition has brought about a respect for law which was "sadly lacking" during prohibition, the District Alcoholic Beverage Control Board said in its annual report to the District Commissioners yesterday.

Before passage of the District liquor repeal law, the board said, "it was with the greatest difficulty that convictions were had in liquor cases.

"Now our juries, inspired by the fact bootleggers and speakeasies are tax dodgers only, are convicting. In the place of the public making a jest of attempted legislative prohibition, our public now appears to be most interested in bringing about the proper results of a liberal control, enforced to the last letter.

"Our respectable citizens have welcomed the opportunity to shun the illegitimate seller, now regarded as an outlaw, and make their purchases from those authorized by law to sell.

"New Order" Superior.

"Our experience impels us to say that while there is much yet to be done, the new order of things is far superior to the old, and we now safely say that the present legislation is both successful and effective."

During 1935, the board reported, there was collected $1,731,625.75. Of this total $710,350.12 was collected from licenses and fees and $1,021,275.63 from taxes on alcoholic beverages.

The board presented statistics to show the tide of intoxication is receding for the first time since the prohibition law was enacted. Arrests for drunkenness during 1935 totaled 20,602, or about 3,500 less than in the preceding year, despite the growing population.

The report emphasized the fact the bootlegger still plies his trade in alleys and poorer sections, and suggested this be counteracted by stricter law enforcement and temperance education.

It gave statistics to show the number of accidents due to driving while under the influence of liquor were 275 in 1935 as compared to 246 for 1934.

Picture Is Spotty.

"As can readily be seen," the report stated, "the picture is spotty and gives us no definite conclusion other than the fact that the fear of many that the repeal of prohibition would create an impossible traffic hazard has failed to materialize."

Referring to the granting of licenses, the board said it was doing everything in its power to restrict the licenses to those who do not abuse their privilege.

Of the 1,829 licenses issued during the past year, 89 were revoked and suspended for violations, of which selling to intoxicated persons and selling on Sunday topped the list with more than 20 infractions each. There were no convictions for selling to minors, though the report showed that 305 persons between the ages of 17 and 21 were arrested during the year for intoxication.

The report concluded:

"The greatest tragedy of the prohibition era was the effect upon the child. Boys and girls of immature age were just as able to buy from bootleggers as adults. * * * By legally regulating the dispensation of intoxicating beverages, it will be possible to gradually cure this most unfortunate evil."

Committee Considers Care of Homeless Men

Means of caring for several hundred homeless unmarried men here were considered yesterday by a subcommittee on transient relief of the Council of Social Agencies.

Mrs. John Jay O'Connor, chairman of the parent committee, predicted some solution would be worked out to meet the situation caused by discontinuance of direct Federal relief.

Another sub-committee delved into reports that panhandling and petty thievery have increased since the transient problem became acute.

WILLIAM GILLETTE.

Actor, 80, Expects the Worst; Often it Does Not Happen.

By Karl Schriftgiesser.

He said so yesterday when, at a small luncheon, he was asked to explain his philosophy of life. Mr. Gillette, 80 years old and still a hale and hearty workman of the stage, has reached that age of life when younger people turn to him for explanations, fully expecting platitudes.

It would be nice to be able to tell you in his own clever words just why he so proudfully is a pessimist, but Mr. Gillette has for years abjured the giving of interviews. So, if the reader will agree—even if Mr. Gillette won't—that this isn't an interview, perhaps it can be told.

Mr. Gillette is a pessimist for the very good reason that, if he expects the worst and doesn't get it, he is never disappointed. He says he has always expected the worst and thereby has managed to get through 80 years of an active life quite happily. Because he has seldom been disappointed.

Tall, straight, silvery-haired, and with a keenly quiet sense of humor, William Gillette is off-stage even more distinctive appearing than he is on it. He affects an old-fashioned standing collar, around which he wraps a cotton tie of nondescript color. At 80, he does not use glasses. Like all actors, he sleeps late, breakfasts at noon or 1 o'clock. He likes eggs, raw or soft-boiled, and coffee that is half milk. He has been, with the exception of eating eggs, a vegetarian for a year. Despite his close friendship for years with Conan Doyle, he scoffs at spiritualism. He is happiest when riding his miniature railroad in his castle at Hadlyme, Conn. His passion for railroads is lifelong and his experience with full-sized roads affords him with many amusing tales—that can't be told here.

He likes best to talk about Mark Twain and to imitate, not excepting the profanity, the famous humorist. He gets very angry if you mention Van Wyck Brooks' biography of Twain, which subjected the writer to a keen psychoanalysis. He swears that Twain was a great humorist and has a fund of stories about him.

One is about the Washingtonian who took Twain to a Chevy Chase golf course. Nervous from the presence of the writer, the host dug up half the first tee with his swing. "Nicest course I ever tasted," Gillette says Twain said, spitting violently.

Mr. Gillette tells stories on himself with relish. About how, in one play, he smoked eight cigars in one scene. The critics ribbed him. Then he played Hamlet. The critics said, "Here's one play he can't smoke cigars in, for Shakespeare does not mention them."

"Oh, doesn't he?" said a witty critic. "I think he does—where he says there's something rotten in Denmark."

He is proud of the fact that his father was in the Senate from Connecticut at the time Webster replied to Hayne. Thinks that Congress has deteriorated since those days. In fact, he thinks the elimination of Congress might not be a bad idea. He likes to talk politics and is a confirmed Republican. The first President he ever knew was Ulysses S. Grant. He says he deliberately let his physician think he was a dope addict when "Sherlock Holmes" was at its height and got a great kick when the physician, in all seriousness, said: "By gad, you do look like one!"

William Gillette hated detective stories before he acted in "Sherlock Holmes." The idea that he act the part was not his. He was in London. Doyle saw him in "The Secret Agent," and said to a friend that there at last was the man to take the part. Only there was no play. Daniel Frohman heard the remark. He talked with Doyle, arrived at an agreement.

Back in the United States Gillette read all Doyle's books, wrote the play, inserting a love interest. Frohman, always a practical joker, hadn't told him that Doyle had forbidden this. When Doyle saw the play he made no objections, but offered some scenes of his own. Gillette, acting them at rehearsal, did them in a such way that Doyle was glad enough that they were dropped.

Mr. Gillette still dislikes detective stories. Says none of them are as good as those grand stories Conan Doyle once wrote.

Security Act Will Benefit 6,533 in D. C.

Approves Local Plans; U. S. Cash Will be Forthcoming.

Washington will be called on to support less than 7,000 dependent children, blind persons and old-age pensioners under the new welfare laws, according to an analysis of the social security laws made public yesterday by the Federal Security Board.

The District, according to the figures will be required to support the following:

Old age assistance, 1,300; aid to the blind, 300; aid to children, 4,733.

Announcement of the Federal commission was made in a general statement in the course of which it said it had approved the social security program launched by 19 States and the District.

Announcement of its approval of the local programs, the board said, was assurance that Federal funds for carrying them out would be forthcoming within limitation of the law.

"This approval means that these States and the District of Columbia will receive allotments of funds from the Federal Government to match their own payments for assistance to the needy aged, dependent children and the blind," the board said.

"The Federal grant will be as much as the State itself spends in the case of assistance to dependent, aged persons and in aid to the blind, up to a combined total of $30 per person, plus 5 per cent of the amount of the Federal payment for administrative expenses.

"For aid to dependent children, the Federal grant to the State with an approved plan is one-third of the amount which the State spends up to the combined total of $18 per month for the first child and $12 per month for each additional child in any one family."

Bandits Get $169 In Holdup Series

In a series of holdups and pocketbook snatchings last night, colored thugs and footpads netted a total of $169, a $20 check and a taxicab.

Two colored men held up George S. Carll, proprietor of a liquor store at 123 B street southeast, and his clerk, Frank Smith, 5 C street southeast, at the point of a gun, forced them to get under the counter of the store and rifled the till of $150 in cash.

This holdup occurred just a few minutes after a colored man had tried to rob John R. Johnston while he was coming out of his house at 128 Carroll street southeast, a half block away. The man hit Johnston over the head with his revolver after the latter said he had no money.

Helen Woods, of 1638 Sixteenth street northwest, lost $15 in cash and a $20 check when two colored boys reached in and snatched her pocketbook from the seat of her car as she was waiting for a green light at the corner of Seventeenth and Q streets northwest.

Recalls Others Who Once Did Forensic Bits

Gillette Is of Old School; Cantor Is Held Over; Theater Notes.

By Nelson B. Bell.

In addition to having brought back an ingratiating and vibrant personality to the footlights after an absence of years, it occurs to one in retrospective contemplation of the remarkable vitality revealed by Austin Strong's three-act comedy-drama of "Three Wise Fools," currently at the National, that William Gillette, the agile, octogenarian star of the play, also has revived the lost art of the curtain speech.

His comments on his presence again upon the stage, and the reasons therefore, not to mention the divine dispensation by which the whole happy business is made possible, recall to mind the third-act curtain fluency of other famous actors in the heyday of the theater, when speech-making was expected to be part of every star's equipment.

Foremost among the "impromptu" audience thankers in my recollection were James K. Hackett, Otis Skinner, Raymond Hitchcock, Guy Bates Post, Richard Bennett, who now lies ill in New York; the late Wilton Lackaye and DeWolf Hopper.

The most graceful of all these was Mr. Skinner, dean of American actors; the wittiest, Raymond Hitchcock; the most caustic, the Messrs. Bennett and Lackaye.

Had Prepared Monologue.

It was the custom of that amiable comedy star, Hitchcock, to prepare what amounted almost to a vaudeville monologue to serve as his spontaneous oration from the stage when applause warranted an ex-officio appearance.

One year, I recall, he had a speech that paid high tribute, in a satirical way, to the late Billy Sunday, evangelist, who "last season had a better show than I had."

At other times, "Hitchy's" curtain talks took on a political color and were equally caustic and amusing.

Guy Bates Post in the entr'acte intervals of forensic opportunity in such widely variant vehicles as "Paid in Full" and "Omar, the Tentmaker," always dedicated himself to Art, with a capital "A". It was ever, to my mind, a little on the side of bombast.

When audience behavior, reaction to his drama, volume of attendance, or what not, caught the attention of either Mr. Bennett or Mr. Lackaye, both admirable actors, each was inclined to embrace the curtain speech as an outlet for an abusive tirade that should have been directed at those who were not in the theater instead of those who were.

Resented Bernhardt.

I recall one night, particularly, when Mr. Lackaye was starring at the Columbia in a new play of the South by Charles T. Dazey, author of "In Old Kentucky," the film version of which was Will Rogers' final posthumous picture, and Mme. Sarah Bernhardt was appearing at the National in a "farewell tour"—and it was her farewell—in a repertoire of her famous successes, from "La Tosca" to "Madam X." Mr. Lackaye's patronage languished slightly by reason of the international renown of the distinguished artiste comprising his "opposition."

So Mr. Lackaye tore into the audience that was supporting his efforts apparently from the point of view that they were the ones who had not bought tickets at the box office.

And that is the way it used to go.

One seldom hears a curtain speech in these curtailed days of the living drama. When he does, and it is as graceful and felicitous an expression as Mr. Gillette voices at the National, it creates a warm glow in the heart and revives fragrant memories that always will be cherished by the faithful of the playhouse.

Despite the fact that "Rose Marie," starring Jeanette MacDonald and Nelson Eddy, co-stars of that glorious musical, "Naughty Marietta," was tentatively scheduled to assume command of the screen at Loew's Palace Theater on Friday, Eddie Cantor and his "Strike Me Pink" have taken on such robust box office proportions that the "Rose Marie" engagement has been deferred at least a week. Mr. Cantor will go along shooting the chutes through a second week of hilarious and, presumably, capacity business. And while you are watching him, please bear in mind that Rita Rio and Sunny O'Dea also are in the cast—as if anybody could forget it!

Those Sailors.

"The Sailors of Cattaro," which the Columbia Players will present at Peirce Hall on February 19 and 20, was played for the first time in the United States last year by the Theater Union in New York, down on Fourteenth street at the old Civic Repertory Theater.

It was a great and exciting success, bringing interested show-shoppers from uptown.

Gilbert Gabriel said of it, in the New York American, "All the things that 'What Price Glory?' had to disguise with a grin, and 'Journey's End' to turn soggy with sighs, 'Sailors of Cattaro' has said straight out, bluntly, but no less skillful."

Is Utterly Stark.

And William Boehnel writing in the World-Telegram reported, "A stark, utterly plain, utterly truthful and enormously effective assault on war—a genuinely fine show and an exciting one."

Tom Powers, well-known actor and member of the Theater Guild's acting group, liked the play so much that he went downtown and accepted the Union's regular $25-a-week wage to play the important role of Franz Rasch, leader of the Austrian sailors' mutiny for peace.

This is all very well, but I warn the Columbians to be watchful lest some such censorial veto as overtook Morgan Baker's "Benevolent Blackmail" and the prize-winning "Private Hicks" likewise befall their outspoken "downtown" drama of "Cattaro."

Lou Rome, Baltimore motion picture exhibitor, who occupies the post of Chief Barker of the Variety Club of Washington, Tent No. 11, in the national organization, yesterday announced the cancellation of all smokers and other evening activities scheduled by the club. This action is occasioned by new building projects that will result in a considerable expansion of the club's facilities for entertainment and pastime in its quarters in the Willard. The present lounge is being converted into an extremely ornate cocktail lounge, with a special room for dancing. Adjoining rooms also are being done over. Billiard and gaming rooms, it is understood, are not omitted from this plan of enlargement. Several thousand dollars have been appropriated for the improvements—which only goes to bear out the prophecy made here at the time of Variety's inception that it would be one of the most popular and fastest organizations of its kind in the Capital.

Dots and Dashes.

With scarcely more than a day having passed since the original announcement of his "talent quest," Prof. Phil Lampkin, musical conductor at Loew's Fox Theater, has been deluged, as the saying goes, with nearly 100 applications for auditions . . . This is the more impressive because in this instance all those who ever have appeared professionally on the stage, screen or radio are barred . . . Time and place of the auditions will be made known later . . . The Curley Club of Washington will present its annual minstrel show on Tuesday and Wednesday, February 11 and 12, in Carroll Hall, Tenth and G streets . . . This will be for the benefit of the scholarship fund . . . Direction of Luke O'Reilly . . . I see by the Motion Picture Daily that Ginger Rogers, S. Barrett McCormick and Rutgers Neilson recently were in Washington as honored guests of Commissioner Allen at the President's Birthday Balls . . . Well, well, well! . . . Who would have thought it? . . . Victor Moore, the drollest of the stage's surviving comics, has left the cast of "Anything Goes" and gone West to take a part in Fred Astaire's next picture . . . Thus breaking up the team of Billy Gaxton and Victor Moore that has been on top since "Of Thee We Sing" . . . And mention of Ginger Rogers did not suggest the mention of Fred Astaire . . . So there! . . . John Hay Whitney, of Pioneer Pictures, who paid most of the costs of the New York Hippodrome stage, ring and what-have-you production, will make "Jumbo" as a picture in natural color . . . It may be an RKO-Radio release . . . Hippodrome show scheduled to keep running in New York until May . . . It was Whitney who did "Becky Sharp" in color . . . And was supposed to have launched a new era . . . But didn't . . . Too bad about Hal Roach, comedy producer and former sponsor of the Harold Lloyd success and the Santa Anita race track . . . Last year the California track paid only a 50 per cent dividend . . . This year cashiers already have handled $10,401,000 . . . Latest stock quotation, $18,500 per share bid . . . None offered!

Bigness-of-Heart Note.

I have a few hundred shares of White Gold Mine stock I will be glad to turn in on a deal for a $2 straight ticket on anything quoted at 11 to 10, or better!

The much discussed drama of Governmental job juggling, diplomatic intrigue and the "inside" workings of Federal departments, was given its premiere in the Wardman Park Theater last night with Morgan Baker in the dual role of author and leading man.

Mr. Baker was supported by a cast that hardly could have been better chosen from among the capable list of resident actors and actresses.

He was especially happy in the choice of Ann Ives and that brilliant young actress, Romaine Stevens, as two of his most prominent feminine players. Miss Ives has a reputation that nothing can destroy at this point. She adds appreciably to it by her deft depiction of a secretary who is a pivotal character in a play that makes up in verbiage what it lacks in action.

Play Lacks Action.

It cannot be said that "Benevolent Blackmail" is a play of action. It is rather a drama of recitative and implication.

Of two supposedly opposing factions in a Congressional patronage contest at the polls only one is present on the stage. The "conflict," popularly supposed to constitute the groundwork of any dramatic work, must largely be imagined. It does not occur on the stage.

The second act, it seemed to me last night, was especially static, consisting largely of monologues of some length and dialogue that produced no action and constructed no "situation" in the accepted sense of the theater.

The third act takes on more life and vigor and whips up a pace that the first two acts lack, but I still doubt that there is enough of dramatic fire here to set the whole thing aflame.

"Benevolent Blackmail" is rich in propaganda on the side of the States that are being cheated out of their quotas and there is a great deal in it that rings true in its assault on the abuses that are prevalent in present Government—or alleged to be.

But it is more a recitation than it is a drama. Most of the lines lead only to a personal expression of belief rather than to a genesis of universal action or conflict.

Audience Enthusiastic.

Last night's audience was rousingly enthusiastic. It was sponsored by the State Society of Alabama and paid the author of the play a high compliment in the matters of applause and obvious approbation.

In the central role of his play, Mr. Baker revealed much of the acting proficiency he acquired during a considerable period of stock experience in Birmingham. At times he was wholly natural and compelling; at others he was utterly stilted and completely unnatural. That is the normal meed of one who has not acted for a long period of years.

Romaine Stevens, I still contend, is perhaps the best of the local actresses that have been turned out. Her performance as Tiarka Leonovich was on a par with her prize-winning portrayal in Ted Tiller's entry in the one-act play tournament of a year or two ago.

William E. Bryant gave a consistent and at times compelling impersonation of the prominent role of Congressman Bernard, and Mrs. Miles C. Allgood scored many laughs by her shrewd depiction of Lucy, the colored maid.

"Benevolent Blackmail" has a basic idea of patent worth. What it needs is a quickening of action and a deletion of much superfluous vocal linage.

Back After a Long Absence

When Columbia Pictures' production of "Lady of Secrets" opens as the major screen attraction at the Earle Theater on Friday, it will return a brilliant star to the scene of her first professional appearance. Ruth Chatterton, star of the picture, made her stage debut with the old Columbia Players. She comes back to the local screen, after a long absence, in association with Otto Kruger and Marian Marsh, neither of whom has been too greatly visible locally of late, although Miss Marsh gave rather a good account of herself in the same producing company's "Crime and Punishment."

Burton Holmes Goes to Europe In Travelogue

Deserting South America, He Visits Romantic Areas of Brittany.

By Nelson B. Bell.

"NORMANDY AND BRITTANY." Fourth in a series of five Tuesday afternoon travelogues, delivered in the National Theater at 4:30 o'clock. Still and motion pictures by Burton and Margaret Holmes and Andre La Varre, with interpolations by Lawrence Grant, motion-picture actor. Still coloring by Mildred Petry; projection by Merritt M. Mitchell.

The S. S. Normandie plays an unexpectedly important part in this fourth of the Burton Holmes series of five Tuesday afternoon travelogues.

Mr. Holmes initiates his adventure abroad among the picturesque locales of some of Europe's most romantic lands by sailing from New York aboard the Normandie for Normandy.

Later on, he shows in detail the complicated business of building and launching this currently reigning "queen of the seas"—a true leviathan if ever there was one.

Once on the other side, the speaker conducts his audience through a characteristic maze of pictorial, historical and legendary cities and areas that have come down, some of them, through the ages and others that have taken on a new and comparatively modern glamour—Le Havre, Rouen, the ruins of Jumieges, Deauville, Honfleur, St. Nazarre, Morlaix, Lannion and so on.

Quaint Brittany.

Considerable stress in this talk is laid upon the quaint customs and dress of Brittany—and well it might be.

There is an antiquity and fidelity to the past here that is inspiring. Even when Mr. Holmes cameras the adherents to an older order in their distinctive garb with a group of modern maidens of the same country, audience interest and sympathy still repose with the faithfulness to traditional custom betrayed by the wearer of the supposedly outmoded garb and headdress.

This headdress is a thing at which to marvel. Mr. Holmes designates them all as coiffes—pronounced quaffs, in case you were not there—but they really are more than that. They are modes of hairdressing and lace-cap-adorning that have no counterpart anywhere else in the world.

Then on to the aligned monoliths of Carnac, Pont Aven, the local "pardon," a sort of holy pilgrimage, that has both dignity and beauty; the making of the omelette, the "stairway of lace," the River Couesnon and Mont St. Michel.

All this adds up to a travelogue that creates a tremendous travel-urge in the mind of the spectator. One surmises, from the prominence of the S. S. Normandie in the proceedings, that that was what it was intended to do.

Speaker Was Effective.

Mr. Holmes yesterday afternoon, as usual, was glib of tongue and facile of wit. He made many probably drab spots seem gloriously attractive.

The photography was such as to accentuate the beauty of the subjects submitted to the camera lenses. The coloring of the "still" views was as authentic as is the wont of Miss Petry's essays into this field of artistic effort.

The concluding talk of the series, next Tuesday afternoon at 4:30, will be devoted to "Ethiopia." This lecture was delivered recently before the members of the National Geographic Society while another travel lecturer was regaling his public in the National.

This department wishes once more to go on record as lamenting the scant patronage that is being accorded Burton Holmes during this season's course of lectures. They merit far and away the support which they, so far, have attracted.

Yesterday's house, however, was as enthusiastic as it was meager.

Commissioners Seek Funds for Convention

The District Commissioners yesterday approved a bill providing additional money for entertainment of the Grand Army of the Republic during its coming convention here.

G. A. R. veterans threatened to take the convention away from the Capital after Congress failed to appropriate sufficient sums to entertain them. Whereupon the Commissioners compromised. They recommended that Congress empower them to allot several thousand dollars for the veterans to a committee of citizens.

Recitalist

ALEXANDER SKLAREVSKI, Russian pianist, to be heard in a recital at 8:30 p. m. tonight at the Shoreham Hotel.

Russian Pianist To Play Tonight

Alexander Sklarevski, Russian pianist, will give a recital in the Shoreham Hotel at 8:30 tonight, under auspices of the Institute of Arts and Sciences, connected with the Cleveland Park Congregational Church.

Leaving Russia during the revolution, Mr. Sklarevski played extensively in Europe before settling in the United States. Among Washington pianists who have studied with him are Gertrude Nash, Robert Ruckman, Willa Semple, Elizabeth Winston, Helen McGraw, Leah and Gertrude Effenbach, Betty Baum, Glen Carow, Martha McAdams, Helen Williams, Rose Crivella, Jean de Lashmutt, Caroline Bender Hoge, Mary Durant, Nettie Sadle and Irving Philips.

Mr. Sklarevski will play the following program: Organ fantasia and fugue (Bach-Liszt), two "Lieder ohne Worte" (Mendelssohn), "Der Lindenbaum" (Schubert-Liszt), 24 preludes (Chopin), prelude in A minor and Barcarolle in F major (Arenski), mazurka in C sharp minor (Chaikovski), "Islamei" (Balakirev).

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Andres Segovia plays a guitar recital in the Shoreham Hotel Tuesday afternoon. Program: Prelude and Variations (Sors), Sonatine Meridionale, Tropico and Rumba (Ponce), Danza (Granados), Siciliana (C. P. E. Bach), Fugue, Sarabande and Bourree (J. S. Bach), two Minuets (Haydn), Capriccio Diabolico (Castelnuovo-Tedesco), Fandanguillo (Turina), El Torre Bermeja (Albeniz).

While admiring as much as before the technical expertise and the patent musicianship of Andres Segovia, one finds the first fine rapture of enthusiasm considerably cooled when hearing him for the second time. I suspect that it is a matter of auditory perspective, and that the movement of time has reduced the apparent size of his artistry, once startling in its novelty, to more reasonable dimensions. He is the same remarkable virtuoso, but his significance has somewhat dwindled.

Everything that can be done with a guitar Senor Segovia accomplishes in that deceptively facile manner which conceals mastery. But the tonal limitations of his instrument confine him to a relatively small field of color. The refinement of his artistry reminds one of the painting of medallion miniatures or the carving of cherrystones. As the eye has to peer closely to appreciate the exquisite details of tiny design, so does the ear have to bend to the delicacies of sound emanating from his plucked and strummed strings.

Miniaturist that he is, his perfection of workmanship is beyond cavil. Proportions are scrupulously preserved, and every touch is in precisely the right place. Nothing short of his infinite dexterity could diminish a Bach fugue to fairy tintinnabulation while retaining its dignity. The Haydn minuets sounded like elfin revels in a moonlit dell.

By the compositions of Granados and Albeniz one was reminded afresh that these writers tried to transpose into pianistic terms the peculiar resonance of the guitar, a fact which some pianists do not know, judging from their thunderous onslaughts. To near Senor Segovia play "El Torre Bermeja" is to realize what effects Albeniz was trying to produce in a denser medium.

In the pieces written for him by Manuel Ponce and Mario Castelnuovo-Tedesco, Senor Segovia displayed the extraordinary capabilities of the guitar for technical intricacies. Here was matter for marveling at what two hands can do on a fretted instrument.

Appropriately enough, the performer began his program with the prelude and variations written more than a hundred years ago by a Spanish guitar virtuoso, Fernando Sors, of Barcelona. Like his present successor, Sors also became a cosmopolitan. During the Napoleonic invasion of Spain, he fled to Paris, where Cherubini and Mehul sponsored his recitals.

Sors lived as well in Moscow and in London, but eventually settled in Paris, where he died in 1839. He was not only a guitarist, but also a composer for more instruments than the guitar. He wrote string quartets, two operas, ballets and several symphonies—all, alas, forgotten.

Street Singer of Radio Is Divorced at Reno

Reno, Nev., Feb. 4 (AP).—A. Arthur Tracy, the "Street Singer" of radio and motion pictures, was divorced at a private trial here today by Mrs. Beatrice M. Tracy on ground of cruelty.

Mrs. Tracy was permitted to resume her former name, Beatrice Margel.

Her attorney, John Sinai, said a property settlement had been made out of court. They were married October 21, 1932, in New York City.

Watching Them Make Pictures.

Hollywood, Feb. 4.

RILEY and Farley had trouble with "The Music Goes 'Round and 'Around"—and you can take that according to how you feel about the song. Playing it in a night club or on the radio was one thing, but presenting it on the screen was a problem.

The song will be even older when the flicker named after it is released, and yet the song must be put over. Much depends on the manner of presentation. Director Victor Schertzinger and Producer Harry Cohn outlined a method of attack: Riley and Farley and their three-piece band play the ditty in front of a large setting, which is designed to represent a three-valve saxophone. As the lads play and explain that "the music goes 'round and 'round," a neon light travels about the saxophone to show the music coming out here. Harry Cohn was on the set during the filming—he is one producer who works on every picture produced at his studio—and he insisted that Riley discard his famous battered saxophone and get a new, shiny instrument—"We've got to have one that films pretty."

• • • •

Additional lyrics were also written; lyrics to explain the now famous words, and lyrics for the numerous gags which are to be worked. For example, a girl stands on the top of the huge prop saxophone, and as Riley and Farley sing: "The Girl Goes 'Round and Around," the gal follows the path of the neon light, and when she comes out, she is beautifully gowned, and she shouts: "I did all right."

But the main fun was to hear Riley and Farley. After all these months, they were being told how to play "The Music Goes 'Round and Around."

• • • •

Al Jolson, Winnie Shaw and Cab Calloway are marching up a tall flight of stairs, waving their hands and singing, "Save Me Sister," the big musical number in the flicker, "The Singing Kid." Bobby Connelly, who is directing the sequence, is at the top of the stairs giving his instructions through a loud speaker, for it is only a rehearsal. Parading behind Jolson, Shaw and Calloway is marching a mob of colored extras, shouting and tossing their arms in the air. The stairs are surrounded by large cardboards, shaped and painted to represent clouds.

The scene is rehearsed again and again. Many of the colored extras are wearing make-up. Director Connelly explains, "They photograph too light; have to have been put on make-up so they'd look colored."

Jolson, Shaw and Calloway climb the stairs and sing "Save Me Sister" the entire morning. The mob of extras follows them. They rehearse this number for several days; it will take only several minutes on the screen. Director Connelly shouts: "Lunch . . . and be careful of those clouds—the paint comes off."

• • • •

Mary Pickford's and Jesse Lasky's opus, "One Rainy Afternoon," is being filmed. It is a courtroom sequence. Director Rowland Lee is standing near the judge, played by Donald Meek, and Francis Lederer is trying to explain why he was arrested for annoying Ida Lupino in a movie theater. "One Rainy Afternoon" was adapted from a French farce, and it has been cleaned up a bit. That is, Lederer annoys Miss Lupino in a more dignified manner.

• • • •

Robert Montgomery is now making the flicker version of "Petticoat Fever," and in it he plays the role of a young man up at the Arctic who hasn't seen a woman for—well, he hasn't seen a woman for ever so long. And who should arrive but Myrna Loy. She would be exciting even if you had been seeing women daily.

However, before Miss Loy appears on the scene, Reginald Owen enters, and it is an amusing sequence that Director George Fitzmaurice is filming. Owen tells how he arrived, introduces himself and states his name. Montgomery acknowledges the introduction, gets ready to tell his name to Owen, and then asks to be excused. He can't remember his name for the moment.

• • • •

John Barrymore, as Mercutio in "Romeo and Juliet," is playing that scene immediately after he has been wounded, and he is giving it everything expected of a Barrymore. After the "take," Director George Cukor says: "We'll do it again—and not as much of that," mimicking Barrymore. "My greatest failing," says Barrymore, giving another of his delightful answers. Barrymore says many amusing things on the set. It is really a shame most of them can't be printed. John Barrymore, I repeat, commands the attention of the players. He is an actor who is great to the great—and near great.

D. C. Commissioners Vote Unfavorable Report on Racing Bill

Hazen, Track Fan, Leads Protest

Hope for Bill Seen if It Reaches Floor of the Senate.

THE District Commissioners yesterday turned thumbs down on a proposal to legalize horse racing in Washington. They voted to submit an unfavorable report to Congress on a bill introduced by Representative Mary T. Norton, chairman of the House District Committee, that would bring the thoroughbreds and pari-mutuel machines to the Nation's Capital.

The suggestion that the report be unfavorable came from the one District Commissioner who, is directly interested in horse racing.

He was Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen, who has a life-long background of racing, horse breeding and showing and who cherishes hopes that some day one of his thoroughbreds, "Longful," will develop into a stake horse.

Allen an Enthusiast.

Commissioner George E. Allen spends many a summer and autumn afternoon at nearby tracks and has been known to travel thousands of miles to see the fillies run. In casting a negative vote for the racing bill, he indicated a belief that Washingtonians have all the race tracks they need in Maryland.

Commissioner Dan I. Sultan, the third member of the board, also voted against the proposal. Disclaiming personal interest in or knowledge of the sport, he said he would be guided by the views of his better-informed colleagues and by the general sentiment of Washingtonians.

A bill to legalize horse racing and betting in the District was beaten during the closing days of the last Congress, when Senator Arthur Capper (Republican), of Kansas, objected to its consideration on the floor of the Senate.

"If I hadn't done it," Senator Capper said, "there were others who would have."

Opponents of the measure then and now admit it would be enacted if it could be brought to full consideration on the floor of the Senate after it had been passed by an unquestioned majority of the House.

Opposed By Tydings.

Introduced by Representative Norton (Democrat), of New Jersey, and actively opposed by Senator Millard Tydings (Democrat), of Maryland, whose State reaps hundreds of thousands of dollars profit from visits of Washington residents to Maryland tracks each year, the bill is going to have a rocky road this session.

The bill has the indorsement of of the District-Maryland Federation of Labor. The District Central Labor Union also has urged its enactment. If the bill is enacted it is proposed to spend $1,000,000 upward in improving the old Benning race track.

The Columbia Heights Citizens Association at a meeting last night adopted a resolution approving the Norton bill.

Mrs. Norton Expresses Surprise, Amusement

Representative Mary Norton, of New Jersey, chairman of the House District Committee, last night expressed both surprise and amusement when informed of the action of the District Commissioners in reporting unfavorably the bill to legalize horse racing here, of which she is the author.

"I prefer to withhold comment until after I have seen the reasons on which the Commissioners have based their report," said Mrs. Norton, "but I will say that I am absolutely surprised at their action.

"I know both Commissioners Hazen and Allen to be race fans and I cannot help but think it strange that they protested my bill. Why, it's amusing to thing that what is good enough for the Commissioners to attend in Maryland is not worthy of legalization in the District."

Mrs. Norton pointed out that the House last year passed a bill to legalize racing despite a similar adverse recommendation handed down by the District Commissioners.

Azucar's Trainer Cited by Stewards

"The stewards are not satisfied with the showing of the horse Dark Winter at this meeting and a thorough investigation will be conducted to determine the cause of the sudden improvement in his form," read a statement issued by the stewards.

Geneva Downs C. U.'s Five, 42 to 28

PLAINLY showing the effects of too much celebrating the night before, Catholic University's basketball team met defeat last night at the hands of an alert and smooth Geneva five, 42-28, before a slim audience at Brookland.

Using a zone defense and the unerring scoring eyes of George Pennebaker and Ed Hurley to best advantage, the visitors more than atoned for their defeat at George Washington Monday night with one of the best brands of court play seen on the Cardinals' floor this winter. Pennebaker chalked up 15 points and Hurley 12.

Carroll Top Scorer.

But "Irish" Carroll salvaged some portion of his team's honor with a spectacular brand of shooting that netted 17 points for the beaten Cardinals and almost tied the scoring record made by Hal Kiesel, of George Washington, Monday night.

Carroll was absolutely unstoppable. He sank shots from the side, under the backboard and frequently leaped high into the air, shoving the ball toward the hoop as he turned and twisted in midair.

Catholic assumed a 3-0 lead at the outset, but after first relinquishing this advantage and then tying the count at 6-6, trailed at the intermission, 4-10. Geneva was never headed thereafter, nor did the home team threaten seriously.

Butter Shortage Ended by Games —Germans Happy

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Feb. 4.—The Germans want the Olympic winter games to last an entire year.

Not beacuse they are crazy about sports, but because shortage of butter, lard and eggs appears to have ended as long as foreign visitors are in the country.

With the arrival of the first foreign Olympic teams, eggs again made their appearance in Germany.

They come from Holland, Turkey, Denmark, Finland, Norway, Sweden, Poland and Hungary and the little stamps on their shells, indicating their origin, best display the German government's attempts to make things convenient for foreigners.

Simultaneously, Germans are told that the tickets they received from butter deals which entitled them to buy half a pound of butter every week were outdated. There is plenty of butter now.

Stars Will Race In Santa Anita 'Preview'

By the Associated Press.

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 4.—A "preview" of the $100,000 Santa Anita Handicap was promised in next Saturday's card at the track in nominations announced today.

Discovery, Cavalcade and Head Play—the three top weight carriers for the February 22 Handicap—are nominated, together with 11 other entrants in that seasonal classic, for Saturday's $7,500 San Antonio Handicap.

This mile and one-eighth forerunner of the mile and a quarter big event, will find Alfred G. Vanderbilt's 5-year-old chestnut sensation glowing in the public mind from the display last Saturday in coming up from 15 lengths behind in the last quarter to finish 5 lengths ahead.

The famous 5-year-old handicap king of 1934, Mrs. Isobel Dodge Sloane's Cavalcade, is ready to answer the gossip that his racing days are over. Cavalcade made the mile in 1:36 2-5 in his last hard trial

Then there will be Azucar, the 8-year-old sugar horse of F. M. Alger, jr., that won the big handicap last year and holds the record Derby distance in 2:02.1.

Canisius Beats Hoya Five, 43 to 36

Special Dispatch to The Post.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Feb. 4.—Canisius College's basketball team scored its seventh victory in eight starts here tonight, defeating Georgetown in the feature of the first intercollegiate doubleheader ever staged in Buffalo, 43 to 36. St. Bonaventure downed Niagara in the other half of the double bill, 37 to 23.

Hitting their best stride of the season, the Griffins took an 18-to-15 half-time advantage, then shot far out in front in the first ten minutes of the second half, with Joe Szur, high scorer with 14 points, and Jimmy O'Donnell setting the pace. Outreached by Canisius, which boasts the tallest center in the college game in 6-foot-9½-foot Joe Dudsick, Georgetown fought hard all the way and was always dangerous.

Petroskey Put Out.

Mario Gregorio, sharpshooting forward, threw in three long shots for the Hilltoppers, and both Mike Petroskey and John Franks outscored the brilliant Neal O'Donnell, best center in this district. Petroskey was banished on fouls with eight minutes to play, but Frank came in to score three field goals in quick order.

Georgetown showed by far the better passing attack, but could not stop the accurate Szur who enjoyed one of the best nights of his career. Unfamiliar with local interpretation of rules, Georgetown was repeatedly penalized for infractions that pass unnoticed in other sections.

Canzoneri Fights McLarnin in May 15-Round Bout Slated at New York Garden.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Feb. 4.—Jimmy McLarnin will emerge from a year's retirement to battle Tony Canzoneri, lightweight champion, in a 15-round bout in Madison Square Garden early in May, Promoter Jimmy Johnston said today.

Both Canzoneri and McLarnin have agreed to terms, Johnston announced, although contracts have not yet been signed.

The match will be one of two for Canzoneri during May. Later in the month he will defend his lightweight championship, Johnston said, against one of five leading challengers—Lou Arbers, Pedro Montanez, Indian Hurtado, Baby Arizmendi or Leonard Del Genio.

McLarnin hasn't fought since he lost his welterweight championship to Barney Ross here last May. The match, on the face of available returns, looks like a bad one for Canzoneri. For years McLarnin has been known as a poisonous rival for lighter men.

Ball Named on German Team; Nazis and Jews Both Irked

By the United Press.

BERLIN, Feb. 4.—The selection of the Jewish ice hockey star, Rudi Ball, on the German Olympic team by Reich Sportsleader Hans von Tschammer und Osten has caused strong indignation throughout the country both among radical Nazis and radical Jews.

None, however, dares to vent fury publicly as Von Tschammer made his decision only after securing consent of the highest party authorities.

Privately, both factions express disgust, the Nazis because a Jew is included on the German team and the Jews because Ball accepted the appointment.

In 1933, Ball, on account of being of non-Aryan descent, was ousted from the German team, as were all other non-Aryan athletes, such as Dr. Daniel Prenn, Germany's No. 1 tennis player and Davis Cup contestant. Since Ball has played with Swiss and Italian teams.

He is an excellent forward and is probably the best player named to the German team.

By Paul Gallico.

GARMISCH-PARTENKIRCHEN, Feb. 4.—Snow at last. An Alpine storm blanketed this town today in a steady fall. Thousands of skiers paraded the streets, their skis on their shoulders, bound for the mountains. Sleighs jingled through the town's streets, ice froze on the Reissersee, permitting hockey practice.

All obstacles for the beginning of the Olympic show were removed except bobbing, which was postponed, awaiting a three-day freeze to put the track in order. A delicate situation confronts the American team which has more good bobbers than places on the sleds. The boys are squawking as the time to make selections nears.

Avery Brundage, of Chicago, head of the American Olympics committee, will make the final choices. Someone is sure to be sore. It looks like Hubert Stevens of New York will drive one of the bobs, as he knows the new trick American record-smashing sleds.

No Official Protest.

The American hockey team arrived in good spirits for practice. There is a strange hockey situation here. The Americans are practically the only real amateurs. Most of the European teams are loaded with "ringers." I heard today that the Czechs tried to naturalize three Canadians so they might play on their team, but the scheme did not work. England has six Canadians playing on its team, some of them semi-professionals.

There is considerable disappointment in the European ranks, as there apparently are not enough Canadian hockey players to go around. It is said that the Canadians on the English team are better than the Canadians on the Canadian squad and the Canucks are sore.

To Meet Germany.

America draws Germany in the first game Thursday. The boys have been playing semi-pro teams all around Europe and they are all cheerful. They don't care about ringers.

Preliminary beefing is splendid. I listened to an Englishman squawk today because he thought Cecilia Colledge, a fine English figure skater, couldn't get a break against Sonja Henie, although she does more difficult stuff. I watched Miss Colledge practice today. She is a big, pink cheeked, powerful girl, with amazingly strong legs, like a football tackle. She does tremendous acrobatics on the ice She has been skating all her life. She goes to bed at 9 o'clock and is up at 7 every morning and practices all day long.

Miss Colledge may beat Miss Henie in the Olympics, though Sonja has more grace and beauty in her movements. I saw her practice with a snow-white hood over her head.

Grace and Rhythm.

She is the most beautiful thing on skates; all grace and rhythm, where Miss Colledge has power and strength. Miss Colledge does the most amazing spins I ever have seen, but Sonja uses spins as a graceful routine, rather than acrobatics.

I will be surprised if the American girls place well in the figure skating, although Audrey Peppe's pep may get them something. Miss Peppe is like a pert, small bird. Maribell Vinson is good, too, although she has not yet arrived.

I also watched an amazing English child, Belita Jepson Turner, a little ballet dancer. She is rubber-legged and looks like a sprite as she makes graceful, theatrical stops.

12-Year-Old Skater.

The Japanese have a 12-year-old figure skater. The girl, Inada Stsuka, looks like a doll. She has black hair and has amazing rhythm on the ice.

All is turmoil here tonight on the eve of the team selections. The snow has dressed up the village magnificently. The Bierstubes are packed and everyone is gay and happy. I look forward to the greatest winter Olympics ever. Your correspondent has acquired a bicycle to duck the stiff taxi rates and rides which are more hazardous than mountain skiing. But the merry villagers enjoy my falls.

Girl Ace Averages 30 Points a Game

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Gate City, Va., Feb. 3.—Elizabeth Carter, sensational forward for Shoemaker High School of Gate City, has established a scoring record for the last three years that other forwards of the Appalachian territory will find hard to beat.

Beginning her scoring surge in 1934, the Shoemaekr flash has amassed a total of 1,146 points in 38 ball games, an average of 30.2 points per game. If there are any forwards in Virginia, or for that matter in the South, who can boast a better record, Coach Clennie G. Quillen would like them to step up and take a bow.

In only one game has Miss Carter ever been held to less than 10 points. Her biggest night came against Coeburn in 1935, when she rang up 48 points. Coach Quillen says that Elizabeth once scored 75 points against an independent team from Kingsport, but he is not counting this in her official points.

Leave Is Granted To Umpire Stark

By the United Press.

New York, Feb. 4.—Al "Dolly" Stark, National League umpire who had been reported a "holdout," today was granted a year's leave of absence by President Ford Frick in order to try his hand at something else."

Frick said reports that Stark, generally regarded as the best of the league's umpires, was holding out, were untrue.

"The trouble was that Stark wanted to get out of baseball for a while to try his hand at something else," Frick said. "And that's the way it is now. So he will stay out for one year and, if he wants, may come back in 1937."

Eyeing Flag, Yanks Spend $850,000

10,000 Seats are to be Added to Stadium; 85,000 Capacity.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Feb. 4.—Col. Jacob Ruppert can't buy the baseball ivory he wants with his millions, so he's going to buy a mess of concrete.

He's going to get rid of a lot of wood—not deadwood among his players, because he says he hasn't any and, what's more, the team is going to win the pennant this year—and replace it with cement.

Double-Decker Bleachers.

The triple-decker grand stand will be continued around right field. From that point to the left field stands a double-decker bleacher without a top will be constructed. A third tier and a roof probably will be added later, he said. The concrete bleachers would be constructed first.

The new construction, which will increase the seating capacity from 75,000 to 85,000 will cost approximately $850,000, bringing the total cost of "The House Ruth Built" in 1923 up to $3,500,000.

"The stadium's going to be improved for several reasons," said Ruppert, and then there was a twinkle in his blue eyes. "What we're really doing is getting ready for the 1936 world series."

Long an Eyesore.

"We've been a second-place club for three years so that ought to qualify us for first place this year. No? Well, then let's look at it this way:

"The wooden bleachers long have been an eyesore as well as a drain on the treasury to keep them in repair. I've been told the depression is over. I have some money to spend—the other ball clubs wouldn't take it for the players we wanted—so I decided now is the time to make the change."

Miss Dettweiler Shoots a 92 To Qualify

By the Associated Press.

CORAL GABLES, Fla., Feb. 4.—Helen Dettweiler, 19-year-old Washington, D. C., golf star, qualified safely with a 92 today in the 18-hole medal round of the Miami Biltmore women's golf championship.

Miss Dettweiler, entered in a field of 107 of the best women golfers in the country, finished 11 strokes behind the medalist, 17-year-old Patty Berg, of Minneapolis, who slashed par by 1 stroke and came within a shot of cracking Maureen Orcutt Crews' tournament course record.

The District golfer, Miss Dettweiler, went out in 42, for one of the lowest nine-hole rounds of the day, but faltered on the stretch, scoring a 50.

Mrs. Marion Turpie Lake, of New York, and Mrs. Opal S. Hill, of Kansas City, were next with 86 each, while Marion Miley, of Lexington, Ky., and Kathryn Hemphill, of Columbia, S. C., had 88 each.

Scores of 98 or better qualified. Thirty-two will begin match play tomorrow in the title flight.

Pedley to Substitute For Hitchcock on Team

New York, Feb. 4 (AP).—The personnel of the United States polo team which will invade England next summer for resumption of International Westchester Cup competition was completed today with the accpetance by Eric Pedley, of California, on an invitation to substitute for the veteran Tommy Hitchcock, jr.

Dr. Meyer Calls in Ice Skating Petitions

Dr. Christopher Meyer, chairman of the District committee on ice skating, yesterday requested all skaters who have not already sent in petitions favoring an indoor rink to mail them to him at 1544 North Edgewood street, Clarendon, Va., as soon as possible. More than 3,000 persons have voiced approval for such a rink.

This Morning . . .

With Shirley Povich

WHAT this department does not know about fishing and hunting and field and stream in general would take years in the telling.

Thus I am quite confounded at the prospect of writing a piece on what the fishermen and the hunters—or huntsmen as you prefer—call wild life.

POVICH.

I don't know a small-mouthed bass from a fan-tailed catfish, if any, or a ruffed grouse from a meadow lark. In fact, wild life to me was always synonymous with fast life, and conjured visions of cabarets—wine, women and song—but seein' as how there is a convention of respectable gentlemen in town that meets under the name of the Society for the Conservation of Wild Life, or something, I guess I've been wrong all along.

All of this is leading up to the fact that I met Jack Lamb yesterday—Jack Lamb, of Fort Worth, Tex., the champion bass fisherman of 'em all, who hauled right off and said there was no such thing as fisherman's luck, despite all the fishing columns that are captioned by that name. Fishing—bass fishing at least—is something of an exact science to hear Jack Lamb tell it, and Jack Lamb should know whereof he speaks when he speaks of bass fishing.

Because he's fished in 10,000 different bodies of water and has the clippings to prove it. He knows the lure of the placid, willow-bordered lake and the rush of the turbulent stream like no other man, you're convinced after one squint at his scrap book which, in fact, comprises 17 volumes, any one of which would stagger a stevedore.

I GOT interested in this fellow Jack Lamb when he showed me his pictures. He's a fisherman with a gallery, and I don't mean a picture gallery—I mean that he's a bass fisherman who commands an audience. Why, when the news gets around that Jack Lamb is going to cast his line overboard, it's an event down in Texas, or wherever Jack Lamb happens to be casting. He showed me pictures of 4,000 persons crowding the scene for a glimpse of the way he does it, which, apparently, is the very pinnacle of the art.

His secret? Intensive study of the black bass—the gamest fish that swims—and its habits. Why, he tells me that he spent six years in the wilds of Oklahoma merely observing the specie without so much as attempting to make a catch. He says he can tell now at a glance whether a stream contains the bass, which, I'll have you know, is a great time-saver, or at least appears to be.

And Jack Lamb will have you know that it isn't everybody who can cast a line. Himself? Well, he says it took him four years of steady casting every day—he fished every day of the season over a period of 17 years—before he became proficient. His casting act also commands a gallery. Down in Florida, where he has given exhibitions, he's filled small auditoriums during a casting performance—on dry land, moreover.

What Jack Lamb doesn't know about bass fishing you could probably balance on the end of a toothpick. He has kept the records to show that during his lifetime he had extracted exactly 42,500 bass from the Nation's inland waters at the conclusion of the summer of 1935. He's a sportsman. All of his catches are returned to their habitats and he hasn't tasted of the tender meat of bass in seven years.

In Short—

You have Jack Lamb's word for it that: bass are the greatest cannibals among wild life . . . that the big 'uns eat the little 'uns with such regularity that only 3 per cent of all bass spawned mature to a 15-inch length . . . that the small bass are the most gullible and go most readily for an angler's hook . . . the big ones wouldn't be so big if they weren't smart, he says . . . and now: Clark Griffith did not sell Fred Schulte to the Pittsburgh Pirates for the standard waiver price of $7,500 . . . after all American League clubs had waived on Schulte and the Pirates had put in a claim, Griffith hiked the price to $10,000 . . . the Pirates balked at that figure and Griffith finally settled at $8,000 . . . Recommended for this week's reading: The Saturday Evening Post's piece entitled "The Football Expert Takes the Stand," which is the best burlesque on sports slang and adjectivity that I ever seed . . . Jack Regan, who was slugged during the street row following the C. U. football banquet, was a former C. U. football star but best known as captain of the 1925 C. U. tennis team . . . and the handsomest man on the campus.

24 Nations Have Sent Fighters To America—Two Won the Title

By Jack Diamond.

Copyright, 1936, by the United Press.

NEW YORK, Feb. 4.—Dr. Doc Morris, his cheaters posted far down on his broad schnozzola and various mimeographed documents cascading from his bulging pockets, has just paic us a call anent Jack Dempsey's international heavyweight tournament.

That, said the doctor, was his mission, although he dwelt for the most part on the hands-across-the-sea elements of pugilis t. It may be just that the world-wide white hope hunt brings all this to mind. Frankly, I'm not at all clear what the whole thing has to do with Mr. Dempsey's tournament, but the good doctor—who is not a doctor at all, of course—points out in rather convincing fashion that no less than 24 nations have dispatched their ring warriors to these shores in search of the American dollar.

And that's what most of 'em returned with. Two went back but briefly in careful possession of the world's heavyweight title, Schmeling and Carnera and the one notable exception in the Doc's 35-year ring collections was Herr Plaake.

"A fine importation he was!" snorted Doc, whose first name long since has been trampled into the resin. "Harry Pollack imported him off a beer truck in New York in 1903 or 1904. He's the first one I remember.

"They passed him off as a Hollander, from Holland. Herr Plaake—the Doc pronounced 'Herr' as though it had a single 'R'—was a regular story book giant, fat, with jowls. Why, he weighed over 300, but the guy had never had a boxing glove on in his life. So Billy McCarney, who was press-agenting a Philadelphia fight club, calls him 'boxer extraordinary to the King of Holland.'

"So they match him with Kid McCoy in Philly, I remember, and the guy is so big it takes four or five of 'em to drag him back to his corner after it is all over."

And there were others, too, in the Doc's list of heavyweight invaders, good and bad, domestic and imported. He tells of Francisco Cruz, the Portuguese, who actually was subsidized by his government—"he left on the first boat back, I think;" and the Italian Giacomo Bergomas—"he was a guard, what they call it, for King Emmanuel, a beautiful fellow, 6-feet-3, but he don't make the grade"—and many more.

Doc rates the Irish thrush, Jack Doyle the biggest disappointment of all and classes the American debut of Rudy Wagner, the German—"like Dempsey, he shadow-boxed, looked great on paper, he did"—against big boy Peterson as unquestionably the worst heavyweight fight on record.

Of all the 64 heavyweights from foreign lands on his roster, the Doc feels that no matter how putrid some of them were, three "still are in line for dough," the former champions, Schmeling and Carnera, and the rising Argentine sensation, Jorge Brescia. There's a young man who's going places," opines Dr. Doc Morris.

WESTERN HIGH tossed itself out of second place in the interhigh basketball race yesterday by tossing away enough free shots virtually to win a couple of ball games. Taking advantage of the Georgetowners' inaccuracy on the gift throws, Tech stumbled to a 19-16 victory and Western was consequently supplanted in second place by Roosevelt's surprising Rough Riders, who were upsetting Central, 24 to 22.

Both games injected a bit of spark into the dying interhigh series which had not seen two such closely-fought games take place in one day all season. Roosevelt's victory now makes it favorite to finish runner-up to Eastern's champions, the Rough Riders having lost three games in contrast to four losses apiece for Tech, Central and Western.

Overhauls Central.

Roosevelt earned its way into the No. 2 berth in creditable fashion, overhauling Central's favored five after the Mount Pleasanters had taken a comfortable lead, then taking a lead in its own right and staving off a desperate Central rally in the closing moments. Coincidentally, both home teams, Roosevelt and Tech, playing on their own floors, were the victors.

Tech's players, on the other hand, were opportunitists throughout, taking advantage of every Western lapse and especially so in the last quarter. Leading, 18-16, going into the final period, Tech concentrated on stubborn defensive play, holding Western scoreless.

Miss Foul Shots.

The Red team, however, was particularly to blame for its surrender of the runner-up position. No less than six straight foul shots did the Western boys miss in the last quarter. They also missed close to twice that number from the floor. The fact that Captain George Hahn and Bill Rea of Tech were both ejected in the last period for four personals apiece helped the Western cause not at all.

Gerald Burns missed three free tosses in a row to start the period off. Paul Borden flubbed another chance and Burns came back strongly to miss three more. All this time, Western was matching its missing from the foul line by missing from scrimmage. Western sank four free shots in 12 attempts.

Off to Early Lead.

Tech got off to an 8-5 lead in the first quarter with Rea and Hahn leading the scoring. The Maroon had stretched it to 13-9 by half-time but Gene Daly and Burns brought Western back to within two points of tying the count at 18-16. But Western still had its great foul-shot act up its sleeve and coolly proceeded to toss away seven points in a row and with it second place.

The Central-Roosevelt fracas saw fighting Billy Vermillion start the ball rolling for Central before the echo of the opening whistle had faded. Spiro Kolius tallied a foul shot for the home team but Fones and Vermillion more than retaliated with a flurry of marks, which enabled Central to lead at 8 to 1. Kolius and George Coakley soon put Roosevelt back in the running.

Score Tied at 9-All.

The score was tied at 9-all just after the opening of the second period, when Silverman's foul attempt was good. Fones shot a looping basket from midfloor to reestablish Central's lead, but Silverman, Kolius and Fogel functioned with startling accuracy to enable Roosevelt to lead, never to be headed thereafter. At half time the home team maintained a 16-to-12 superiority.

It was Don Fones, high scorer of the game, who tied the score right after intermission with two beautiful potshots. Francis Coakley broke the deadlock with a foul shot, which when added to Kolius' potshot and Silverman's beautiful angle-placement, gave Roosevelt a lead of 21 to 16, with one period to go.

Comer Saves Day.

Fogel stretched Roosevelt's lead with a foul shot, but Central loomed as a factor when Thompson, Vermillion, Fones and Matera scored in rapid succession. Comer, however, saved the day for the Rough Riders by sinking a snowbird with less than a minute to go.

Episcopal to Play Virginia Freshmen

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Alexandria, Va., Feb. 4.—Episcopal High topped off a hard week of preparation for the Virginia freshman quintet this afternoon with a stiff scrimmage. The Virginia Yearlings and the Maroon meet here at 4 p. m. tomorrow.

Resettlement Bureau Cagers will oppose the Columbia Firemen at 8:30 p. m. here tomorrow.

The St. Mary Celtics will defend their city unlimited basketball title against the Columbia Firemen in the Armory Hall at 8:30 p. m. Friday.

George Washington High postponed its game with Fredericksburg High today because of the bad condition of the highways. The two teams will meet at 8:30 p. m. tomorrow.

Colonials Meet Davis-Elkins Tonight

ONE of the highest scoring, if not the best-known, teams in the East invades Washington tonight to challenge the nine-game winning streak of George Washington. Davis-Elkins is the name, and the boys will be on exhibition in action from 8 o'clock until a little after 9 o'clock.

As noted above, the West Virginians are not well known in basketball circles, but their reputation was nothing to brag about last season when they bumped off an overconfident Buff and Blue quintet, 48 to 44, at the little tin temple on H street. This season the Colonials have their best team in history, but Davis-Elkins is still to be feared.

Held to less than 40 points in only three games, the visitors have amassed appalling scores on other opponents, some reading like prosperous stock figures. They whipped Bluefield by 82 points; West Liberty by 76; Morris-Harvey by 79, and West Virginia Wesleyan by 56. No bad eyesight there.

George Washington's starting line-up will comprise the familiar five who are leading the downtown school to its greatest basketball record. Hal Kiesel, Ben Goldfaden, Tommy O'Brien, George Freilicher and "Mouse" Schonfeld will start the fray.

Ed Gutowski, a painful thorn in the Colonials' collective side last winter; Forest Kendall and Jerry Gainer, whom George Washington's gridmen remember well from last season, are the visitors' outstanding players. They are largely responsible for the 13 victories scored in 15 games and the astounding sum of more than 700 points made thus far.

Bethesda-Chevy Chase Beats Gonzaga Easily

Bethesda-Chevy Chase High held Gonzaga to a brace of field goals yesterday in running up a 24-to-8 victory over the visitors at Leland, for their second triumph of the year over the prepsters.

The Bethesdans were near their full strength today for the first time in a month, only Snyder missing, led, 6-to-0, at the quarter, and limited the visitors to a lone foul shot by O'Brien at half time, to hold a 12-to-1 lead. The reserves dotted the Bethesda line-up in the last half. Harris, returning from a Florida trip, was well in form with 12 points to lead the teams.

Eastern Is Out Of W. & L.'s Tourney

Will Forego Court Event in Order to Compete at Glens Falls.

EASTERN HIGH SCHOOL, for the last four years a dominating power in the annual South Atlantic scholastic basketball championships held at Washington and Lee University, will not play in the big schoolboy classic this year.

Principal Charles Hart said last night the school has a choice between playing in the South Atlantic tournament and the Eastern States championships at Glen Falls, N. Y. It prefers to play in the latter event in which it is the defending champion. The South Atlantic tournament will be held at the University of Richmond this year due to the National Intercollegiate wrestling championships being held at Washington and Lee.

Seeks John Marshall.

As the result of its decision, Eastern is negotiating with John Marshall High of Richmond, favorite to win the Virginia State championship, for a home-and-home two-game series. Coach Dave Miller, of John Marshall, expressed a wish several days ago to play Eastern on this basis. Dates for the games probably will be announced shortly. John Marshall will be the defending champion in the forthcoming South Atlantic classic.

Eastern preference to forego the South Atlantic tourney leaves the runner-up to the Washington interhigh championship as the logical representative of the Capital. At present four teams are in a heated battle for the runner-up honors with Roosevelt High in undisputed possession of second place at this writing.

Won 1932 Event.

Eastern undoubtedly has consistently been the most sought-after school year after year to play in the Washington and Lee event. In 1932 under Coach Charlie Guyon, the Lincoln Parkers won the event. In 1933 they won it again, under Coach Mike Kelley. In 1934 they were upset by Charlotte, N. C., the eventual champion, in the semi-finals. Last year, heavy favorites to win, the Northeasters were knocked off by John Marshall of Richmond, the eventual champion.

Eastern's decision, Hart said, is prompted by a ruling inserted in inter-high regulations saying that the inter-high champion has the right of preference over other schools so far as playing in post-season tournaments are concerned, other schools being barred from playing in the same tournament.

Rinaldi Five Clinches First Series Honors

The Rinaldi Tailors won the first-half pennant in the Heurich League and avenged an old score in one grand gesture last night as they swamped Delaware & Hudson, 39-13, in a loose game.

Boasting a 20-10 margin at halftime, the Rinaldis held their opponents to 3 points in the final half, keeping them scoreless until the last five minutes of play.

Robert Holds Victory Over O'Mahony

YVON ROBERT, who wrestles Mike Mazurki in the feature match of the weekly show at the Turner Arena tomorrow, boasts what is believed to be the best record in the game today. It's not the quantity but rather the quality of his record that puts him in the limelight.

Besides gaining an unofficial verdict over Champion Danno O'Mahony recently in Holyoke, Mass., the handsome 21-year-old Frenchman has licked such mat celebrities as Ed (Don) George and Jim Browning, former world champions; Jumping Joe Savoldi and last Monday Ray Steele, perennial top-notcher.

23 Victories Here.

If past performances mean anything, Mazurki can be depended upon to furnish more than ordinary opposition tomorrow night. Locally Mazurki has chalked up 23 wins, 3 draws and only 2 defeats. One of Mike's finest efforts was against Ed (Don) George when he outclassed the title-claimant for 5 minutes before succumbing to a leg injury suffered in a fall from the ring.

In a promising semi-final, George Koverly, a rough-working heavyweight who has recently gained great popularity in Boston and Philadelphia, works with Dean Detton, former University of Utah football star. Bouts involving Dr. Hall and Ivan Managoff and Jack Hader and Irving Comeld round out the program.

Big U. S. L. T. A. Profit in '35 Will Be Reported by Baker

By John R. Vosburgh.

PRETTY dollar signs and figures to match—showing that tennis is quite a money-making business—will be carried to the annual conclave of the United States Lawn Tennis Association tomorrow in the brief case of a Washington lawyer.

Business-like Lawrence A. Baker, treasurer of the U. S. L. T. A., will be toting the brief case. Its contents will show the increasingly robust financial condition of one of the world's wealthiest sporting organizations. They probably will bring smiles of satisfaction to the faces of the U. S. L. T. A.'s many delegates when read slowly and sonorously by tall, lean Lawyer Baker, making his treasurer's report.

Attorney-treasurer Baker said yesterday his report "will show a substantial profit." It will show a profit more than the approximate $12,000 realized last year. It will show the most encouraging monetary returns the association has seen since the depression.

"Yes," said Lawyer Baker, "it is a reflection of the popular trend that the depression is fading fast. People have more money to spend for amusements."

What will be done with the money?

Baker believes the association can now swing into new enterprises. First and foremost will be resurrection of the National Interscholastic championships, extinct since 1924.

The U. S. L. T. A., said its treasurer, undoubtedly will also vote again to hold the men's and women's Nationals at the same time as inaugurated last year. This policy helped in increasing the gate receipts, Baker explained. So did the plan of holding the National Doubles at Boston instead of Philadelphia.

"There is more interest in Boston," he said.

Open tournaments will receive the go-by, according to the exchequer chief. The National Association can do nothing about them because the interscholastic body has tabooed them.

About the eight-week rule?

"It will be carefully discussed," said the treasurer. Players who spent more than eight weeks playing in tournaments at the expense of clubs will be suspended from amateur tennis.

Attorney Baker personally doubts any players will be suspended.

Maryland Frosh Trounce Eastern

The interhigh championship dignity of Eastern's title-holding leather loopers was ruffled considerably yesterday at College Park by the Maryland Freshmen, who drubbed the champs soundly, 36 to 24. It was Eastern's third defeat in 20 starts this season, none of which was lost to a high school team.

The apparent jinx of collegiate opposition is evidently hovering about the Northeasters, whose only two previous defeats came at the hands of the George Washington Freshmen twice in a row. The victory was Maryland's ninth in ten starts and its fifth straight win in five starts against Washington high school teams.

To add to the ignominy of the occasion, Milt Mullitz, former Tech High star, and Francis Beamer, erstwhile Roosevelt center, were conspicuous in giving the high school its third defeat. Each had previously felt the sting of defeat at Eastern's hands.

Furr to Fight Halaiko In Rematch Monday

What is developing to be the bitterest boxing rivalry in Washington will have another chance to assert itself next Monday at the Turner Arena when Phil Furr, District welterweight champion, re-engages Steve Halaiko over a scheduled 10-round distance.

Prior to accepting this return bout, Ray Arcel, Halaiko's manager, stipulated that Furr must post a $200 forfeit as guarantee of his ability to make 147 pounds by weighing-in time on Monday.

Registrations Pour In for Tourney

A SURE sign that there is plenty of interest in The Post A. A. U. basketball championships scheduled to open February 18 at Heurich's gym is seen in the number of registrations pouring into the office of E. Joseph Aronoff, chairman of the registration committee, at the Boys Club of Washington, 230 C street northwest.

Some of the teams, however, appear to have forgotten one of the most important standing rules relative to the playing of school and college athletes, and Registrar Aronoff yesterday issued a warning to all challengers for honors in the 100-pound, 115-pound, 130-pound, 145-pound, boys' and girls' unlimited classes.

Must Have Permission.

"All players who played or were members of their school and college squads during the 1935-36 season must present to the registration committee of the District of Columbia A. A. U. written permission from their proper school authorities to qualify for play with the teams by which they have been entered in The Post A. A. U. championship tournament," he said.

"Failure to recognize their names may result in their acceptance by the registration committee, but undoubtedly will cause their disqualification, as well as the disqualification of the entire team, with which they have entered the tournament on the presumption that team coaches and managers are cognizant of their status."

Some Dismissed.

Chairman Aronoff pointed out that some players have been dismissed from college and high school teams because they played on independent teams without permisison of their school authorities.

The tournament committee, headed by Winfree Johnson, is anxious to discourage the practice of teams running in college and high school players just before the start of the tournament, when the kid, who works hard all season, deserves to play in the all-important games.

Only nine more days remain before entries close. They should be sent to the Boys Club of Washington, February 14 is the deadline.

A. A. U. registrations expiring on or before March 10 must be renewed before February 15.

St. Alban's Is Beaten By Georgetown Prep

Georgetown Prep's basketball fortunes continued on the upgrade yesterday with a 26-15 victory over the strong St. Alban's five. It was the third victory in four starts for the Little Hoyas over Washington prep school teams.

The game was played at the American University gymnasium, with Georgetown Prep getting off to a fast start and a big lead which it never relinquished.

The Georgetown Prep Juniors made it two wins for the day with a 29-13 win over the St. Alban's Juniors.

Md. Will Enter Small Squad In Games

Mile Relay Team to Vie in Philadelphia Event Next Wednesday.

HOPEFUL of winning a portion of national track recognition, Coach Gearly Eppley, of Maryland, yesterday announced that he will enter a small squad including his crack mile relay team in the Junior A. A. U. indoor championship games next Wednesday at Philadelphia.

Eppley is confident the Old Line spikesters will return home with at least one championship if his relay runners are on par with past performances, and thinks his men have excellent chances of winning in two other events.

Coleman Headley, anchor man of the relay quartet, will seek the 1,000 meters crown, while Warren Evans, relay lead-off man, and Bill Thies, a rookie sophomore, are entered in the 600 meters event. The fourth individual entry is Joe Ryan, a dash man, who will test his speed against a select field in the 50-meter dash.

There is a possibility that Holbert ("Peewee") Evans, Warren's brother, will compete in the sprints, but he will run unattached.

The Old Line boxing squad will experience a slight face-lifting in practice this week in preparation for Friday's fights with North Carolina. Blair Smith or Ed Pearson may be shoved into the 165-pound class, replacing Harold Kelly who was knocked out by a Virginia opponent last week. Both are inexperienced but probably will get an opportunity nevertheless.

Coach Jack Harmony is trying to keep Walter Webb in the 135-pound class but finds it difficult with his charge barely able to make the weight. Webb was eligible by the smallest of margins last week and Harmony is afraid that too much boiling out may detract from his effectiveness.

In basketball, Coach Burt Shipley probably will be without the services of Vic Willis, elongated center who was injured in the Duke game last week. Three stitches were required to close a nasty gash in Willis' lip. Ben Allen will get the center assignment if Willis is unable to play.

4 Teams Break Columbia Pin Record

WITH a splurge of heavy maple-spilling unexcelled in the history of the Columbia Heights League, the high team mark of 1,821, held by the Vincent Barbers, was exceeded by four teams last night at the Arcadia drives. Arcadia topped the former record by one pin in a three-game lacing administered to Logan Motor; Galliher & Huguely topped Arcadia's total by a single stick in whitewashing Bovello; Highway Engineers collected a total of 1,833 in supplanting Hesskick Coal for the No. 1 position with an odd-game decision, and the Ambassador Laundry landed the new season record, shooting 1,873 in collaring Vincent Barbers.

The result of the night's matches put the Highway Engineers on top of the league with a one-game advantage over Hessick Coal. Galliher & Huguely is running third.

The fast-stepping Shamrock girls hit a snag in their flight toward the championship of the Washington Ladies League last night at the Recreation alleys, bowing three times to the Colonials. Four games behind the pacesetters before a match with the Cardinals, the Columbians with three wins pulled up to within one game of the lead. The El Gees humbled the Vee Bees to retain third place and the Beequees took two from the Nomads.

Rena Levy featured the individual scoring, shooting a 123-game and 354 set to aid the Columbians in chalking up high total pinfall with 1,570. The Beequees shot 580 for the best game effort.

Two free entries for the Lorraine Gulli Sweepstakes, which will be rolled at the Convention Hall on February 22, were awarded for the two highest individual sets last night in the Ladies District League. Rena Levy gained a free trial for the Gulli title with 354 and Marjorie Smith's 326 was good for the other.

Benares, Absconder Pay $1,459 Double

Fortune Won By Six Men, Woman

Gallant Gay Triumphs by Length in Day's Feature Race.

By Walter Haight.

A Staff Correspondent.

HIALEAH, Fla., Feb. 4.—The largest daily double pay-off of the winter season here was recorded today when a mutuel of $1,459.20 was displayed on the popular twin wager. Six men and a woman composed the happy group that approached the cashier's window to exchange a $2 pasteboard for the small fortune. Valcrane, Chicago horseman; Bill Crisp, a jockey's agent; A. C. Brandt, and a Negro named William Muirrell were among the lucky ones. The middle aged woman woulr not stop giggling long enough to tell her name and she started for the parking area immediately after cashing.

Naturally a pair of surprise winners provided the key positions on the double. They were Benares, winner of the first race at $25.60, and Absconder, winner of the third at $78.40. The rather unfashionable jockey May rode Benares while the veteran Sammy Renick had the leg up on Absconder.

Far From Record

The $1,459.20 mutuel is far from the record for the "double" in Florida. The high point was reached on March 18 of last year when the combination Wanoah and Arakay paid $7,205 at Tropical Park. However, today's pay-off ranks well up in the twin-bet records as there were only 24 pay-offs in the country last year that topped the $500 mark.

After completing the "double," Jockey Renick came back to make it two straight for himself and the Brancastle Farm by taking the day's secondary feature with the Hare.

Gallant Gay, a game son of Gallian, won the Fort Dallas Park purse, the day's feature event. With Jimmy Stout, the leading rider of the meeing, in the saddle, Gallant Gay led Night Cap to the wire by a length. The latter had a like margin over Ceiling for the third money. Reaping, the favorite, held a threatening position most of the way, but wound up fourth in the field of eleven.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—MIXED PARTY, $35.70, $13.50, $7.20; SLAVE, $21.80, $11.70; CROWNED HEAD, $4.00.

MIXED PARTY outran her field to the first turn after getting away in the first flight, opened up a clear lead midway of the back stretch, bore out at the stretch turn, but held on gamely to withstand SLAVE. Latter gained steadily when put to a drive in the last half-mile and was wearing the winner down approaching the finish. CROWNED HEAD, taken to the outside for the first time around until reaching the home stretch, came through on the inside at the top of the stretch, but faltered in the closing furlong.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-quarter miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Won easily; place driving. Went to post at 5:40. Off at 5:42½. Winner, Mrs. Emil Denemark's ch. c. (6), by Pot Au Feu—Broomilda. Trained by B. S. Michell. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 2:03 1-5.

WARD IN CHANCERY forced to better position outside after being slow to get started, finished stoutly. WHIPPERCRACKER, shuffled back going to first turn, obtained room inside in last half and finished gamely.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—ROCKWOOD, $5.80, $3.60, $2.90; PERLETTE, $8.60, $6.00; LUCKY DUCKY, $10.70.

ROCKWOOD, taken to outside after acting unruly, was rushed hard to gain command in the opening furlong, shook off LUCKY DUCKY and held on strongly to fend off PERLETTE. Latter, in tight quarters in the opening sixteenth, luckily obtained racing room midway of the stretch drive, swerved out badly all during the closing furlong, but came strongly under punishment. LUCKY DUCKY raced straight and true on the inside and continued gamely to the finish.

THIRD RACE—Six and a half furlongs. Purse, $1,200; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:26. Off at 3:28½. Winner, Branncastle Farm's b. c. Two-dollar mutuels paid—ABSCONDER, $78.40, $38.80, $13.30; LOLSCHEN, $3.80, $3.30; MISS BAM, $4.90.

ABSCONDER, going in improved fashion and holding a forward position from the start, rallied willingly to wear down MISS TROPHY, then held on strongly to withstand LOLSCHEN's closing rush. Latter, rated on the outside of the leaders, moved up easily when put to a drive and was wearing the winner down nearing the finish. MISS BAM, squeezed back shortly after the start, swung to the outside in the last five-sixteenths and finished full of run.

FOURTH RACE—Six and a half furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:07. Off at 4:09½. Winner, Branncastle Farm's b. c. A. R. Graustein Resigns as Head Of Int. Paper

R. J. Cullen, President of Subsidiaries, His Successor.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Feb. 4.—R. J. Cullen was elected today president of International Paper Co. to succeed Archibald P. Graustein, who resigned. Cullen has been for some time president of Southern Kraft Corporation and other paper subsidiaries of International Paper & Power Corporation.

At the request of the board, Graustein has agreed to assist the company in the transition period, an announcement by the directors said. Graustein also resigned as director of International Paper & Power Co. of Boston.

The top holding company was organized in 1928 to bring the vast interests of the International Paper Co., largest paper-making enterprise in the world, and the New England Power Association under a closely knit management.

Subsidiaries own extensive properties throughout New England, Southeastern United States, the Middle West and Canada. In addition to their power and paper properties, a vast transportation system was maintained to move products to the market.

Graustein a Lawyer.

Graustein, who was born in Cambridge, Mass., in 1885, practiced law in Boston for many years before being elected head of I. P. & P. His home is in New York City.

In usually well-informed Wall Street circles it was said there had been disagreement within the organization for some time over questions of financial policy. On December 2, 1935, International Hydroelectric System, a subsidiary, announced it had relinquished voting control of New England Power Association.

This was done in an effort to obtain exemption from the holding company provisions of the public utility act. At that time the rights to vote the New England Power Association shares was turned over to voting trustees, but International Hydroelectric kept its property rights in the shares, including the right to receive dividends.

Graustein has been a prominent figure in financial circles for several years. In 1929 he married Clare Patton, former Broadway dance hall hostess.

Com. Credit Net, $6.03 a Share, Sets New Peak

Volume of Receivables, $525,999,303, Also a Record.

Baltimore, Feb. 4.—Commercial Credit Co. reported today that last years was the best in its history. Its volume of receivables acquired was the largest for any one year, amounting to $525,999,303.11 compared with $377,959,030.77 for 1934 and $442,087,262.18 for 1929, its best previous year. After charging off and providing ample reserves for all known losses and doubtful items, net income from operations available for consolidated interest and discount charges was $10,491,748.36 compared with $7,682,972.44 for 1934. Consolidated interest and discount charges were earned 7.75 times for 1935 compared with 5.61 times for 1934.

Net income from operations, after providing for Federal and other taxes, credited to earned surplus was $7,800,133.10, a new high record, compared with $5,391,132.51 for 1934 and $6,254,142.23 for 1929. After payment of all dividends, aggregating $1,260,843.38 on capital stock outstanding during 1935 having priority over the common stock after deducting $3,117.75, income on minority common shares of subsidiaries, there remained $6,537,171.99, or $6.03 per share, applicable to the average number of shares of common stock outstanding, upon which dividends were paid during 1935. Stocks Overcome Profit-Taking in Active Advance; Railroad Bonds Firm.

New York, Feb. 4.—After absorbing scattered profit taking early in the session, stocks advanced vigorously in most sections today. Weakness in General Motors following failure of action on an extra dividend was unsettling to the motor group, but rails took over the leadership. Grains were steady, May wheat closing unchanged to an eighth higher. The gold currencies continued well above the level that offers a profit on exports of gold from the United States. Speculative rail bonds and U. S. Governments were strong.

American Telephone rose more than 2 points to the highest level since 1931. Other good gainers included Air Reduction, American Can, American Tobacco, Case, Deere, Penney, Radio preferred B, Westinghouse and Western Union. U. S. Gypsum crossed $100 for the first time since it was listed in 1931.

General Motors opened more than a point lower and continued further before finding support. Chrysler lost a fraction. Rubber stocks rose sharply. Metals were quiet and lower, and chemicals, foods and utilities irregularly lower. Amusements and steels were firm.

Standard Oil of California advanced to the highest ground in three years on declaration of an extra dividend. Socony-Vacuum duplicated the best price in two years when the dividend rate was lifted. Oils as a group were lifted to new high territory.

Rails were at their best since 1934, special gains appearing in Delaware & Hudson, Santa Fe, Baltimore & Ohio, Central, Great Northern, Nickel Plate and Union Pacific.

Money markets are throwing no great light on actual business activity, but the activity of the banks is by no means as negligible as certain Government officials would have us believe. Loans of all sorts continue to decline, but the use of Government funds continues at a high level, and such money is supplied by the banks, mostly as three months loans. The best clew to the revival of business that can be obtained from bank statements is in deposits. Demand and Government deposits are rising without interruption, and the use of them also is increasing, as is shown by the growth in volume of debits to individual accounts.

Buying Securities.

Member bank loans and investments rose $26,000,000 more in the week ended January 29, but bank operations were largely confined to further purchases of securities. Their loans receded in all categories. In addition to a $39,000,000 drop in securities loans there was a fall of $7,000,000 in bills and commercial paper, $1,000,000 in real estate loans, $2,000,000 in loans to banks and $25,000,000 in miscellaneous and commercial loans.

The interesting feature of the securities purchases was that $36,000,000 of the $100,000,000 invested in the week was placed in securities other than governmental. Since the aggregate of new issues in the two weeks ended February 1 was some $160,000,000, it would appear that banks found certain new issues of industrial bonds—such as Republic and Inland Steel—attractive from an income standpoint. In the two weeks offerings of State and municipals, heretofore the banks' favorite investments outside of Treasury issues, were modest in volume. No doubt there was also some scattered buying of old securities for bank account in the open market during the final week of January.

Commodities.

The general commodity market situation was little affected by the request of President Roosevelt that the tobacco, cotton and potato control acts be abandoned. Their existence is little more than an impudence, now that the AAA has been knocked in the head, and without that authority it would have been impossible to enforce them. Clearing the way will make a virtue out of a necessity, for it will make easier the formation of a new plan of help to the farmers. Few believe that the farmers won't get a bonus in one form or another, but still fewer who have studied the problem believe that even the remnants of foreign markets can be retained unless some downward revision on price control takes place and unless a speedy end be put to plans for making agricultural products scarce.

Trend of Times.

An interesting commentary on the trend of the times is the decision of the Woolworth Company to abandon its traditional 5 and 10 cent price tags. Although in recent years the company has added 20-cent items and experimented with 40-cent sales, the stores have remained predominantly 5 and 10 cent sellers. Lifting of the fixed prices may not mean a great deal at the moment, although doubtless the company sees a chance for an immediate expansion in business. What many will see of significance in the action is a preparation for inflation. Any product with a fixed price has a hard time when the monetary unit depreciates.

Socony-Vacuum.

Further evidence of the growing profits in the oil industry was given by the announcement shortly before noon today of an increase from 15 to 20 cents in the quarterly dividend rate of Socony-Vacuum. Apparently the market had a hunch of a higher rate for the shares opened on a 10,000-share block at 16¾, a new high price since 1934. Several other oil company stocks brought new high prices.

Proxies.

It is difficult to find a proxy call that conforms fully with the SEC regulations for adequate disclosure of the purposes of the meeting and the interests soliciting the vote. Possibly corporations sense the SEC's doubts of its constitutional authority in this matter. More likely it is hard to learn new tricks. One thing that faithful attendants at many stockholders' meetings will be spared this year is the routine of a motion to approve the acts of the board and executives for the previous year. Rather than outline those acts in the call for proxies, the managers will waive the formality in meetings, heeding at last the advice of their lawyers that if they had regular authority to perform these acts, approval of the performance was unnecessary. If they had gone outside their normal authority, a vote of approval at the annual meeting would not have saved them from later suits by stockholders.

Treasury Management.

On January 16 the Treasury began to draw unneeded cash balances from the member banks into its Reserve bank balances which had been swollen at the last financing date by some $600,000,000 cash payments for new securities. Since then the Treasury has drawn $181,000,000 from its war loan deposit accounts, thereby heading off a probable rise of that amount in excess reserves. An informed bank executive describes the Treasury's calls upon member banks as "a gentle experiment in doing something about excess reserves" and points out that before they can be reduced they must be prevented from going higher. Logic would seem to require that the Treasury do something else after it had used up its balances in member banks. That something else might be a large issue of securities of new cash, further reducing excess reserves. The beauty of the system, if it is such, is that the Reserve banks, which might be expected to manage the money market, do not have to do a thing but watch what is going on.

Big Oil Units Plan to Spend $215,000,000

Budget of 7 Companies Will Go to Plant Improvement.

New York, Feb. 4.—Seven large oil companies will spend $215,000,000 in plant improvement and modernization in 1936, according to a survey made by National Petroleum News, results of which will be given in its 516-page special issue tomorrow. Their projected expenditures are $41,000,000 more than in 1934. The proposed improvements represent a building program equal to 5 per cent of the net capital investment of these companies. In other words, for each dollar of investment they will spend 5 cents in 1936 in plant improvement and expansion.

These expenditures will be distributed in all branches of the oil industry. Where the companies reported the distribution of their proposed expenditures it was found that three companies will spend over $27,000,000 on expansion of production facilities. Four will spend $28,000,000 for refinery construction, and four will spend $16,000,000 for improvement of bulk plants, service stations and other marketing facilities.

Oil's investment of $13,276,000,000 compares with $12,600,000,000 invested in electric light and power in this country, $10,000,000,000 in coal mining, $5,000,000,000 in hotels, $4,500,000,000 in iron and steel industry, $4,700,000,000 in telephone companies, $1,100,000,000 in manufactured gas, and $2,000,000,000 in the automotive industry.

More than 4 per cent of the Nation's wealth is invested in the oil industry. Taxes paid and collected by the industry total more than a billion dollars yearly, or about 11 per cent of the country's total annual tax bill.

Sears, Roebuck Sales Largest In Six Years

Total of $417,080,463 in Fiscal Year Is Gain of 23 Per Cent.

For the thirteenth period just ended, January 2 to January 29, 1936, Sears's sales totaled $25,844,816, an increase of 18 per cent compared with the corresponding 1935 period.

F. W. Woolworth Plans New Price Policy

New York, Feb. 4 (AP).—The New York Sun says a new price policy for the F. W. Woolworth five-and-ten chain store organization will be inaugurated soon, permitting the handling of merchandise of value beyond the 20-cent limit.

The company, the newspaper says, is abandoning a fixed maximum price, heretofore 20 cents an article. Hereafter top prices will be determined periodically by the management, which will raise the current limit on prices when it is felt good business conduct demands it.

Crude Oil Output Declines in Week

Tulsa, Okla., Feb. 4 (AP).—Daily average crude oil production in the United States for the week ended February 1 was 2,830,224 barrels, a decline of 17,685 barrels, the Oil and Gas Journal reports.

Virtually every major area except Louisiana showed a decline for the week. Production in Louisiana advanced 9,848 barrels to 188,663.

New York, Feb. 4 (AP).—The announcement in the London silver market today that dealings in metal for future delivery would be resumed tomorrow was seen in Wall Street as an indication that the world's principal market for the white metal was at length digging out from the storm of selling which engulfed it several weeks ago.

London, Feb. 4.—Business was quieter on the stock exchange today. Transatlantic issues held active and firm on favorable Wall Street news, while aviation, amusement and oil shares were supported by speculators. Gold mining issues received attention from continental traders, but other sections were uncertain. The market closed irregular.

Paris—The greatest activity in months prevailed on the bourse today and prices were firm despite profit-taking in French industrials, which were heavy. International issues and rentes advanced. The closing tone was irregular.

Berlin—A quiet close was registered on the bourse today after prices had opened uncertain and fluctuated narrowly.

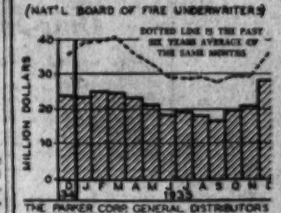
1935 Fire Losses Lowest on Record



Boston, Mass., Feb. 4.—Fire losses increased in each of the last three months of 1935, resulting in a December loss 17 per cent greater than the year previous. In spite of this, however, losses for the entire year 1935 were 6 per cent less than 1934 losses and 18 per cent below 1933. In fact, last year sustained the smallest year's losses since these records were first published in 1929.

Steel Giants Turn Deficits Into Profits

First Nine Companies Reporting Show Net of $32,151,840.

By the Associated Press.

Cleveland, Feb. 4.—The Magazine Steel said today that the first nine companies of the blast furnace, steel mill and rolling mill category to report their earnings for 1935 showed an aggregate net profit of $32,151,840. The same companies, in 1934, piled up a deficit of $14,147,710.

"Since these nine represent 47,638,430 gross tons of steel ingot capacity, or 68 per cent of the country's total of 68,849,717 tons," the magazine added, "the indicated net for the entire steelmaking industry last year is $46,800,000. This is $1.40 per ton of ingots actually produced."

Steel said of the integrated producers reporting to date, "every one has emerged from the red of the depression."

The United States Steel Corporation, which lost almost $22,000,000 in 1934, concluded 1935 with a net of $1,084,917, it reported, and Bethlehem Steel Corporation, second largest producer, increased its profit from $350,971 in 1934 to $4,291,253 in 1935.

Republic Steel Corporation, third largest producer, "bettered its position by almost $8,000,000 last year when it turned in a profit of $4,455,734, including the experience of the Corrigan McKinney Steel Co. for the last quarter," the magazine said.

Policeman Charges Libel; Asks $25,000

Julian J. Antoine, a member of the Metropolitan Police Department, yesterday filed suit in the District Supreme Court for damages of $25,000 from the Hot Shoppes, Inc., 5103 Georgia avenue northwest, and Martin Luther Dillinger, manager.

The suit, filed by Attorney Dorsey K. Shutt, complained the policeman had been "maliciously prosecuted, libeled, and falsely arrested" in February, 1935, when he was arrested on a charge of drunkenness. He was subsequently cleared of all charges when an examination by a police surgeon showed him to be sober.

Baby's Mother Killed; Relative Gets $7,000

Mrs. Marietta Myers, administratrix of the estate of her 3-year-old granddaughter, Evelyn Pflieger, yesterday was awarded damages of $7,000 from J. B. Spund, driver of an automobile that allegedly struck and killed the baby's mother, Mrs. Virginia Pflieger, December 20, 1933.

Mrs. Pflieger alighted from a street car at Connecticut avenue and Porter street, and had started to cross the street when she was struck. Her baby, then only a few months old, was awaiting her return, the mother having gone shopping for Christmas toys. Attorney Henry Walter, appearing for Mrs. Myer, who is employed by the District Government as an officer of the Training School at Laurel, Md., said the baby had been adopted by the grandmother following its mother's death.

Perpetrators of a strange hoax—a spurious message telling of the "death" of a General Accounting Office auditor in the Canal Zone—were trailed yesterday by Federal investigators.

Accounting office employes immediately took a copy of the message to Mrs. Moffett, mother of three children, at her home in East Falls Church, Va.

Husband Reassures Wife.

Mrs. Moffett was told efforts were being made to check the accuracy of the message. Seven hours later she was informed her husband was alive and well in the Canal Zone, where he was sent recently to check War Department accounts.

"I naturally was awful worried, but I didn't believe he was dead," Mrs. Moffett told reporters. "Nobody knows the agony I suffered."

Filed at Airport Here.

The message containing the spurious report, investigators learned, was filed Friday night in a Washington Airport telegraph office.

An official who declined to permit the use of his name said:

"It was a low-down trick on the part of someone. It is being investigated by the proper officials of the Government. We already have a fairly good idea of who did it."

The Federal agency in charge of the investigation was not made known.

Moffett, a veteran accounting office employe, was sent to the Canal Zone only a few weeks ago. Mrs. Moffett received a cheerful letter from him the day before the hoax was perpetrated.

Trial of Peers by Peers Disapproved by Lords

London, Feb. 4 (AP).—The ancient right of a peer of the British realm to be tried by his fellow peers in the House of Lords may be abolished.

The lords, by a vote of 45 to 24, carried a motion today by Viscount Sankey, former lord chancellor, that "the present system of trial of peers by peers has outlived its usefulness."

Lord Sankey indicated a bill would be introduced to abolish the procedure. His supporters contended the method involved waste of money and violated the prinicple that all are equal before the law.

Armory Conference Held.

Staunton, Va., Feb. 4.—Staunton, Harrisonburg, Clifton Forge and Covington municipal officials conferred here yesterday with P. B. Representatives of the four cities were told to get definite propositions from their respective councils and submit them to WPA officials by Thursday.

200 Give Away Twenty Millions To Escape Tax

By the Associated Press.

More than 200 corporation executives gave away some $20,000,000 in stocks in December, escaping higher gift tax rates which became effective January 1.

Reports to the Securities Commission made public last night disclosed that, including December's $20,000,000, about $85,000,000 in securities gifts were made since records were first kept in March, 1935. The bulk of the contributions followed initiation of the tax program.

Walter P. Chrysler, automobile manufacturer, led the December list with a gift of 40,000 shares of common stock of Chrysler Corporation, with a current market value of about $3,800,000. His gift was the second highest so far recorded by an individual. John D. Rockefeller, jr., reported gifts of $27,000,000 last June.

Recipients of the gifts ordinarily are not shown in the reports, which are required under the securities exchange act to show all transactions in the securities of their companies by directors, officers and holders of 10 per cent or more of a company's stock.

Cyrus H. McCormick, Chicago, was second in December with a gift of $1,580,000 in 24,000 shares of common stock of International Harvester Co. Of virtually the same value were gifts of 46,000 common and 15,000 of $1.50 preferred of Twentieth Century Fox Film Corporation, by Joseph M. Schenck, Beverly Hills, Calif.

Other large December gifts included: 5,530 common shares of American Stores Co., valued at $250,000, by Robert H. Crawford, Philadelphia; F. F. Curtze, Erie, Pa., 3,500 voting trust certificates for Columbian Carbon Co., common, valued at $380,000; M. S. Hershey, Hershey, Pa., 5,000 of Hershey Chocolate Corporation, common, valued at $400,000; A. Ward Ford, Binghamton, N. Y., 4,000 common of International Business Machines Co., valued at $750,000.

George B. Alvord, Hartford, Conn., 12,000 common of Torrington Co., valued at $1,140,000; Waldo A. Avery, Detroit, 7,000 common of U. S. Gypsum Co., valued at $880,000; Adeline R. Shumway, New York, 10,000 common of Ritter Dental Manufacturing Co., valued at $290,000.

Gifts of $850,000 in the common stock of J. J. Newberry Co. were made by four members of that family—4,600, 850, 500 and 5,000, respectively, by Charles T., Edgar A., J. J., and Myrtle H. Newberry, all of New York.

Slayer Waiting Death Applies for His Bonus

Jackson, Miss., Feb. 4 (AP).—William Clark Mitchell, 53-year-old World War veteran, filed his application for the bonus last night, but there was some doubt if he would live to receive the money.

Mitchell is confined in the death cell of the Hinds County Jail, under sentence to hang March 13 for murder.

Mitchell was convicted of murder in Yalabousha County Circuit Court ten days ago in connection with the robbery and slaying of a Negro, whose body was placed in a house and burned. He was believed to be the first white man ever sentenced to death in Mississippi for killing a Negro.

Supreme Court Review Sought In Beard Case

U.S. Moves to Cancel Bonds of 13 Convicted of Conspiracy.

Attorneys for Sam R. Beard, alleged former head of a race track information service here, yesterday moved quickly to obtain a review of his conviction by the United States Supreme Court. Beard and twelve of his associates were convicted of conspiring to violate District gambling laws, and their conviction was upheld by the United States Court of Appeals Monday.

John J. Sirica and Maurice McInerney, attorneys for the defendants, announced they would first press for a rehearing in the appellate court and if denied that would apply to the United States Supreme Court for a writ of certiorari which would test the legality of the convictions, provided the Supreme Court granted the application.

Beard and his companions, now at liberty on bonds aggregating $34,000, were faced with another attack yesterday when Roger Robb, assistant United States attorney, said he would demand that their bonds be canceled and that they be called upon to begin service of their sentences. Beard was given a term of from two to six years and the others were sentenced to from one to two years.

A hearing on Robb's motion is set for Thursday morning in the Court of Appeals.

The charge against the 13 is that they conspired to violate the gaming laws by disseminating race track information from a gigantic battery of telephones and loud speakers in the Mather Building. The place was raided by police and some 60-odd phones were seized.

Mothers to Tell School Board Of Cold Rooms

Mothers who refused to allow their children to remain in the John Eaton School yesterday and Monday because of cold rooms and corridors will carry their protest to the Board of Education this afternoon.

A letter demanding District officials provide adequate heating facilities and relieve overcrowding at the school will be read to the board by Mrs. W. E. Hall, of 2730 Thirty-sixth place, representing the Parent-Teacher Association of the school.

Whether this protest will be turned into a "strike" similar to that at the Blair School last winter when mothers forced District officials to repair the heating plant, will depend on the attitude of the board. A meeting of the Parent-Teacher Association to consider further action will be held Monday night.

Faulty heating at the school has been protested since 1923, Mrs. S. Dolan Donohue, president of the Parent-Teacher Association, pointed out. Monday, several mothers visiting the school for the opening of the new term refused to allow their children to remain because of the cold. Yesterday other mothers joined in keeping their children at home.

The lack of adequate heating facilities at Eaton is not as serious as were conditions at the Blair School, Mrs. Donohue admitted. However, both she and Mrs. Hall said they would continue to keep their children at home if the cold spell was unbroken. Other mothers, it was indicated, will be guided by their action.

Will Provides $5,000 For Flowers on Grave

Baltimore, Feb. 4 (AP).—Flowers will be placed on the grave of Charles W. Sonnenburg every week.

Sonnenburg, in his will filed for probate today, left a trust fund of $5,000, and stipulated that it be used to place the flowers on his grave. The remainder of his estate, the value of which was not determined, was left to his housekeeper. On her death, it will go to the Little Sisters of the Poor and the Salvation Army.

Slayer Search Dropped; Bullets Hint at Suicide

London, Feb. 4 (AP).—A police search for a supposed killer who Arthur Mead, a butcher, said shot him was abandoned today when police discovered cartridges in Mead's home which fit the death gun.

On his deathbed, Mead said he had been shot in a railroad train by a stranger.

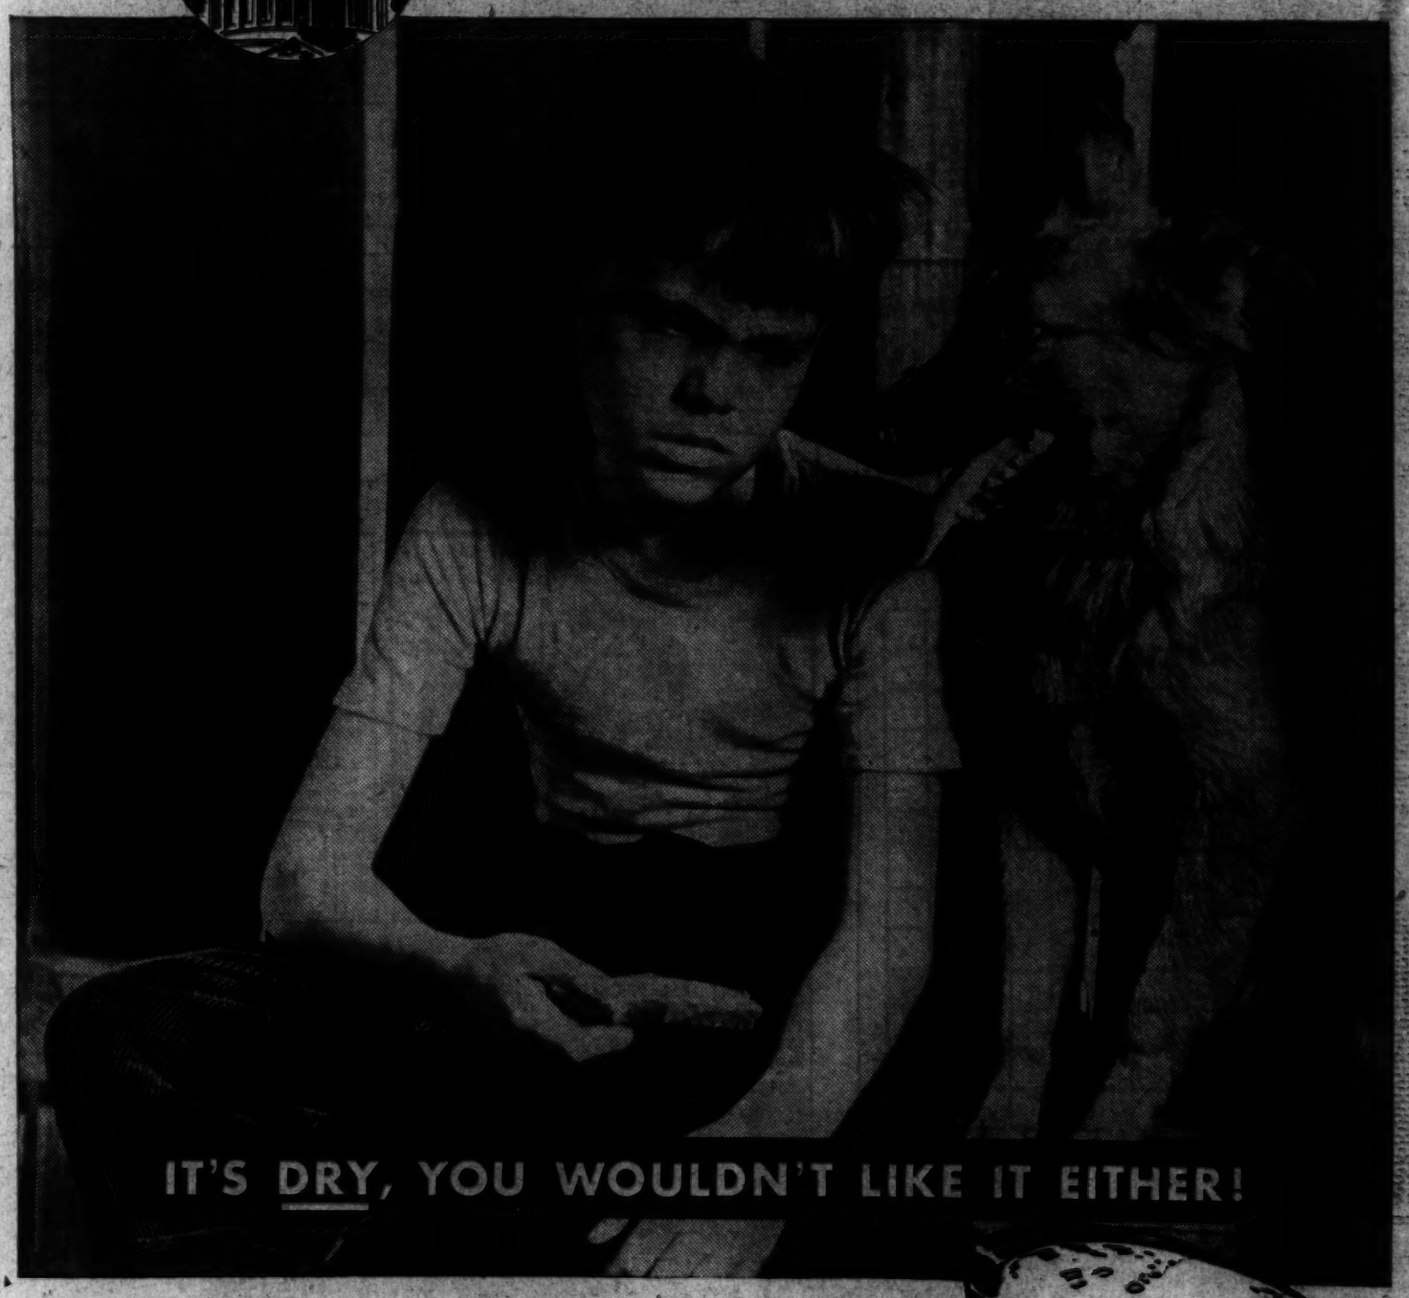
KILL THIS Tax

Special interests want Congress to put an additional tax of 5¢ to 10¢ on every pound of Margarine. These tax bills should be killed. They are H. R. 9672 by Culkin of New York, H. R. 9865 by Boileau of Wisconsin, and H. R. 10671 by Pierce of Oregon.



ACCORDING to the United States Department of Agriculture the average American citizen should eat at least 36 pounds of table fats every year. Actually we, as a people, consume of these fats only 21 pounds per capita, of which 18 pounds are creamery butter and 3 pounds are Margarine. Margarine, made under Government supervision from edible oils, fats, milk and salt, contains exactly the same energy value as butter (3,500 calories per pound) yet it sells for only half the price of butter. The proposed tax will increase the cost of this wholesome food product from five cents to ten cents per pound, and will fall heaviest on those people who can least afford to have their living cost increased.
